MISS ELLA DUNCAN

Deputy Circuit Clerk, and daughter of Circuit Clerk J. W. Duncan. She is an enthusiastic Democrat.

If Sapp's followers in Louisville will commit burglary and arson to defeat their opponents in a party primary election, what crime will they not commit in order to defeat the Democrats in a general election?

THE Republicans composing the convention that assembled in Burlington on last county court day evidently had not heard of Sapp's primary election held in Louisville, recently, in which burglary, arson and many minor offenses cut such an important figure, or they would not have concluded resolution No. 3 without condemning Sappism in all its forms.

Union, Ky., August 13th, 1901.

It having been circulated that my daughter was in the "shirt waist" party that disturbed public worship at Burlington on the night of August 4 h, I wish to state that said is a mistake, as she was at her home that entire day and night, and therefore could not have been connected with the party of thoughtless young people.

On the trial, the running horse picked him up near the quarter, which Cresceus made in 31½ seconds. He went the half in 1:03, to three-quarters in 1:35¼, and to the wire in 2:06¼. There was faint applause when the time was posted.

Neither the track nor the weather was favorable to record-breaking speed.

Washington, Aug. 9.—This government has refused the request of the governor of Hawaii that the United States buy its coffee supplies for the army and navy from the Hawaiian coffee growers. WARSHIP WISCONSIN.

The Big Vessel May Be Sent to the Isthmus of Panama.

Should the Wisconsin Be Sent This Will Be Practically Her First Active Duty—Will Protect American Interests.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Just before the navy department closed Thursday an order was sent to Capt. Geo. G. Reiter, of the battleship Wisconsin, now at Anacortes, near the Puget Sound naval station, to proceed at once to San Francisco, from which point the battleship will be dispatched to Panama, in case the state department requests the presence of a warship on the Pacific side of the isthmus. This action was taken after Acting Secretary Hackett had received from the state department a communication from Mr. J. Edwards Simmons, of New York, president of the Panama Railway Co., setting forth the seriousness of situation on the isthmus, and suggesting that warships be sent both to the Atlantic and the Pacific sides. Mr. Adee, acting secretary of state, replied to Mr. Simmons that the gunboat Machias had been ordered to Colon, on the Atlantic side, but it was the view of officials, during the early part of the day, both at the state and navy departments, that there was no present necessity for sending a ship to the Pacific side.

For this reason Mr. Adee made no request for another ship, but as a matter of information he transmitted the letter of Mr. Simmons to the acting head of the navy department.

In view of Mr. Simmons' letter, which was construed to be a request for the protection of American interests, it was deemed best to have the battleship Wisconsin at San Francisco, where she can proceed without delay to the isthmus in case she is needed.

The Wisconsin is one of the finest ships of the new navy, and, if she should be sent, this will be practically her first active duty, as she has been in commission only a short time. She has a displacement of 11,500 tons, is heavily armored, and has a main battery of four 13-inch breech-loading rifles and 14 6-inch rapid-fire guns, which, with her second battery, makes her one of the most formidable ships afloat. Her complement is about 500 officers and men, including about 75 marines.

TOWN LOTS IN LAWTON.

They Are Selling For a Figure Which Exceeds the Most Confident Predictions.

Fort Sill, O. T., Aug. 10.—Town lots in Lawton are selling for a figure which exceeds the most confident predictions. The average for 55 lots sold was $300. The first corner in the block north of the land office sold for $600, and the average for the first five lots sold was $360. A combination was formed to change the business center of the town to the street running one block north of the court house and land office. The two national banks bid for lots along this street, and the lot on the corner was sold to the First national bank, now doing business in a small tent, for $950. But the effort to stampede the town failed, for the price of lots increased as the land office block was approached. In two days the two national banks have received deposits aggregating more than half a million dollars.

The most confident among those who predicted a great future for Lawton placed the aggregate amount of the sale of town lots at a maximum figure of $200,000.

WANT PROTECTION.

Hawaiians Ask That a Duty Be Imposed on All Coffee Imported From Other Countries.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The interior department has received a resolution passed by the Hawaiian legislature praying that congress impose a duty on all coffee imported from other countries, "and in this way protect that industry in Hawaii and other parts of the United States."

The resolution will be forwarded to congress at the opening of next session. It says that the coffee industry in Hawaii is now in a depressed condition, and is threatened to be abandoned on account of low prices and removal of protective duties on all coffee imported into the republic of Hawaii before the annexation and the large amounts imported into the United States from Brazil, Mexico, Central America and other countries free of duty. The resolution refers to the large coffee area, the great abount of American capital invested there and inability to compete with the low prices where cheap labor is employed as in the countries mentioned.

He was commissioned brigadier general in 1863. He commanded the outer defenses of Mobile bay at Fort Morgan, and with 400 men held Farragut's fleet at bay for two weeks. Gen. Page was a brother-in-law of Charles Lee, attorney general in Washington's administration, and of "Light Horse" Harry Lee, the father of Robert E. Lee.

VENEZUELA INVADED.

Colombian Troops Reported to Have Crossed the Border.

Neither of the Governments Involved Has Addressed the United States Regarding the Troubles on the Isthmus.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The Colombian legation had no news to confirm the report of a new Colombian invasion of Venezuela. Mr. Herran, the first secretary of legation, who is now in charge during Dr. Silva's absence, said:

"The point at which an invasion is now feared is near the border land in the vicinity of Meta river, south of the Lake of Maracaibo."

The Colombian minister of war is Gen. Gonzales Valencia, who has a good record as a fighter, and has rendered distinguished service during the guerilla warfare of a year past, and Mr. Herran thought it quite likely that he had been called upon to lead the army of Colombia. Mr. Herran is expecting almost hourly to hear from the Colombian consul general at New York, and also hopes for some news to shed light on the situation on the isthmus from the incoming Colombian mail, which is expected soon to arrive.

Mr. Herran discussed generally the ability of Colombia to cope in an actual war with Venezuela. He pointed out that Colombia has a population of 5,000,000 against 3,000,000 of Venezuela, and an army of about 40,000 men, who have been for the most part in active service against revolutionary bands for the last year.

He expressed his earnest hope that a condition of actual war would not result from the present troubles, but believed his country to be fully able to take care of herself in that emergency.

As far as known neither of the governments involved has addressed the United States government concerning the troubles on the isthmus, or has there been any occasion for this government to address either of them in reference to the difficulty.

If traffic on the isthmus should be stopped it probably would bring about an inquiry by the United States government to the government of Colombia as to the ability of the latter to cope with the situation, for the primary duty is on Colombia, and only when she fails will the United States step in. When a similar trouble arose in 1885 the United States did not act until the Colombian government requested action, making it plain that the trouble had got beyond the power of its authorities.

LAND LOTTERY.

Contest Suits Against Jas. R. Woods, the First Winner in the Lawton (O. T.) District.

Fort Sill, O. T., Aug. 1.—Three additional contest suits have been started against James R. Woods, the first winner in the Lawton district land lottery, which in choosing his claim shut Miss Mattie Neals out from filing on a tract next to Lawton. A local town site company staked off Wood's entry and stretched ropes to indicate alleys and lots and gave notice of contest. These Woods displaced with the aid of an ax, but during the night 200 squatters took possession, and say they will contest to the end. Woods' attorneys have warned the squatters to move within ten days. A fourth contest was inaugurated when a placer miner's claim based on the alleged discovery of oil in the Woods' homestead was filed with the register of deeds.

THE IRELAND OF TO-DAY.

More Prosperous Than Formerly, But Its Main Lack Is in the Manufacturing Line.

Rt. Hon. James Bryce, a careful observer, and Mr. Seumas MacManus, the Irish writer, agree that Ireland to-day is enjoying comparative prosperity. The people are living better, their food is of a higher grade, the bank deposits have decreased, the farm rents are lower, and the returns from work are larger. The main reason why it does not take its place as one of the rich countries of the world is its lack of manufacturing. It exists mainly on its agriculture and its fisheries, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Ireland contains 32,337 square miles, not including the 196 little islands which add 246 square miles to the total. It is not quite so large as Indiana, and is a little larger than South Carolina. The Philippine islands are four times the size of all Ireland. Less than five years ago a commission appointed by parliament reported that there had been placed upon Ireland a taxation burden which it was unable to bear, and that something should be done. Thus came the new land act, which was a mitigation, but not a reform, of the evils.

Study of Soils.

The investigations on agricultural soils which are being conducted in this country are probably unsurpassed in quality and extent by those of any country, unless it be Russia, where a very systematic and extensive line of investigations, including a survey and classification of the soils of the whole country, has been in progress for a number of years, says the Popular Science Monthly. The work in this country has been carried on mainly by a number of the agricultural experiment stations and the divisions of soils of the national department of agriculture. The report of the field operations of the division of soils for 1899, by Prof. Milton Whitney and a number of his assistants, lately issued, is a report of progress in surveying the soils of the United States. During the year areas aggregating about 720,000 acres were studied in the field and mapped.

PARTIALLY OBEYED.

Many Steel Workers Refused to Go Out on Strike.

Strikers Intimate That There Will Be Developments Throughout the Week That Will Materially Change the Situation.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 12.—The iron masters are claiming victory in the great steel strike. They base their claim upon the refusal of the Amalgamated men at South Chicago, Joliet and May View to obey the general strike order of President Shaffer, and their success in maintaining operations in other plants where it was anticipated there would be serious trouble. The strike leaders met the claims of victory with the assertion that their cause is making satisfactory progress, and that they will show themselves masters of the situation before the contest has progressed much further. They do not conceal their disappointment at the refusal of their western brethren to join with them in the strike.

President Shaffer refused to meet the newspaper men who sought him, and kept within the seclusion of his home. The other leaders who were seen intimated that there would be developments Monday and throughout the week that would materially change the situation. They would not say, however, what they had in mind or how their cause was to gain in strength. It was said that they were counting upon strong aid from the American Federation of Labor and other organizations of union labor, but those bodies have not yet given any public indication of what they will do.

The Amalgamated association has developed great strength in the Wheeling district, and has made gains in some of the Pennsylvania districts, but it will be some hours before the lines of cleavage will be marked with sufficient clearness for a count of the men.

The steel officials were in consultation with their superintendents and district managers, and at 11 o'clock made public the result of their reports. The latter showed that South Chicago, Joliet and Bay View, at Milwaukee, had voted to stay in; that the Ohio works of the National Steel Co., at Youngstown, and the King, Gilbert & Warner plants, of the National Steel Co., at Columbus, had resumed without trouble; that the Homestead, Edgar Thompson, Duquesne, Upper and Lower Union, and Howard axle works, of the Carnegie group, employing more than 15,000 men, had resumed work without trouble; the converting and blooming mills of the National Tube Co., at McKeesport, had started without difficulty, and that Bellaire had been only partially crippled.

The fires were pulled at the Republic mill and at the Painters mill at 3 o'clock Monday morning because of lack of men. The Lindsay & McCutcheon mill in Allegheny also gave up the attempt to start.

They were also advised that the men of the Boston rolling mills at McKeesport had notified the National Tube Co. that they would go out Monday, and that while the National tube plant at McKeesport would be started in the morning it was certain that many more would go out. They were also notified that their Wheeling plants were crippled, and that it was uncertain what would be done there. Their advices also said that the Clark mill here, which has been running non-union for several days, would be started up as usual, and that there was no doubt about its successful operation. The steel officials were elated over their showing at the Carnegie plants and in Illinois, Ohio and Wisconsin, and expressed confidence in a speedy victory over the Amalgamated association.

Their advices from Mingo Junction were that the men in the Mingo plant had joined the strikers, and that the works were closed.

National Vice President Walter Larkins, of the Amalgamated association, discussing the situation Sunday night, said:

"I tell you, this question will have to be settled in some way. If not by a peaceful strike, then by legislation. If that fails, the ballot will be tried. If all else fails, I believe that it will result in an appeal to the bayonet. I tell you, there is a condition existing to-day that places this country on the eve of one of the greatest revolutions that ever could occur in the history of the world."

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 12.—The call of the national executive committee of the United Mine Workers on President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, to convene a council of the presidents and secretaries of the various national and international unions affiliated with the organization to devise plans for assisting the Amalgamated association in its struggle, will, if acted on, affect 84 national organizations, with a membership of 2,000 000 workmen.

Kingston, Aug. 12.—According to mail advices received here Sunday from Colon there was a series of engagements last week in the neighborhood of Panama, and the government has some difficulty in keeping out the insurgents. Gen. Alban, commanding the government forces, had arrived at Cartagena to gather troops for service on the isthmus.

Strict martial law is in force at Panama and Colon, the present districts of insurgent activity, and an order was issued last week in both cities announcing that all persons found under arms without permit would be shot as traitors. The same order called upon all foreign residents to furnish themselves with arms so as to act as police whenever called upon.

Two days before the steamer left Colon the insurgents stopped a passenger train near Matachin, taking 20 government officials prisoners.

REQUIEM SERVICES.

Cronberg, Aug. 12.—People flocked into Cronberg from an early hour Sunday to see the august personages who would attend the requiem service over the remains of Dowager Empress Frederick. Throughout the night and again Sunday the officers of the regiments of which the deceased was honorary colonel had stood guard over the coffin.

At 4 o'clock the roll of muffled drums announced the arrival of Emperor William and King Edward, who had driven together from Homburg. The emperor led Queen Alexandra into the church, while King Edward conducted Empress Augusta Victoria. Princess Victoria, with Crown Prince Frederick William, and a numerous suite followed.

Their majesties occupied a pew to the left of the chancel, while grouped around the chancel stood the other imperial and royal personages.

As the organ played the funeral march, Dr. Dryander advanced to the head of the coffin. The choir sang, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," and Dr. Dryander read a specially written prayer, after which Emperor William's eldest four sons stepped forward with drawn swords and stood close to the coffin.

This was followed by the words of the burial service: "Dust to dust, ashes to ashes." The choir then sang the anthem, "The Spirit Sayeth They May Rest From Their Labors." Then followed the magnificent hymn, "Wenn Ich Einmal Soll Scheiden," and a beautiful rendering of "He Thou Faithful Unto Death." As the last strains died away King Edward and Queen Alexandra advanced and laid a wreath upon the coffin.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Joe Washington Put to Death By a Mob For Criminal Assault on Mrs. J. J. Clark.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 12.—Eighteen miles south of Savannah, near the Seaboard Air Line railway, the charred trunk of the body of Joe Washington, the Negro ravisher of Mrs. J. J. Clark, is all that remains to tell the story of the tragedy of Saturday night. Washington was captured at Liberty City Saturday afternoon and was brought to Way Station, near which place his crime was committed. He was carried before Mrs. Clark, who identified him positively as the Negro who had assaulted her. The proof of guilt was absolutely conclusive, and includes circumstances that scarcely can be hinted at in print.

The Negro's positive identification by his victim sealed his fate. The woman's husband was selected to apply the match. Negroes, citizens of the section of Bryan county, in which the tragedy took place, were almost a unit in approving it, and very many of them were members of the mob that carried into execution the plan of vengeance.

ANNUAL REPORT.

During the Last Fiscal Year There Were Settled 6,695 Accounts By the Navy Department.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The annual report of the auditor for the navy department shows that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, there were settled 6,695 accounts and claims. During the same period there were examined 158,658 vouchers, as against 147,436 the previous year, while the amounts allowed were $71,649,116, as against $61,971,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900. This shows an increase of more than 8 per cent. in vouchers examined over last year, and 58 per cent. over the fiscal year 1899, and an increase of allowances over last year of $12,678,115.

The decrease in the number of claims settled is attributable to the fact that in 1900 there were over 8,000 "two months' extra pay" claims settled incident to the Spanish war.

Nearly twice the number of prize claims were settled this year as there were last. The distributive lists of 22 prizes have been prepared, in which 50 vessels of the navy participated. These claims are well up to date.

Judgments, "bounty for destruction of enemy's vessels," have been received from the court of claims for Manila bay, May 1, 1898; Manzanillo, June 30 and July 18, 1898; Nipo bay, July 21, 1898, and Mariel, Cuba, July 4 and 5, 1898, in which 24 vessels are interested. The list of the first has been prepared for distribution, the remaining one are being hastened with all possible speed. The number of these claims will amount to about 6,000 all told.

The expenditures on account of prize money to captors, Spanish war, amounted to $190,218, leaving an unpended balance of $51,927.

The navy department deposit fund now amounts to $337,248, the total deposits having been $2,201,500, and the repayments $1,864,342.

The continued dry weather has cut the corn crop very short in this section. Some fields are ruined. The low bottoms along the creek will make part of a crop, is the outlook now.

One of the grandest outings of the season was the fish fry given at Landing Spring, located 1½ miles south west of Big Bone church. Those that participated in the day's pleasure, began to arrive at an early hour with 20 pounds of nice river fish, which was soon fried to a queen's taste by some expert cooks who understood the art. W. W. Grimsley and R. L. Huey, two prominent gentlemen, who saw that every thing was in good shape at the noon hour announced dinner, which, together with all the delicacies that the good ladies of the neighborhood had prepared with coffee bread etc., soon filled the inner man. There were about 75 people in attendance, who enjoyed the day until about 4 p. m., when all took their departure for home, hoping to meet again in the near future on a like occasion.

The Republicans of Boone county met in Mass Convention at Burlington, Kentucky, court house Monday August 5th, 1901. The Convention was called to order by T. B. Mathews, Chairman of the County Ex-Committee. The Convention then selected G. G. Hughes temporary Chairman, and Elihu Alden, temporary Secretary. On motion and second the temporary organization was made permanent. On motion and second the Chairman appointed a committee of three on Resolutions as follows: G. W. Baker, of Big Bone, J. W. Kite, of Bellevue, and J. G. Tomlin, of Walton.

Jas. Leak, for Jailer.

J. H. Stevens, for Assessor.

Committee on Resolutions offered following which was enthusiastically adopted:

Whereas, the Republican party of the State of Kentucky are entering the great campaign of 1901, in the contest for party supremacy in the General Assembly of Kentucky, and looking back upon an unsurpassed record of achievements and forward into a great field of duty and opportunity; therefore be it.

Resolved, That we, the Republican party of Boone County, in Convention assembled, do reaffirm our faith in, and our allegiance to the principles of the Republican party, as enunciated in its platform.

2nd. We endorse the wise and patriotic administration of President William McKinley. Its acts have been established in wisdom, in patriotism, and at home and abroad it has distinctly elevated and extended the influence of the American Nation, walking paths and facing unforseen responsibilities. President McKinley has been in every situation, the true American patriot, clear in vision, strong in judgment, firm in action, always inspiring and deserving the confidence of his countrymen.

3rd. That we unqualifiedly endorse the platform, as adopted by the Republican party of the State of Kentucky, at the State convention of 1900, and we condemn in the most unmeasured terms the methods used by the Democratic party at the State election of 1900 in overthrowing the will of the people, as expressed at the polls, in counting out John W. Yerkes, and counting in J. C. W. Beckham as Governor of Kentucky, after he had been defeated at the polls by a large majority.

4th. That we favor such legislation as will reduce the salaried County officials throughout the State to reasonable limits.

5th. That the minutes of this meeting be published in the Boone County RECORDER

Elihu Alden, Secretary.
G. G. Hughes, Chairman.

A Cure for Cholera Infantum.

"Last May," says Mrs. Curtis Baker, of Bookwalter, Ohio, "an infant child of our neighbor's was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctor had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days' time the child had fully recovered, and is now (nearly a year since) a vigorous, healthy girl. I have recommended this Remedy frequently and have never known it to fail in any single instance." For sale by all druggists.

The Burlington C. M. A. ball club played the Bellevue C. M. A. club last Saturday on the grounds of the latter, and were defeated 17 to 9. The "oldest inhabitant" has to acknowledge that the drouth now prevailing breaks the record in this county, and never before did corn fields, pastures and gardens present such a destitute appearance. Some tobacco is standing the drouth very well while some is about burnt beyond recovery. The effects of the drouth will not end with the coming of rain, they will be felt all next year.

Astounded The Editor.

Editor S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat any thing. It's a grand tonic, and it's gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver trouble it's a positive guaranteed cure. Only 50c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. N. Grant's, Bellevue.

The Big Boone Fair.

From present indications the Boone Fair, August 28th-31st, will surpass all previous years, both as to exhibition and attendance. The large premiums in the catalogue are attracting the attention of both exhibitor and spectator. The amusements will be many and attractive. The Railroad Company has promised one-half fare rates from all points as far south as Lexington, shopping all trains at Erlanger and adding two extra coaches to accommodate the crowds on their return to the city, and the board will exert every effort to accommodate the people and make your time spent an enjoyable one.

Their Secret Is Out.

All Sadieville, Ky., was curious to learn the cause of the vast improvement in the health of Mrs. S. P. Whittaker, who had for a long time endured untold sugering from a chronic bronchial trouble. "It's all due to Dr. King's New Discovery," writes her husband. It completely cured her and also cured our little grand-daughter of a severe attack of Whooping Cough. It positively cures Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Bronchitis, all Throat and Lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. N. Grant's, Bellevue.

Mrs. J. J. Ferris and daughter, Miss Ruth, of Cincinnati, were guests of Mrs. J. E. Smith, a few days last week. Mr. Ferris came down on Saturday and they returned home with him Sunday. Mr. Ferris reports business in his line as especially good, and says there is more building being done in Cincinnati than at any time in the past.

Circuit Court.

The August term of the Boone Circuit court convened Monday with Judge John M. Lassing presiding and Circuit Clerk J. W. Duncan and his handsome deputy, his daughter, Miss Ella, ready to keep the record, while Sheriff Elmer Beall and his deputy, B. B. Allphin, and Jailer Adams were in their places to obey the court's commands.

The sheriff and his deputy were sworn in regard to summoning grand and petit jurors, after which the grand jury was organized as follows, James Hind being appointed foreman:

James Hind, Veroua.
W. C. Rouse, Limaburg.
Geo. E. Rouse, do.
O. P. Phippa, Burlington.
Jas. D. Mitchell, do.
James Snyder, Petersburg.
James Loder, do.
Courtney Walton, do.
W. G. Rouse, Beaver.
John Hodges, Rabbit Hash.
Jas. M. Holmes, do.
Harvey McGlasson, Bullittsville.

Judge Lassing's charge to the grand jury was not lengthy, but was clear cut, and embraced all the offenses to which the statute refers, and the charge made a most favorable impression on all who heard it. Judge Lassing appears to be at home on the bench, and disposes of business like a veteran.

Ex-Sheriff David Beall was appointed doorkeeper and sergeant-at-arms for the grand jury, and politely ushers the witnesses into the presence of that body. But he is laboring under one great disadvantage, a weak voice, and should a witness chance to be as far away as Union, when called, it is possible that he might not hear.

Attys. Joel C. Clore, of Cincinnati, and Elijah Greene, of Covington, were the only attorneys from a distance, who took part in in the proceedings the first day. Atty. Dyas arrived by the evening 'bus.

When court convened Tuesday morning the following well known attorneys, in addition to the above named, were present: Commonwealth's Atty. M. D. Gray, H. Clay White, B. F. Menifee, O. M. Rogers, F. E. Curley, John S. Gaunt, Parker Dickerson.

By 9 o'clock the petit juries were organized and are composed of the following gentlemen:

Several of the jurors are rendering their first service in that capacity.

The following fines were imposed yesterday: Claud McGuire, $20 William Craddock, $25; J. F. Blyth, $50; W. T. Steward, $25; Samuel Lancaster, $25.

The trial of Bob Finnell for placing an obstruction on a railroad, went to the jury yesterday afternoon, and it had failed to make a verdict up to the time we went to press this morning. The jury was kept together last night.

Funeral services were held at the house on the 29th, conducted by Rev. T. B. Cook, after which the remains were interred in the Hebron cemetery. He was a very promising young man, and had just passed the threshhold of manhood, being a few days over 21, and his sudden death was a great shock to the grief stricken family and his many friends. He was the fifth son of a family of ten children, most of whom are grown, and was this the first break in the family circle.

He was a great favorite among his young friends as the beautiful tribute of flowers presented by them, and covered the coffin, bear ample testimony.

May this loved and lost one prove a link in the chain that will draw all those left behind into an unbroken band in Heaven.

Lewis H. Sprague, who died on the 27th ult., of typhoid fever, passed his 21st birth day while on his death bed. He was an employe at the Cincinnati Spring Works, where, by his industry and integrity, he won the love and esteem of all with whom he came in contact, from employer to fellow workmen. He leaves, besides a father and mother, two sisters and seven brothers and scores of friends and relatives to mourn his death.

The family desire to express their thanks to the friends, who were so kind during his illness, also to the friends who contributed floral designs, and to the undertaker for his kindness.

He goes all the gaits, and up until the last State election it was supposed he was a Democrat. He is 55 years old, married and has an interesting pair of twin girls about 10 years of age.

Eugene Randall was cutting briars, one day last week, and ran into a bumble bee's nest, and to get rid of them he set fire to the nest and in an instant the whole field was ablaze, and it was impossible to put it out till it had burned over several hundred acres and called out all the neighbors in the vicinity to help. It looked as if several residences were doomed at one time, but the wind changed and saved the handsome residence of Elijah Holton, one of the finest in the county.

Notices are posted up for taking a vote on the Graded School Tax on Sept 16th. This time all the technicalities and formalities of the law have been strictly observed, and the vote in favor of the measure will be much heavier than the one given on the first occasion.

For the first time the Republican party of Walton seem to be split wide open. The Tomlin faction carried the day at the Burlington convention. Assisted by the solid colored vote of this precinct he was able to down the white element here. The colored vote lined up solidly for Tomlin and it is said saved the day for him. It is presumed that he will always feel thankful to his colored friends, and as a Democrat who believes in fairness, it is suggested to brother Tomlin that Col. Thos. Hoard is entitled to a share of the spoils of this victory. It is thought he should be allowed to name the deputy postmaster here if he would agree to name a white Republican. Of course the colored voters never get anything from the Republican party, but a casual "thank you," and this for their votes only.

Sunday morning the sharp crack of a Winchester was heard by many persons, and half an hour afterwards it was known that one of Brittenheim's horses had been shot in Norman's woods, just west of the town. An individual had been seen sitting on the fence about 50 yards from where the animal was killed. He was seen going out of the woods, shortly after the shooting, and made his way to the Klondike, where he left one of those Winchester rifles. It is known that he took the gun from the house of a friend on High Street. Albert Brittenheim, the owner of the horse, was the one who saw him sitting on the fence, and afterwards coming out of the woods. He charged the party with killing the horse, which the man denied, saying he had not been in the woods. Albert told him that he saw him sitting on the fence before the shot was fired, and coming out of the woods after the shooting had been done. The man said that if he had shot the horse, he did not know what he was doing.

IS VERY REFRESHING

He Invites All the World to Come and Receive It—Christ's Eternal Fountains Satisfy the Soul.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage represents religion as a great refreshment, and invites all the world to come and receive it; text, Genesis, 29:8. "We cannot until all the flocks be gathered together and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep."

A scene in Mesopotamia, beautifully pastoral. A well of water of great value in that region. The fields around about it white with three flocks of sheep lying down waiting for the watering. I hear their bleating coming on the bright air and the laughter of young men and maidens indulging in rustic repartee. I look off, and I see other flocks of sheep coming. Meanwhile Jacob, a stranger, on the interesting errand of looking for a wife, comes to the well. A beautiful shepherdess comes to the same well. I see her approaching, followed by her father's sheep. It was a memorable meeting. Jacob married that shepherdess. The Bible account of it is: "Jacob kissed Rachel and lifted up his voice and wept." It has always been a mystery to me what he found to cry about! But before that scene occurred Jacob accosts the shepherds and asks them why they postpone the slaking of the thirst of their sheep and why they did not immediately proceed to water them. The shepherds reply to the effect: "We are all good neighbors, and as a matter of courtesy we wait until all the sheep of the neighborhood come up. Besides that, this stone on the well's mouth is somewhat heavy, and several of us take hold of it and push it aside, and then the buckets and the troughs are filled and the sheep are satisfied." "We cannot until all the flocks are gathered together and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep."

Oh, this is a thirsty world! Hot for the head, and blistering for the feet, and parching for the tongue. The world's great want is a cool, refreshing, satisfying draft. We wander around and we find the cistern empty. Long and tedious drought has dried up the world's fountain, but centuries ago a Shepherd, with crook in the shape of a cross and feet cut to the bleeding, explored the desert passages of the world and one day came across a well a thousand feet deep, bubbling and bright and opalescent, and looked to the north, and the south, and the east, and the west, and cried out with a voice strong and musical, that rang through the ages: "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters!"

Now a great flock of sheep to-day gather around this Gospel well. There are a great many thirsty souls. I wonder why the flocks of all nations do not gather, why so many stay thirsty, and while I am wondering about it my text breaks forth in the explanation, saying: "We cannot until all the flocks be gathered together and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep."

If a herd of swine come to a well, they angrily jostle each other for the precedence; if a drove of cattle come to a well, they hook each other back from the water, but when a flock of sheep come, though a hundred of them shall be disappointed, they only express it by sad bleating, they come together peaceably. We want a great multitude to come around the Gospel well. I know there are those who do not like a crowd; they think a crowd is vulgar. If they are oppressed for room in church, it makes them positively impatient and belligerent. We save had people permanently leave church because so many other people came to it. Not so did these oriental shepherds. They waited until all the flocks were gathered, and the more flocks that came the better they liked it. And so we ought to be anxious that all the people should come. Go out into the highways and the hedges and compel them to come in. Go to the rich and tell them they are indigent without the Gospel of Jesus. Go to the poor and tell them the affluence there is in Christ. Go to the blind and tell them of the touch that gives eternal illumination. Go to the lame and tell them of the joy that will make the lame man leap like a hart. Gather all the sheep off all the mountains. None so torn of the dogs, none so sick, none so worried, none so dying as to be omitted. Why not gather a great flock? All this city is a flock, all New York is a flock, all London is a flock, all the world is a flock.

This well of the Gospel is deep enough to put out the burning thirst of the 1,600,000,000 of the race. Do not let the church by a spirit of exclusiveness keep the world out. Let down all the bars, swing open all the gates, scatter all the invitations. "Whosoever will, let him come." Come, white and black. Come, red men of the forest. Come Laplander, out of the snow. Come Patagonian, out of the south. Come inurns. Come panting under palm leaves. Come one. Come all. Come now. As at this well of Mesopotamia Jacob and Rachel were betrothed, so this morning at this well of salvation Christ, our Shepherd, will meet you coming up with your long flocks of cares and anxieties, and He will stretch out His hand in pledge of His affection, while all Heaven will cry out: "Behold, the bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet him!"

You notice that this well of Mesopotamia had a stone on it, which must be removed before the sheep could be watered, and I find on the well of salvation to-day impediments and obstacles which must be removed in order that you may obtain the refreshment and life of this gospel. In your case the impediment is pride of heart. You cannot bear to come to so democratic a fountain; you do not want to come with so many others. It is as though you were thirsty and you were invited to slake your thirst at the town pump instead of sitting in a parlor sipping out of a chased chalice which has just been lifted from a silver salver. Not so many publicans and sinners. You want to get to Heaven, but you must be in a special car, with your feet on a Turkish ottoman and a band of music on board the train. You do not want to be in company with rustic Jacob and Rachel and be drinking out of the fountain where 10,000 sheep have been drinking before you. You will have to remove the obstacle of pride or never find your way to the well. You will have to come as we came, willing to take the water of eternal life in any way and at any hand and in any kind of a pitcher, crying out: "Oh, Lord Jesus, I am dying of thirst! Give me the water of eternal life, whether in trough or goblet! Give me the water of life! I care not in want it comes to me." Away with all your hindrances of pride from the well's mouth!

Here is another man who is kept back from the water of life by the stone of an obdurate heart which lies over the mouth of the well. You have no more feeling upon this subject than if God had yet to do you the first kindness or you had to do God the first wrong. Seated on His lap all these years, His everlasting arms sheltering you, where is your gratitude? Where is your morning and evening prayer? Where are your consecrated lives? I say to you, as Daniel said to Belshazzar: "The God in whose hand thy breath is, and all thy way, thou hast not glorified." If you treated anybody as badly as you have treated God, you would have made 500 apologies; yea, your whole life would have been an apology. Three times a day you have been seated at God's table. Spring, summer, autumn and winter He has appropriately appareled you. Your health from Him, your companion from Him, your children from Him, your home from Him, all the bright surroundings of your life from Him. Oh, man, what dost thou with that hard heart? Canst thou not feel one throb of gratitude toward the God that made you, and the Christ who came to redeem you, and the Holy Ghost who has all these years been importuning you? If you could sit down five minutes under the tree of a Saviour's martyrdom and feel His lifeblood trickling on your forehead and cheek and hands, methinks you would get some appreciation of what you owe to a crucified Jesus.

Heart of stone, relent, relent,
Touched by Jesus' cross, subdued;
See His body mangled, rent,
Covered with a gore of blood.
Sinful soul, what hast thou done?
Crucified the Eternal Son!

There are men who are perfectly discontented. Unhappy in the past, unhappy to-day, to be unhappy forever, unless you come to this Gospel well. This satisfies the soul with a high, deep, all absorbing and eternal satisfaction. It comes, and it offers the most unfortunate man so much of this world as is best for him, and throws all Heaven into the bargain. The wealth of Croesus and all the Rothschilds is only a poor, miserable abilllug compared with the eternal fortunes that Christ offers you to-day. In the far east there was a king who used once a year to get on the scales, while on the other side the scales were placed gold and silver and gems—indeed, enough were placed there to balance the king. Then, at the close of the weighing, all those treasures were thrown among the populace. But Christ to-day steps on one side the scales, and on the other side are all the treasures of the universe, and He says: "All are yours; all height, all depth, all breadth, all eternity—all are yours." We do not appreciate the promises of the Gospel.

Come also to this Gospel well, all ye troubled. I do not suppose you have escaped. Compare your view of this life at 15 years of age with what your view is of it at 40 or 60 or 70. What a great contrast of opinion! Were you right then or are you right now? Two cups placed in your hands, the one a sweet cup, the other a sour cup. A cup of joy and a cup of grief. Which has been the nearest to being full, and out of which have you the more frequently partaken? What a different place the cemetery is from what it used to be! Once it was to you a grand city improvement, and you went out on the pleasure excursion, and you ran laughingly up the mound, and you criticised in a light way the epitaph. But since the day when you heard the bell toll at the gate when you went in with the procession it is a sad place, and there is a flood of rushing memories that suffuse the eye and overmaster the heart. Oh, you have had trouble, trouble, trouble! God only knows how much you have had. It is a wonder you have been able to live through it.

If I could gather all the griefs of all sorts from these crowded streets and could put them in one scroll, neither man nor angel could endure the recitation. Well, what do you want? Would you like to have your property back again? "No," you say as a Christian man; "I was becoming arrogant, and I think that is why the Lord took it away. I don't want to have my property back." Well, would you have your departed friends back again? "No," you say: "I couldn't take the responsibility of bringing them from a fearless realm to a realm of tears. I couldn't do it." Well, then, what do you want? A thousand voices in the audience cry out: "Comfort. Give us comfort!" For that reason I have rolled away the stone from the well's mouth. Come, all ye wounded of the flock, pursued of the wolves, come to the fountain where the Lord's sick and bereft ones have come. "Ah," says some one, "you are not old enough to understand my sorrows. You have not been in the world as long as I have, and you can't talk to me about my misfortunes in the time of old age." Well, I may not have lived as long as you, but I have been a great deal among old people, and I know how they feel about their failing health and about their departed friends and about the loneliness that sometimes strikes through their souls.

After two persons have lived together for 40 or 50 years and one is taken away, what desolation! I shall not forget the cry of Dr. De Witt, of New York, when he stood by the open grave of his beloved wife and after the obsequies had ended he looked down into the open place and said: "Farewell, my honored, faithful and beloved wife. The bond that bound us is severed. Thou art in glory, and I am here on earth. We shall meet again. Farewell, farewell!"

You get a little worried for fear that some time you will come to want, do you? Your children and grandchildren sometimes speak a little sharp to you because of your ailments. The Lord will not speak sharp. Do you think you will come to want? What do you think the Lord is? Are His granaries empty? Will He feed the raven and the rabbit and the lion in the desert, and forget you? Why, naturalists tell us that the porpoise will not forsake its wounded and sick mate. And do you suppose the Lord of Heaven and earth has not as much sympathy as the fish of the sea? But you say: "I am so near worn out, and I am of no use to God any more." I think the Lord knows whether you are of any more use or not. If you were of no more use, He would have taken you before this. Do you think God has forgotten you because He has taken care of you 70 or 80 years? He thinks more of you to-day than He ever did, because you think more of him. May the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and Paul the aged be your God forever! But I gather all the promises today in a group, and I ask the shepherds to drive their flocks of lambs and sheep up to the sparkling supply. "Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth." "Though He cause grief, yet will He have compassion." "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all." "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." I am determined that no one shall go out of this house uncomforted. Yonder is a timid and shrinking soul who seems to hide away from the consolations I am uttering as a child with a sore hand hides away from the physician lest he touch the wound too roughly, and the mother has to go and compel the little patient to come out and see the physician. So I come to your timid and shrinking soul to-day and compel you to come out in the presence of the Divine Physician. He will not hurt you. He has been healing wounds for many years, and He will give you gentle and omnipotent medicament.

But people, when they have trouble, go anywhere rather than to God. De Quincey took opium to get rid of his troubles. Charles Lamb took to punch. Theodore Hook took to something stronger. Edwin Forrest took to theatrical dissipation. And men have run all around the earth, hoping in the quick transit to get away from their misfortunes. It has been a dead failure. There is only one well that can slake the thirst of an afflicted spirit, and that is the deep and inexhaustible well of the Gospel.

But some one in the audience says: "Notwithstanding all you have said this morning, I find no alleviation for my troubles." Well, I am not through yet. I have left the most potent consideration for the last. I am going to soothe you with the thought of Heaven. However talkative we may be, there will come a time when the stoutest and most emphatic interrogation will evoke from us no answer. As soon as we have closed our lips for the final silence no power on earth can break that taciturnity. But where, O Christian, will be your spirit? In a scene of infinite gladness. The spring morning of Heaven waving its blossoms in the bright air. Victors fresh from battle showing their scars. The rain of earthly sorrow struck through with the rainbow of eternal joy. In one group God and angels and the redeemed, Paul and Silas, Latimer and Ridley, Isaiah and Jeremiah, Payson and John Milton, Gabriel and Michael the archangel. Long line of choristers reaching across the hills. Seas of joy dashing to the white beach. Conquerors marching from gate to gate. You among them. Oh, what a great flock God will gather around the celestial well. No atone on the well's mouth while the Shepherd waters the sheep. There Jacob will recognize Rachel the shepherdess. And standing on one side of the well of eternal rapture your children, and standing on the other side of eternal rapture your Christian ancestry. You will be bounded on all sides by a joy so keen and grand that no other world has ever been permitted to experience it. Out of that one deep well of Heaven the Shepherd will dip reunion for the bereaved, wealth for the poor, health for the sick, rest for the weary. And then all the flock of the Lord's sheep will lie down in the green pastures, and world without end we will praise the Lord that on this summer Sabbeth morning we were permitted to study the story of Jacob and Rachel at the well.

STILL A FIGHT AHEAD.

The Columbus Convention Did Not Settle Everything to the Party's Satisfaction.

The democratic convention of Ohio was controlled by the McLean element and those leaders who bolted the ticket in 1896 and gave but a perfunctory support to Mr. Bryan in 1900. To placate the fusion element of the party and to aid the candidacy of Col. Kilbourne for governor, the railroad taxation planks demanded by the friends of Tom Johnson were included in the platform, but any mention of the leadership of Mr. Bryan or the national platforms of 1896 and 1900 was studiously avoided. This unpardonable rudeness and inconceivable folly of ignoring the national platform and candidate, who in two of the greatest campaigns in the history of the party had polled more votes than were ever before recorded, has led to the calling of another convention at Columbus on July 31.

The McLean ring have long dominated the democratic party in Ohio, and the more complete their rule the worse the condition the party has attained until the last election for governor, when McLean himself was a candidate, he was disastrously defeated, but still controlled the party machinery. McLean's interest in Ohio politics has always been of a personal nature, and if he was not a candidate the assistance he rendered was lukewarm, to say the least, and yet by his control of the party machinery it has been impossible to clear the organization of this Old Man of the Sea.

The republican and trust-controlled newspapers pretend to take great satisfaction at the action of the convention. They call it a defeat of Mr. Bryan. Of this Mr. Bryan says: "Mr. Bryan is not a candidate for any office, and a mention of him might have been construed by some as an indorsement of him for office. The vote should have been upon the naked proposition to indorse the platform of last year, and then no one could have excused his abandonment of democratic principles by pleading his dislike for Mr. Bryan."

Referring to the platform, he continues: "The convention not only failed, but refused to indorse the Kansas City platform, and, from the manner in which the gold element has rejoiced over this feature of the convention, one would suppose that the main object of the convention was not to write a new platform, but to repudiate the one upon which the last national campaign was fought.

The gold papers assume that the convention refused to adopt the Kansas City platform because it contained a silver plank. If so, it would have been more courageous to have declared openly for the gold standard. If the gold standard is good, it ought to have been indorsed—if bad it ought to have been denounced. To ignore the subject entirely was inexcusable.

The money question is not yet out of politics. Every session of congress will have to deal with it. Republicans declare that it is dead, but they keep working at it.

Mr. Bryan comments on parts of the platform, especially those referring to state and municipal affairs. He indorses the nominees of the convention and urges their support. Referring to the senatorial fight and the reported candidacy of John R. McLean, he says: "Did the leaders ignore the money question in order to please those who bolted? Or does Mr. McLean want to be left free to affiliate with the republicans on financial questions in case of his election?"

He concludes as follows: "If any of the Ohio democrats feel aggrieved because the reorganizing element of the party triumphed at the convention, let them not visit their disappointment upon the state ticket, but rather see to the nomination of senators and representatives who will select a trustworthy senator. Let them see to it also that the state platform is made at the primaries next time rather than at the convention."

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

—Mark Hanna does not seem to be standing by the Kansas and Nebraska corn crop like he ought to. There will be another election there soon, and that republican prosperity will be needed.

—The sheep shearers of Wyoming are enjoying the fruits of their support of the republican party by a reduction in the price of shearing sheep from seven to six cents a head, and this under the highest wool tariff ever imposed.

—The Hanna soft coal combine has been formed, with Daniel R. Hanna, son of Senator Hanna, as president. Democrats and republicans alike will have to suffer when winter comes and the trust begins to get in its work.

—The Kansas farmer is in the midst of republican prosperity. Hay is $20 a ton and corn 55 cents a bushel, and he is buying at these golden prices to keep his stock from starving. Wheat, of which he has some to sell, is only 60 cents a bushel.

—The gross earnings of all the railroads in the United States for the past year are estimated at $1,628,600,000—an increase of nearly $160,000,000 over the year previous. This enormous increase has been mainly brought about by raising the rates through reclassification. Ask your dry goods merchant or grocer and he will tell you. And yet the railroad combine says the consolidations are not to raise rates but reduce expenses. The octopus seems to catch us going and coming.

MANUFACTURERS' TROUBLES.

The Coast Is Not Altogether Clear Before Those Favored by Protection.

Even the protected manufacturers have their troubles. They have always taken it for granted that those who vote for McKinley and Dingley tariffs believe in high prices and are entirely willing to pay them. Therefore the protected manufacturers have always had two or more price lists and have reserved their highest prices for Americans and the lowest for the benighted foreigners, who, presumably, believe in cheapness. Ordinarily the American pays about 40 per cent. more than does the foreigner for American-made goods.

This method of selling our goods was working with the smoothness of well-oiled machinery when the Hawaiian islands were annexed to this country. Then the trouble began. As the Hawaiian has never voted on the McKinley and Dingley bills, how could our manufacturers tell whether these Pacific islanders preferred high or low prices? As a result some manufacturers kept on selling goods to the Hawaiians just as if they were still foreigners, while other manufacturers treated the Hawaiians as full-fledged Americans and entitled to genuine American prices. Chaos followed. As our western tariff wall does not stop at the Pacific coast, but has been extended around the Hawaiian islands, American goods sold in Honolulu at low prices were brought back to San Francisco and sold at a profit, at less than the prices fixed by the manufacturers on the same goods in California. As it is contrary to one of the fundamental laws of political economy to have the same goods selling at the same time and in the same market at two prices, the consternation of the manufacturers may be imagined. They began to blame each other and to apply harsh names to those who were not prompt in extending the blessings of high prices to all under the folds of the American flag. The discussion of this question has been raging among the manufacturers for a year. One of the latest contributions to this discussion is in the Iron Age of June 27, 1901, and is signed by a "Western Manufacturer." It is in part as follows: "It so happens that at present the price of our goods is about 25 per cent. higher for domestic consumption than the export prices. We had an inquiry for export prices, which we quoted. The order now comes in to be shipped to Honolulu. Is it fair to consider the Hawaiin islands entitled to export prices?

"Our own opinion is that they have become a part of the United States and should be considered domestic territory as much as Alaska. Also, we understand our tariff applies to this territory, so that they are prohibited from buying outside and we are thus enabled to get domestic prices."

BYRON W. HOLT.

FIASCO IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Sham Civil Government Gives Way and Militarism Still Holds Sway.

The republican party has brought us to a pretty pass in the Philippines. On July 4 they set up a sham civil government in all but three provinces and within a month are obliged to withdraw even this semblance of freedom from nearly all over the island and give the military full swing again. The Chaffee reforms and proposed consolidation of troops at three points in the islands is obliged to be abandoned. The reduction of the army there by one-half, which was announced with a great flourish, is also now found to be impracticable and will be impossible until an indefinite time in the future. Thus the expense that this country is trying to hold the islands is likely to be prolonged indefinitely, which in round figures amounts to the enormous sum of $100,000,000 a year. The profit on the trade we are now doing will not pay one-tenth of one per cent. on the $20,000,000 we paid Spain to quit claim the islands to us, let alone the vast amount being yearly added.

Then we have the future of the republic at stake, of which the St. Louis Republic says: "It will repay Americans to contemplate the changed attitude of their country as bearing upon their own and their children's safety and liberty. We are on dangerous ground in a most dangerous frame of national thought. We are abandoning a creed that prescribed our own rights and respected the rights of others. The final abandonment of this creed means more of calamity to us than ever to those weaker than us whom we may conquer, despoil and forcibly govern. This is due to the fact that we are destroying the foundation of the fabric of free government and that it is we ourselves who will be crushed by the collapse of the splendid structure.

—The gloating of the republican newspapers last year over the superabundance of the crops in the western states as a sign of returned prosperity will now have to explain how it is that Hanna and McKinley can't keep the good thing continually going. Probably they will blame the drought on the democrats and populists.

—The "community of interests" plan will work very well until one of the interests thinks it is not getting its full share of the swag or until the people combine and force congress to amend the interstate commerce law so that combinations cannot raise rates beyond a fair tariff.

—Cuba is, and of right should be, free and independent," and yet it is said to be the purpose of the administration to hold Morro castle, which is the key to Cuba.

JUST WHAT TO EAT.

The Proper Food to Consume If People Want to Prolong Their Lives.

Anatomical experiment and investigation show that the chief characteristics of old age are the deposits of earthy matter of a gelatinous, fibrinous character in the human system. Carbonates and phosphate of lime, mixed with other salts of a calcareous nature, have been found to furnish the greater part of these earthy deposits, says the New York World.

As observations show, man begins in a gelatinous condition; he ends in an osseous or bony one—soft in infancy, hard in old age. Of course, these earthy deposits, which affect all the physical organs, naturally interfere with their functions. Partial ossification of the heart produces the imperfect circulation of the blood which affects the aged. When the arteries are clogged with calcareous matter there is interference with circulation, upon which nutrition depends. Without nutrition there is no repair of the body.

None of these things interfere with nutrition and circulation in earlier years. The reparation of the physical system, as every one ought to know, depends on this fine balance. In fact, the whole change is merely a slow, steady accumulation of calcareous deposits in the system. * * * When these become excessive and resist expulsion they cause the stiffness and dryness of old age.

Entire blockage of the functions of the body is then a mere matter of time; the refuse matter deposited by the blood in its constant passage through the system stops the delicate and exquisite machinery which we call life. This is death. It has been proved by analysis that human blood contains compounds of lime, magnesia and iron. In the blood itself are thus contained the earth salts. In early life they are thrown off. Age has not the power to do it.

Hence, as the blood is produced by assimilation of the food we eat, to this food we must look for the earthy accumulations which in time block up the system and bring on old age. * * * Almost everything we eat contains more or less of these elements for destroying life, by means of calcareous salts deposited by the all-nourishing blood. Careful selection, however, can enable us to avoid the worst of them.

Earth salts abound in the cereals, and bread itself, though seemingly the most innocent of edibles, greatly assists in the disposition of calcareous matter in our bodies. Nitrogenous food abounds in this element. Hence a diet made up of fruit principally is best for people advancing in years, for the reason that, being deficient in nitrogen, the ossific deposits so much to be dreaded are more likely to be suspended.

Moderate eaters have in all cases a much better chance for long life than those addicted to excesses at the table.

Waste in Cooking.

Prof. Marshall, the noted English economist, estimates that $500,000,000 is spent annually by the British working classes for things that do nothing to make their lives nobler or truly happier. At the last meeting of the British association, the president, in an address to the economic section, expressed his belief that the simple item of food waste alone would justify the above-mentioned estimate. One potent cause of waste, to-day, is that very many of the women, having been practically brought up in factories, do not know how to buy economically, and are neither passable cooks nor good housekeepers. It has been estimated that, in the United States, the waste from bad cooking alone is over $1,000,000,000 a year!—Prof. William Mathews, in Success.

COMFORT FOR CHICKS.

Coop and Run Which Enables Them to Get Plenty of Exercise and Fresh Food.

I have a coop and covered run which is used both for the setting hens and for the hens with chicks. The coops are about four feet square, and are made very much like portable hen houses, only smaller. They are made so tight that nothing can get in them to disturb the chicks when they are closed. With each coop I have a covered run made by taking some boards about 12 feet long and 12 inches wide and nailing them together in the form of a box 12 by 4 feet, without top or bottom. A piece of wire netting is nailed over the top, and the covered run is completed, except some openings in the sides through which to put feed and water, and to make a passage from the run to the coop. A small slide door is made on one side of the coop, and the run is placed so the opening in the side comes opposite this door. At night the chicks can be shut in the coop by closing the slide door, and this makes it easy to move them to fresh ground frequently. When the chicks are thus inclosed they are safe from all animals or whatever could harm them. Last year I had a brood of 30, all brooded by one hen, in such a coop and run, and did not lose one of them, while formerly I always lost some of them by the hawks, rats, cats or other animals. I was not bothered with chicks running over the lawn or garden.

The same coop and run were used for setting hens. I used small portable boxes for nests, and when I have a setting hen I move her at night to one of these coops and set her on some old eggs, and when I get three or four hens in a coop setting on old eggs I am ready to put my good eggs under them and at the same time fill the incubator with eggs. They all hatch about the same time, and all the chicks are given to the hens, as one hen can brood from 25 to 30 chicks, if the weather is not too cold. When you set a hen in such a coop, with run attached, she can go out in the run and get her food and water and dust herself. She cannot get away, and there is but little danger of her leaving her eggs. For making the coops I buy large boxes at the stores, and the cost of a coop and run has only been about two dollars when they were made by a carpenter. The wire netting will not cost over 50 cents, and if one does the carpenter work the expense will be small. I would especially recommend this plan of raising chickens to people living in villages.—W. H. Jenkins, in N. Y. Tribune.

THE AMERICAN BREEDS.

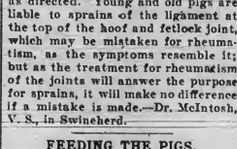
Many Promising Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes Are Positively Spoiled by Overweight.

Farm-Poultry, an influential Boston publication, has of late been inviting opinions concerning the proper weight of the American breeds of chickens, among which are the Plymouth Rocks and the Wyandottes. We should say that fully two-thirds of the breeders who have expressed themselves on the subject take the position that the standard weight is too high. It is claimed that the medium-sized birds of these families are almost invariably better layers than those which meet the demands of the standard in regard to weight. One well-known poultry judge, in his contribution to the discussion, says that not more than one Plymouth Rock in 12 which pass through his hands at the shows is up to standard weight. If the men who patronize the shows meet with difficulty in getting their birds up to standard weight, how much more of a task it must be for farmers who, as a rule, can give but a fraction of their time to the study of the problems of the poultry yard? And if this heavy weight is obtained at the sacrifice of the laying qualities why not cut it down? Some advertisers take great pains to have it known that their birds are fully up to standard weight. Farmers should know that they can easily pay more money for that kind of Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes than they are worth.

Some Housework Figures.

A Vermont man, with a fondness for figures, has produced the following: "We have often heard of women dishwashing their lives away, but did anyone ever think of the number of times, reduced to actual figures, the table has been spread, cleared of dishes washed and put away during 30 years? A black walnut dining table has been in use in my family for 30 years. In that period this table has been spread 32,850 times, and as many times cleared and the dishes washed. My family averaged five during that time, making 164,250 meals eaten from that table. At the low price of 15 cents per meal these would amount to $24,637.50. These figures are small compared with 60 years of continuous service which sometimes happens, but they show how women cheerfully do their duties from the cradle to the grave."

RHEUMATISM IN PIGS.



How to Combat This Dangerous Disease Which Is Common Among Young Animals.

This is a very common disease among pigs, especially young ones. It is impossible to say what causes rheumatism in the pig, as it is found under all conditions, where the pigs are well kept, or where they are not. Symptoms: There is lameness in one or more legs, which is more or less noticeable according to the severity of the case. The joints often swell at the fetlocks. When the muscles are affected it may assume the form of inflammatory rheumatism and will cause an elevation of temperature and sickness. In such case the animal will be very stiff and refuse its food, its breathing will be fast and short, and its snout dry, and if the animal is made to move, it may squeal with pain. When the legs are the parts affected it may shift from one leg to the other, but if the joints swell it will likely remain stationary until relieved. Treatment: Keep the animal in a comfortable place, and if it is in good flesh give it a dose of Epsom salts, one to two ounces, or two to three drops of Croton oil in a spoonful of sweet oil, or it may be dropped in the mouth. Croton oil seems to be a useful medicine in rheumatism. Follow this by giving ten to fifteen drops of oil of gaultheria to the adult pig three times a day in a little sweet oil. For pigs two to three months old give half this quantity. I have given iodide and the bicarbonate of potassium in ten-grain doses two or three times a day in a little water with good results; but I have excellent results by giving the oil of gaultheria. Rub the sore, swollen joints with equal parts of oil of turpentine and sweet oil. In cases of inflammatory rheumatism, after giving the physic, give from three to five drops of the tincture of aconite every two hours for the first two days, then give the oil of gaultheria as directed. Young and old pigs are liable to sprains of the ligament at the top of the hoof and fetlock joint, which may be mistaken for rheumatism, as the symptoms resemble it; but as the treatment for rheumatism of the joints will answer the purpose for sprains, it will make no difference if a mistake is made.—Dr. McIntosh, V. S., in Swinebherd.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

An Arrangement That Will Be Found of Much Value and an Aid to Cleanliness.

Pigs, being voracious animals, are hogs in every sense of the term, and while it may be a pleasure to administer to their wants when they are small, the feeding of them upon their having attained a good growth is not always so agreeable. Especially is this true if the animals cannot be kept out of the troughs until they are filled.

Hence it is that the arrangement presented in the picture will be found of much value and great convenience. Before pouring in the swill the front end of the pen, in the form of a swinging door suspended from the top, is placed in the position indicated on the right. The trough is then filled and the door allowed to assume its former position, as shown at the left. King Porker thus can easily be held in check until his table is set, and neither he nor his owner be caused any harm thereby.—Frederick O. Sibley, in N. Y. Tribune.

Goats to Protect Sheep.

The old idea that the goats are all bad and the sheep all good will have to be modified, if the goat proves himself as useful as a southern farmer says he is. After trying in vain to protect his sheep against sheep-killing curs by shooting an occasional cur that presented a good mark, Mr. J. A. Morris, of Atlanta, bought some Angora goats. He found that these animals, while friendly with sheep, fought the stray dogs to a finish. Not only so, but their pugilistic spirit spread to the rams, which had formerly been afraid of the dogs, and so the flock was doubly protected. If this faculty of the Angora goat is general it will be worth many thousands of dollars to the farmers of the southwest, who have in many cases abandoned sheep raising because of the depredations of the worthless, wandering cur. — Rural World.

Cottonseed Meal for Pigs.

We fed cotton seed meal to one lot of hogs that had not done well in another experiment, and they were ready for market, well finished, in 22 days. Cotton seed meal fed in large quantities or for long periods is death to hogs. Fed for a short time in small quantities, it is valuable to put hogs in good condition that are not doing well. We begin by feeding one-fourth pound of cotton seed a day per 1,000 pounds live weight of hogs, and increase each day to ten days, when we feed per day three pounds per 1,000 pounds live weight of hogs, mixing the meal with the other grain. This quantity of cotton seed can be profitably fed three to four weeks.—Kansas Experiment Station Bulletin.

INDIAN GRATITUDE.

Army Officer Relates an Instance Which Is Confirmatory of Its Existence.

A number of literary men at a New York hotel were lately discussing the Indian character, says the Detroit Free Press, several asserting that all red-skins "were unconscious of the sense of gratitude," when Col. Prentiss Ingraham said:

"I doubt if Lieut. E. L. Keyes, or the late Lieut. Alfred Bache, both formerly of the Fifth cavalry, will agree with you, who make this sweeping charge. At one time in the Indian territory, prior to its settlement by the whites, Keyes happened to save a squaw from a wet death. Two young warriors of her tribe were beating her and dragging her to the river to drown, because each claimed the squaw had promised to marry him. Keyes interfered, brought them before Little Raven, who reprimanded the bucks and protected the squaw. Two years later, way up in the Bad Lands or Dakota, the same squaw risked her life to warn Keyes and his little command against an ambush into which they were marching.

"When the San Carlos Indians jumped a supply train, Bache was sent in pursuit of the attacking party. After a running fight he captured several prisoners. Among the number was Tun-e-lah, a very pretty Apache squaw. The captives were marched back on foot. When the party reached the banks of the San Pedro, the river was so high that it was dangerous to ford it. The White Mountain Apache scouts Bache had with him ordered the prisoners to jump into the river and swim across. Tun-e-lah hesitated, and received a blow from a scout's quirt. Quick as a flash Bache landed a blow on the scout's jaw, and, extending his hand to the squaw, he drew her up on his horse, and in this manner they crossed.

"Six months later, Lieut. Bache lay seriously ill at Fort Apache, 200 miles distant from the San Carlos. With out saying a word to anyone Tun-e-lah took a young antelope, leading it by a halter and lavish woven of beads, and walked every step of the way to Bache's quarters, where she presented him with the animal, saying it was 'good medicine' and would make him well.

"Now in my opinion," said the colonel, "if these squaws were ignorant of gratitude they certainly possessed knowledge of reciprocity."

PREPARATION OF BARLEY.

How the Grain Is Manipulated by Women of the Faroe Islands.

Among the rocky fields of the Faroes stand cabins built of rough stones and turf, used for drying barley. The cold summers here never ripen the grain, and, after it is cut in October, it must be subjected to a strong heat for from 24 to 36 hours. A great fire of peats is built on a high raised hearth of stone; about five feet above it wooden beams support laths fastened several inches apart. These are covered with a layer of straw, on which unthreshed barley is spread to the depth of several inches, and allowed to dry. Passing near a cabin, I venture to peep in, and there I see a group worthy of Millet's brush. Three women, with skirts tilted high and heads bound up like Millet's "Gleaners," are treading out the grain with their bare feet. Their bodies slightly bending, and hands resting on their hips, they trot to and fro, singing as they go snatches of some Faroe peasant song. The air is luminous with the golden dust, and the fire light flashes over their strong supple bodies and large fair faces. It is a charming picture, and a rare one in these days of machine labor, says Good Words.

But this treading of the barley does not sufficiently separate the grain from the husk. The next step is to beat it with flails; not the jointed flails formerly in use in America, but "treskyntrea," which resembles a baseball flattened a little toward the end. I was fortunate enough to see the whole process, for the women, after questioning me curiously for several minutes, confer among themselves, and I hear them say: "She is all the way from America, and there they do not know the way of Faroe folk; we must show it all to her." After treading vigorously for perhaps 15 minutes, they bring out the flails and, kneeling on the floor, wield them vigorously; the blows falling, one, two, three, one, two, three, in perfect time. Later they take down large shallow trays of wood from the walls, and, putting the grain in them, separate the chaff by shaking the trays from side to side.

His Diagnosis Was Correct.

An amusing instance of unconscious soliloquy during a tete-a-tete with a lady was told of the famous physician, Dr. Friend. It was in the old equestrian days, and the doctor was summoned one evening from a rather too festive board to the bedside of a lady patient. He felt her pulse "secundem artem," but for the life of him could not count its beats. "Drunk by Jove!" he soliloquized, and pulled himself together sufficiently to order some harmless mixture. His delight may be imagined when the next morning, instead of an indignant dismissal from further attendance, he received from his patient a confession that he had diagnosed her complaint quite correctly.—Chicago Chronicle.

He Couldn't.

"Oh, Mr. Spooneigh, pray rise. It is not right that you should kneel at my feet. Rise, I beg of you!" implored the fair lady.

But he didn't rise. His Irish did, though, and he replied, solemnly:

"I'm afraid—er—Miss Grace—I'm afraid I'm kneeling on your—er—that is, you dropped your chewing gum, and, oh, Miss Grace, I'm stuck on you!"—Denver Times.

A lawyer in a court room may call a man a liar, scoundrel, villain or a thief, and no one will make a complaint when court adjourns. If a newspaper prints such reflections on a man's character there is a libel suit or a dead editor. This is owing to the fact that the people believe what an editor says. A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Columbia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of disentery. Everything I perscribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by all druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels. B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters bulled, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes. If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1901. NO. 44.

THE Democratic rows in the State fade into insignificance when compared with that in which the Louisville Republicans are engaged.

ALL signs point to a big fair at Florence next week. The directors have advertised it very extensively, and have promises of considerable stock from abroad. The large premiums will prove good drawing cards.

THE Attorney-General, of Indiana who can never conceal his prejudice against Kentucky, has a fling in a brief filed in the Supreme Court. Herb Smith, while attending a political meeting, carried a revolver from Sulivan to Linton, in October, 1900, and he was prosecuted for carrying concealed weapons, but was acquitted by the lower Court on the ground that he was a traveler in the meaning of the statute. The state appealed to the Supreme Court, and the Attorney-General says in his brief that Indiana is supposed to be a civilized state, where a man's life is safe, and he adds.

"A reasonable construction of the law exempting travelers should be that persons passing through the state to dangerous localities like Kentucky or Chicago ought to have the right to carry weapons with them for the protection of their lives."

MR. SAPP remains in the saddle as the Republican boss in Louisville. The Louisville Post (Republican) says:

"The six gentlemen who Saturday put themselves by the side of Mr. Sapp and against the President, and who threw the mantle of their charity over Mr. Sapp, the primary, the burglary, and the alleged count, were as follows:

"First—C, M. Barnett, Surveyor of the Port, relying on Senator Deboe for reappointment.

"Second—Senator Deboe, the author of the President's foreign policy and the opponent of ladies in office.

"Third—N. B. Chambers, who condemns the Sapp policy when writing to the Republicans of Union county, but voted for him here.

"Fourth—W. N. Foster, who represents the Republicans of the Fourth district.

"Fifth—R. L. Gwathmey, Sapp's first assistant in the Collector's office, nominated for Clerk of the Circuit Court by the Sapp primary.

"Sixth—G. W. Lieberth, an applicant for Mr. Comingore's place as Collector at Covington, who expects Senator Deboe to put him in that place.

"State and city Republicans are directly antagonistic. The State Republicans plead with the independents to unite with them in another struggle for cival liberty, but here the independents are scoffed at, and the men who last year and the year before solciited the votes of the independents on the pretense that the Republicans stood for fair elections and an honest count have not a word to say concerning the Sapp primary, the burglary, and the plans of concealment, but are co-operating with Sapp in arranging another ticket for Sapp to slaughter in the precincts."

Much has been said, in the past in regard to the Ridgway treatment for hog cholera, and many fine testimonials have been received by us, commending this treatment. Last week the Farmers representative paid a visit to his experimental farm were he found him busy superintending the work of his farm, but he took time to show us around. Mr. Ridgway has spent hundreds of dollars in experimental work, and has succeeded in immuning hogs from cholera. The 400 head of hogs which are on his farm, and other farms, and have been immuned, are in a thrifty condition, and growing nicely. In fact they are in excellent flesh. The Ridgway treatment is the original treatment of immuning, and may be relied upon. Mr. Ridgway making the treatment of hog cholera a study, and making the treatment a success before he ever placed it upon the market. Those of our readers who have never tried this remedy, should not fail to give it a through test, as it will surely do the work.—Indiana Farmer.

When steamboats cease to be named after persons it will cause one of the arguments, which time and again is brought up in steamboat circles, to be dropped. Of late years it has been the custom to name packets, especially the large ones, after the city from which their permanent papers are issued, but with the towboats the majority of them are named after the builders or some favorite of the owner. Recently in Richmond, Va., a steamboat company was sued for $800 by Miss Mattie Marshall, of that place who took exceptions to the following paragraph, written about the steamer: "The Mattie Marshall, having been overhauled and refitted with new boilers, will hereafter serve as mail carrier and poke her pretty nose in the river business for all she's worth." The decision in the case went against the company. Other expressions which are not to the liking of parties after whom steamers are named are "Her hog-chains broke, pitman strap broke, or she ran through herself."—West Union Defender.

To make a mule worth from $140 to $160 as a 2-year-old, says a successful Kentucky mule raiser, he should be foaled from a large mare in April or May. He should run with the dam until October 1, then be weaned and put in a shed with plenty of light and air and fed with a few shelled oats and plenty of sappy substances, such as sorgum run through a cutting box, with clover and timothy hay. Too much corn fevers the legs and produces scratches. The next summer he should have access to pasture, with a little corn each day until cold weather, when he should be brought back to the barn and fed anything he will eat, until September 1. He should then be 16 hands high, fat and ready for market. When feeding care should be taken to keep the system cool with green stuff and to keep out scratches, the greatest enemy to the mule. The following is a good cure: Take equal parts of blue stone, white vitriol and verdigris, grind together with equal parts of soapstone, mix with warm water until about as thin as paste, apply with a swab on the end of a stick about three times a week.

Line upon line seems to be required to disabuse the minds of some farmers on the fallacy of cross breeding. It would seem that the repeated experiments and failures at this would by this time have put an end to it. In referring to the matter the Western Horseman recently said:

"One of the greatest sources of disappointment to amateur horse breeders and farmers is the cross breeding of different breeds with the idea of striking a happy medium which would be superior to either of the originals. In speed breeding this thing does not so often occur, but with those who breed for the ordinary market, and especially the coach and carriage horse market, cross breeding the heavy and light specimens is the prevailing idea with the inexperienced breeder. The law of average is the great law with this class of breeders, and nothing seems more logical to them than that the produce of a 900-pound, 15 hand high roadster mare and a 2,000-pound, 17-hand high draft stallion should be an ideal 1,200-pound, 16 hand high coach or carriage horse. Twenty disappointments to one satisfactory product is a fair average of results in this line of breeding.

O. P. Conner has opened the new road in the Locust Grove neighborhood, and there is now a good road from Burlington to Rabbit Hash.

The water got so hot in some of the streams during the recent hot weather, that the fish perished. Some very large fish died from that cause.

The syndicate that will have control of the refreshment privileges at the fair this year, is praying for a favorable week and a large attendance.

Mrs. F. E. Kirtley will teach a subscription school in Burlington this fall and winter, and for that purpose she has secured a room in Robert Wilson's residence.

Jailer Adams had the court house bell rope changed so that it now comes down through the center of the circuit court room, making it much more convenient, and easier to ring.

Hear that Misses Lermond, of Walton and Clayton, of Hebron have been employed to teach the next term of the public school in this district. They are experienced teachers.

We failed to mention the Grange picnic last week. It was attended by a large crowd, and all had a most delightful day especially those who delight in tripping the light fantastic.

A special term of the Boone circuit court will be held, commencing on the first Monday in December, at which cases in which Judge Lassing is an attorney will be tried, among them the Powers will case.

The directors of the Harvest Home are hustling up exhibits for their exhibition on September 14. They have advertised liberally and expect a good show, regardless the ravages of the drought.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute will be held at Walton this year, beginning September 2nd. Prof. J. W. Withers, who gave such satisfaction as a conductor last year will have charge again this year.

D. M. Hewitt came very near getting one of his hands and arm badly hurt, while at work with his separator, at Mr. Carpenter's, one day last week. The arm was caught by the blower and mashed against a piece of timber.

They say James Setters has an engine with which he can pull any of the hills on the public roads with his separator. It is a large engine and does not rear up when it comes to a tight pull, as is the habit of so many of the traction engines.

A large copperhead snake was killed in F. A. Hall's yard, last Friday. Mrs. Hall discovered the reptile and called O. J. Ryle, who dispatched it in short order. It had but recently shed its old coat and was as bright as a freshly polished piece of copper.

Mr. W. T. Smith's theory is that for every fog there is in the month of August there will be one snow in the following winter. There has been one fog this month, consequently he is certain there will be one snow next winter.

Henry Clore, of the firm of Walton & Clore, of Bellevue, was in town one day last week. The hot summer relieved him of some of his surplus flesh, but he is none the less industrious and on the watch for a shift by which to make a dollar honestly.

Hear that petitions asking that a vote be taken at the next regular election on the free turnpike proposition are being circulated in several neighborhoods in the county. Some of the opponents to free 'pikes are already hard at work to defeat the move.

The Lawrenceburg, Indiana, fair is in progress this week. The indications have been all along that the exhibition of livestock would be good and the racing unusually interesting. About the latter part of the week the fair's Boone county patrons will begin to swell the attendance considerably.

Mrs. F. Riddell received a letter from her sister, Mrs. Latimer, who lives in Missouri, one day last week. She wrote that the drought had been broken by copious rains, but not until gardens had been ruined and the field crops almost burnt up. The people had gone to work and planted gardens again.

There are 300 professional pall-bearers in Philadelphia and a few professional mouners, whose business it is to make a show of sorrow for the dead. The salary of a carrier ranges from one to five dollars for each funeral. Some of them earn as high as $25 a week, while the mouners do not earn half that sum.

Although the weather for the past two months has not been such as to promote the interest in the fair, the indications are that the livestock exhibition will be unusually good, while the attendance will not be in the least reduced. as Floral Hall will be attractive as it has been at any of the fairs of the past.

A horse and buggy belonging to T. J. Browr, of the Hebron neighborhood, was hitched to the fence near Atty. Hughes' office, last Wednesday, when a hog ran under the horse and caused it to begin kicking. The dashboard and the front end of the buggy were badly damaged, while one of the horses legs was cut considerably.

C. W. Waller, of Verona, had three acres of Red Cross wheat that made 24 bushels to the acre, and nine acres of Prize Winner that made 21 bushels to the acre. Mr. Waller sent to Wisconsin two years ago for the seed wheat, and it has made a good yield now for two years, and he has great faith in these two varieties of wheat. The grain is large and plump.

It is claimed on account of the drought that "a good mess of roasting ears cannot be obtained off of 500 acres of land in the bottoms," and that cornstalks will be worthless for fodder, as they contain no moisture. On the other hand there is said to be some very nice growing corn in certain parts of the valley where rain chanced to fall.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Freaks in eggs are quite usual, but the latest that has been brought to our notice caps the climax. Last week Mrs. G. W. Peak, Jr., broke an egg that had within the shell a black object about a half inch square. Upon examination it was found to be a piece of chicken gizzard that had been fed in some table scraps a few days before containing pieces of gizzard, but how did it get in the egg. Can someone explain it? —Milton Democrat.

The rains that have fallen the past few days hav revived vegetation considerably and a great many nubbins have been insured for the use and benefit of the farmers. If the effects of the drouth only ceased with the breaking up of the dry weather they would not be so bad, but the inconvenience resulting on account of a failure of crops will prevail until next year's crops are garnered and put on the market. A failure of crops causes a loss to a locality from which it takes some time to recover.

Ever since Supt. Voshell went into office he has been introducing new educational features and devising plans for making the teachers better acquainted and to create a fraternal feeling among them, and right well has he succeeded in every instance. It was Mr. Voshell who introduced the common school graduate feature in this county, and he has worked faithfully to the end that it shall become a great incentive to good work on the part of both teachers and pupils, and that graduates this year might meet and become acquainted previous to the Teacher's Institute he set a day, and invited the 15 graduates who will receive diplomas this year, to spend it with him. Eleven of the 15 responded to the invitation and assembled at his hospitable home in Union, on Tuesday of last week. Mrs. Voshell had prepared a sumptuous dinner for the occasion, and the day was spent most delightfully. Besides arranging the program for the graduating exercises on the 5th of September, a group of acquaintances was formed that will prove a delight to the young people through life. Mr. and Mrs. Voshell's entertainment was lavish, nothing being left undone that would contribute to the enjoyment of the day. Mr. Voshell's happiest moments are those spent advancing the interest in education, and he is truly a veteran and expert in the work.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

Over on the banks of the picturesque stream of Stevens creek, whose sinuous current winds like a serpent through the hills of "Sweet Owen," and whose waters, after many a flirt and flutter, join those of Big Eagle at Downingsville, in one of the most picturesque neighborhoods of Grant county, several men are engaged in sinking a prospect hole, wherein they expect to locate mineral that will yield them untold wealth, and cause the Klondike and Cape Nome country to pale into insignificance by comparison with their riches.

Two of the men who are at work on this prospect hole, which they have already sunk to a depth of about fifty feet, are Allie Shelton and John Wiley Webster, who have lived in that neighborhood all their lives and have implicit faith in the deposits of the precious metal which has laid undisturbed by the hand of man so long. While they are doing most of the work, they are by no means the only ones interested. Jacob Renaker, of Downingsville, one of the biggest and best farmers in that country, has agreed to back them for a certain stipulated sum, for which they agree to give him one-half of any mineral that may be located. Since Mr. Renaker has become interested a number of other prominent farmers in that portion of the county have signified their willingness to back the promoters of the mine for a share in the proceeds, and from the present indications a stock company could be formed to the extent of several thousand dollars without any difficulty whatever.

Many years ago mineral bearing quartz was found in this locality and an old legend tells of the time so far back that the oldest citizen cannot remember, when small particles of gold were found here, and the story of an old tramp, who many years ago located the spot whereon the precious metal could be found. Just what re awakened the fever for gold among the good citizens of Stevens creek, it is impossible to tell. Possibly the failure of crops throughout the State may have added some to the desire to make a raise some way, and they imagined if corn couldn't be raised gold could.

Moses McComas brought us a small piece of the mineral taken from the prospect hole Monday. That it contained quartz there is no doubt, but whether gold, silver or copper we are not metallurgists enough to tell. We have sent it to an assayer's office in Cincinnati for examination and expect to receive an analysis from him in a few days. Large quantities of the rock have been sent to Cincinnati assayers by the owners of the prospect hole, but as yet no one has heard from them.

The exact spot where the men are at work is about a half mile due west of the Oak Grove school house and about two miles from the Owen line, located almost directly between Jonesville and Holbrook. A good deal of interest is being taken in the diggers of the mine by the neighbors.

You will not enjoy the fair to the fullest extent next week unless you eat your dinners with Blyth & Clore.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Dr. Talmage Extols It as a Field of Usefulness.

A Sermon for the Encouragement of Wives and Mothers—The Spheres of Man and Woman Entirely Different.

(Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.)

In this discourse Dr. Talmage extols home as a field of usefulness, and especially eacourages wives and mothers; text, Genesis 1:27: "Male and female created He them."

In other words, God, who can make no mistake, made man and woman for a specific work and to move in particular spheres—man to be regnant in his realm, woman to be dominant in hers. The boundary line between Italy and Switzerland, between England and Scotland, is not more thoroughly marked than this distinction between the empire masculine and the empire feminine. So entirely dissimilar are the fields to which God called them that you can no more compare them than you can oxygen and hydrogen, water and grass, trees and stars. All this talk about the superiority of one sex to the other is an everlasting waste of ink and speech. A jeweler may have a scale so delicate that he can weigh the dust of diamonds, but where are the scales so delicate that you can weigh in them affection, sentiment against sentiment, thought against thought, soul against soul, a man's word against a woman's word?

You come out with your stereotyped remark that man is superior to woman in intellect, and then I open on my desk the swarthy, iron-typed, thunderbolted writings of Harriet Martineau and Elizabeth Browning and George Eliot. You come on with your stereotyped remark about woman's superiority to man in the item of affection, but I ask you where was there more capacity to love than in John the disciple, and Robert McCheyne, the Scotchman, and John Summerfield, the Methodist, and Henry Martyn, the missionary? The heart of those men was so large that after you had rolled into it the hemispheres there was room still left to marshal the hosts of Heaven and set up the throne of the eternal Jehovah. I deny to man the throne affectional. No human phraseology will ever define the spheres while there is an intuition by which we know when a man is in his realm and when neither of them is out of it. No bungling legislature ought to attempt to make a definition or to say: "This is the line, and that is the line."

My theory is that if woman wants to vote she ought to vote, and that if a man wants to embroider and keep house he ought to be allowed to embroider and keep house. There are masculine women, and there are effeminate men. My theory is that you have no right to interfere with anyone's doing anything that is righteous. Albany and Washington might as well decree by legislation how high a brown thrasher should fly or how deep a trout should plunge as to try to seek out the height or the depth of woman's duty. The question of capacity will settle finally the whole question. The whole subject. When a woman is prepared to preach she will preach, and neither conference nor presbytery can hinder her. When a woman is prepared to move in highest commercial spheres she will have great influence on the exchange, and no boards of trade can hinder her. I want woman to understand that heart and brain can overflow any barrier that politicians may set up, and that nothing can keep her back or keep her down but the question of capacity.

I know there are women of most undesirable nature who wander up and down the country, having no homes of their own or forsaking their own homes, talking about their rights, and we know very well that they themselves are fit neither to vote nor fit to keep house. Their mission seems to be to humiliate the two sexes at the thought of what any one of us might become. No one would want to live under the laws that such women would enact, or to have cast upon society the children that such women would raise. But I will show you that the best rights that woman can own she already has in her possession; that her position in this country at this time is not one of commiseration, but one of congratulation; that the grandeur and power of her realm have never yet been appreciated; that she sits to-day on a throne so high that all the thrones of earth piled on top of each other would not make for her a footstool. Here is the platform on which she stands. Away down below it are the ballot box and the congressional assemblage and the legislative hall.

Woman always has voted and always will vote. Our great-grandfathers thought they were by their votes putting Washington into the presidential chair. No. His mother, by the principles she taught him and by the habits she inculcated, made him president. It was a Christian mother's hand dropping the ballot when Lord Bacon wrote, and Newton philosophized, and Alfred the Great governed, and Jonathan Edwards thundered of judgment to come. How many men there have been in high political station who would have been insufficient to stand the test to which their moral principle was put had it not been for a wife's voice that encouraged them to do right and a wife's prayer that sounded louder than the clamor of partisanship! Why, my friends, the right of suffrage, as we men exercise it, seems to be a feeble thing. You, a Christian man, come up to the ballot box and drop your vote. Right after you comes a libertine or a sot, the offscouring of the street, and he drops his vote, and his vote counteracts yours. But if in the quiet of home life a daughter by her Christian demeanor, a wife by her industry, a mother by her faithfulness, casts a vote in the right direction, then nothing can resist it, and the influence of that vote will throb through the eternities.

My chief anxiety, then, is not that woman have other rights accorded her, but that she, by the grace of God, rise up to the appreciation of the glorious rights she already possesses. I shall only have time to speak of one grand and all absorbing right that every woman has, and that is to make home happy. That realm no one has ever disputed with her. Men may come home at noon or at night, and they tarry a comparatively little while, but she all day long governs it, beautifies it, sanctifies it. It is within her power to make it the most attractive place on earth. It is the only calm harbor in this world. You know as well as I do that this outside world and the business world is a long scene of jostle and contention. The man who has a dollar struggles to keep it; the man who has it not struggles to get it. Prices up. Prices down. Losses. Gains. Misrepresentations. Gougings. Underselling. Buyers depreciating; salesmen exaggerating. Tenants seeking less rent; landlords demanding more. Gold fidgety. Struggles about post office. Men who are in trying to keep in; men out trying to get in. Slips. Tumbles. Defalcations. Panics. Catastrophes. O woman, thank God you have a home, and that you may be queen in it. Better be there than wear a queen's coronet. Better be there than carry the purse of a princess. Your abode may be humble, but you can by your faith in God and your cheerfulness of demeanor gild it with splendors such as an upholsterer's hand never yet kindled.

There are abodes in the city—humble, two stories, four plain, unpapered rooms; undesirable neighborhood, and yet there is a man here to-day who would die on the threshold rather than surrender it. Why? It is home. Whenever he thinks of it he sees angels of God hovering around it. The ladders of Heaven are let down to this house. Over the child's rough crib there are the chantings of angels, as those that sounded over Bethlehem. It is home. These children may come up after awhile, and they may win high position, and they may have an affluent residence, but they will not until their dying day forget that humble roof under which their father rested and their mother sang and their sisters played. Oh, if you would gather up all tender memories, all the lights and shades of the heart, all banquetings and reunions, all filial, fraternal, paternal and conjugal affections, and you had only just four letters to spell out that height and depth and length and breadth and magnitude and eternity of meaning, you would, with streaming eyes and trembling voice and agitated hand, write it out in those four living capitals, H-O-M-E.

What right does woman want that is grander than to be queen in such a realm? Why, the eagles of heaven cannot fly across that dominion. Horses, panting and with lathered flanks, are not swift enough to run to the outpost of that realm. They say that the sun never sets upon the English empire, but I have to tell you that on this realm of woman's influence eternity never marks any bound. Isabella fled from the Spanish throne pursued by the nation's anathema, but she who is queen in a home will never lose her throne, and death itself will only be the annexation of heavenly principalities.

When you want to get your grandest idea of a queen, you do not think of Catherine of Russia, or of Anne of England, or Maria Theresa of Austria, but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table, or walked with him arm in arm down life's pathway, sometimes to the thanksgiving banquet, sometimes to the grave, but always together—soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle, or at the spinning wheel, and on cold nights wrapping you up and keeping you warm. And then at last, on that day when she lay in the back room dying, and you saw her take those thin hands with which she toiled for you so long and put them together in a dying prayer that commended you to God, whom she had taught you to trust—oh, she was the queen! The chariots of God came down to fetch her, and as she went in all Heaven rose up. You cannot think of her now without a rush of tenderness that stirs the deep foundations of your soul, and you feel as much a child again as when you cried on her lap, and if you could bring her back again to speak just once more your name as tenderly as she used to speak it you would be willing to throw yourself on the ground and kiss the sod that covers her, crying: "Mother, mother!" Ah, she was the queen—she was the queen!

Now, can you tell me how many thousand miles a woman like that would have to travel down before she got to the ballot box? Compared with this work of training kings and queens for God and eternity, how insignificant seems all this work of voting for aldermen and common councilmen and sheriffs and constables and mayors and presidents. To make one such grand woman as I have described how many thousand would you want of those people who go in the round of godlessness and fashion and dissipation, distorting their body and going so far toward disgraceful apparel as they dare go so as not to be arrested of the police, their behavior a sorrow to the good and a caricature of the vicious and an insult to that God who made them women and not gorgons, and tramping on, down through a frivolous and dissipated life, to temporal and eternal destruction. Oh, woman, with the lightning of your soul strike dead at your feet all these allurements to dissipation and to fashion. Your immortal soul cannot be fed upon such garbage. God calls you up to empire and dominion. Will you have it? Oh, give to God your heart, give to God your best energies, give to God all your culture, give to God all your refinement, give yourself to Him for this world and the next. Soon all these bright eyes will be quenched and these voices will be hushed. For the last time you will look upon this fair earth; father's hand, mother's hand, sister's hand, child's hand, will be no more in yours. It will be night, and there will come up a cold wind from the Jordan, and you must start. Will it be a lone woman on a trackless moor? Ah, no. Jesus will come up in that hour and offer His hand, and He will say: "You stood by me when you were well; now I will not desert you when you are sick." One wave of His hand, and the storm will drop, and another wave of His hand and midnight shall break into midnoon, and another wave of His hand and the chamberlains of God will come down from the treasure houses of Heaven with robes instrous, blood washed and Heaven gilnted, in which you will array yourself for the marriage supper of the Lamb. And then with Miriam, who struck the timbrel by the Redsea, and with Deborah, who led the Lord's host into the fight, and with Hannah, who gave her Samuel to the Lord, and with Mary, who rocked Jesus to sleep while there were angels singing in the air, and with Florence Nightingale, who bound up the battle wounds of the Crimea, you will, from the chalice of God, drink to the soul's eternal rouse.

One twilight, after I had been playing with the children for some time, I lay down on the lounge to rest, and, half asleep and half awake, I seemed to dream this dream: It seemed to me that I was in a far distant land—not Persia, although more than oriental luxuriance crowned the cities; nor the tropics, although more than fruitfulness filled the gardens; nor Italy, although more than Italian softness filled the air. And I wandered around looking for thorns and nettles, but I found none of them grew there. And I walked forth, and I saw the sun rise, and I said: "When will it set again?" and the sun sank not. And I saw all the people in holiday apparel, and I said: "When will they put on workingmen's garb again and delve in the mine and swelter at the forge?" But neither the garments nor the robes did they put off. And I wandered in the suburbs, and I said: "Where do they bury the dead of this great city?" And I looked along by the hills where it would be most beautiful for the dead to sleep, and I saw castles and towers and battlements, but not a mausoleum, nor monument, nor white slab could I see. And I went into the great chapel of the town, and I said: "Where do the poor worship? Where are the benches on which they sit?" And a voice answered: "We have no poor in this great city." And I wandered out seeking to find the place where were the hovels of the destitute, and I found mansions of amber and ivory and gold, but no tear did I see or sigh hear. I was bewildered, and I sat under the shadow of a great tree, and I said: "What am I and whence comes all this?" And at that moment there came from among the leaves, skipping up the flowery paths and across the sparkling waters, a very bright and sparkling group, and when I saw their step I knew it, and when I heard their voices I thought I knew them, but their apparel was so different from anything I had ever seen I bowed, a stranger to strangers. But after awhile, when they clapped their hands and shouted: "Welcome! Welcome!" the mystery was solved, and I saw that time had passed and that eternity had come, and that God had gathered us up into a higher home, and I said: "Are all here?" and the voices of innumerable generations answered: "All here." And while tears of gladness were raining down our cheeks and the branches of the Lebanon cedars were clapping their hands and the towers of the great city were chiming their welcome, we began to laugh and sing and leap and shout: "Home! Home! Home!"

Mosquitoes on a Rampage.

Word comes from Crisfield, Md., of the death of one man from an attack made by mosquitoes while he was passing through a wood. Another report from Austin, Tex., tells of an attack made upon oil operators in the region of Sabine, Tex., in which mosquitoes came from the salt marshes in great clouds that darkened the sun and forced the workmen to flee for their lives. Many head of cattle and horses were reported killed in this last attack. As the government has lately expressed an intention to exterminate mosquitoes and suggested the use of kerosene oil on ponds and stagnant water, this fierce and aggressive attack by the enemy must have been to seize the base of supplies.

THE LATEST IN DRESS.

Silk Mits Worn with Elbow Sleeves —Transparent Materials for Summer Gowns.

Long silk mitts in black or white are worn by very many fashionable women this season (who have elected elbow sleeves for promenade, church and visiting costumes), in preference to suede or glace kid gloves of any description. The new style of French-made silk mitt is very shapely and trim, fitting the arm as perfectly as a fine silk glove, and proving even more satisfactory than this comfortable style of hand-covering, for the mitts display to great advantage a well-manicured, white hand, and the few costly gem-set rings that are now permissible with stylish day costumes, says the New York Post.

The special designs in Eton and bolero jackets presented by a noted pattern designer of this city have the models so shaped and the darts so arranged that a particularly graceful effect is given to the fronts, which curve out slightly from the figure, over the blouse or shirt waist worn beneath the jacket. Narrow strips of flexible canvas and tiny lines of featherbone aid considerably in producing this effect.

Very transparent linen batistes in pale ecru, tan, fawn, biscuit and cream shades have been liberally used by high-class modistes, who have made them up over Persian mauve, golden green, ciel blue and poppy-red silks, trimming them either with insertions and appliques of guipure lace, or with rows of ribbon, stitched bands, or ruches of fringed silk matching the lining. The sleeves of some of these gowns are very close to the arm, its entire length banded either with diagonal rows of insertion, incrusted here and there with lace appliques, or simply tucked or strapped, with a fringed ruche edging the flaring cuff at the wrist.

Some of the short straight-front corsets to be worn with hammock dresses or negligee are made to curve up towards the shoulders, and are finished with adjustable elastic straps, which can be regulated at will. There are out few bones, the soft busk in front, and two narrow steels at the back, providing all needful support. Many of the French models have ribbon and net points over the hips, making them very flexible. Others are laced, so that they can be tightened or loosened as best suits the wearer. An unsightly ridge across the back of the shoulders is frequently seen when a low-cut corset is worn, but the sanitary corset obviates this and the shoulder strap.

A HOME DRUG STORE.

How to Prepare Limewater and Other Things Good to Have Handy.

Wherever water is used in preparing bleaches it had better be soft. The alkali in hard water affects all chemical substances. Javelle water is a standard preparation for bleaching white things and removing spots and stains, but it must not touch colored surfaces. To make it dissolve half a pound of washing soda in a pint of boiling water and mix it with a quarter pound of chloride of lime; dissolve in a quart of boiling water. Stir well, let settle, pour off the clear liquid and keep closely corked in a dark place, says the Washington Star.

Lime water is not strictly a bleacher; indeed, it has so many uses it is hard to classify. It is good to soften water, to sweeten drains, to keep milk vessels wholesome, to make milk itself set well upon delicate stomachs, to test air for excess of carbonic acid—if there is too much carbonic acid present the clear lime water instantly crusts over—to take out marks left by grease spots which have been removed by stronger alkalies, in fact, for so many things it should always be kept on hand. Mixed with either sweet or linseed oil to a creamy consistency, it is the very best household remedy for burns and scalds. It costs practically no more than the trouble of making. Put a lump of quicklime as big as the two fists in a clean earthen pitcher, cover it six inches deep with clean cold water, stir with a wooden spoon and let it stand six hours. Pour off the clear liquid without disturbing the lime, and let it run through double cheesecloth. Put in small bottles and cork tight. In using always pour off half an inch from the top of a bottle that has stood.

Carbolic Acid.—With the drug stores right at hand one need not bother to dissolve carbolic crystals; it is easier to buy any strength required. But since all the world does not live next door to the apothecary, the way to make sure of a dependable carbolic acid is to buy the crystals, say half a pound at a time, and keep them in a thick glass bottle with a ground glass stopper, well wrapped from light. At need, set this glass bottle upon a handful of straw in a vessel of water, put over the fire and let the water boil until the crystals dissolve. Two tablespoonfuls of the dissolved crystals in a gill of cold water give the solution of the standard strength—25 per cent. Keep both bottles plainly labeled—as "Carbolic Acid Crystals. Poison."

The Popular Fern Ball.

The lack of success in the care of fern balls is doubtless due to the following causes: Either because they are cheap and worthless ones or they are not kept wet enough. They should be soaked in tepid water from ten to fifteen minutes every morning. A very good plan is to put a hook in the butler's pantry or some similar place, and after the plant has been soaked it should be hung on this hook to drain thoroughly before returning to the window. A fern ball requires plenty of light but little if any sun. It should never be kept out of doors, even in the hottest weather. Cigar smoke will ruin it.—N. Y. World.

POWER BEING USURPED.

Laws of the Land Dictated Instead of Recommended by President McKinley.

The centralization of power by the federal government, which is reaching such extraordinary lenghts under President McKinley, is being copied by republican governors in some of the states. The persistent effort of the president and these mimic governors to encroach upon the domain of the legislative department, dictating instead of recommending the laws that should be enacted and the still greater evil of interpreting the laws to suit themselves or the trusts and corporations that are back of them. It is only a few months ago that the anti-canteen law was set aside by the administration, and it has become the common custom for the president to urge members of congress to pass or defeat legislation and even to reward with patronage and power those who obey his demands. The president originates legislation, as with the bill for the increase of the army, the Philippine legislation and the Cuban amendment and used all the influence at his command to put them through.

It is not to be wondered at that republican governors with this example before them are equally aggressive. More than one governor, says the Washington Post, has called an extra session of a legislature to do work which at its regular session it had declined to do. Only a few months ago the governor of a western state, after having failed to induce the legislature to indorse his hobby, came out in an official deliverance in which he scolded the lawmakers as if they were insubordinate boys who had become consigned to his care. A few days ago the governor of Pennsylvania, acting under the most remarkable decision ever rendered by a state supreme court, went over the appropriation bills, amending various items in order to bring the total down to the estimated income. The constitution gives him authority to veto any item in an appropriation bill. The supreme court has amended that provision so as to allow him to trim any or all items. No more radical departure from sound principles, no more dangerous precedent, has ever been seen in any American commonwealth.

New York has a new constitution intended to illustrate all that is best in government. Under that instrument, however, we still find the governor all powerful as a promoter of legislation. But it is a fact that in the Empire state the governor is relied upon to act as captain and pilot for the legislative craft.

To a greater or less extent, in a majority of the states, the drift is toward the one-man power in making laws. This is partly due to executive aggression, but chiefly to lack of pride on the part of legislatures. It may sometimes happen that a governor is right and a majority of the lawmakers wrong in their views of a measure. But the governor who is not content with the exercise of his constitutional rights of recommendation and veto may well be sat down upon for obtrusion into legislative domain.

THE ISSUE IS IMPERIALISM.

Steady Trend Toward Centralizing All Power in the White House.

What is to be done with the Filipinos and how they are to be governed is not the chief question of imperialism. All the islands of the Philippines, from Luzon to Sulu, might be sunk in the sea, and imperialism would still be with us as the great issue that divides the American people. When we beat down our allies, the Filipinos, and overturn their attempt at governing themselves as a republic, we trample on the declaration that all men have inalienable rights, and that we were the champion of freedom the world over. That was a long step backward in the march of freedom. The Boer republics would never have been overrun by the power of Great Britain if our soldiers had not been devastating the Philippines and rooting out the first trace of liberty in the orient. Could such have happened under a democratic administration?

But we have imperialism at home. A steady trend toward centralizing all power in the white house. Even congress, the representatives of the people, hasten to obey when the man in power tells them what to do. The constitution is gradually being stretched to the breaking point. Treaties are made to take the place of tariff legislation, which is a constitutional prerogative of the direct representatives of the people. That is usurpation and imperialism. The attempt is made to defame and destroy the reputation of army and navy commanders, who happen not to be of the political clique who arrogate and assume all power and claim all reward. That is another trend toward imperialism.

Favorites, mostly utterly worthless and unfit, are appointed to high offices and to positions in the army over the heads of men who are by training and seniority far better fitted to serve their country. This has resulted in many cases in scandals and robbery, the like of which has never been known before. No imperial government of Europe could do worse.

William J. Bryan was right when he said: "Imperialism is still the great issue between the two political parties. The tariff, to be sure, is an important subject, but, to my mind, heart disease is a more serious malady than stomach ache."

LAWBREAKING REPUBLICANS.

Lottery Scheme and Other Iniquities Countenanced by the Administration.

The McKinley administration has prided itself upon its Christian zeal, it is lauded by Methodist bishops, who know better, as the party of progress and benevolence and withal favorable to prohibition and missionaries. Some other denominations have been almost as great partisans of the republican party and the great and good Mr. McKinley. As the reverse of this, the democrats were a wicked and worthless crew, allied with the "rum power" and steeped in all kinds of political heresies.

Some few years ago these ardent republican friends of reform instituted a political crusade against lotteries and polygamy and made Washington howl with their outcries for congress to pass laws to prohibit them. Congress was willing, and passed prohibitory laws against both. for a good strong howl, well prolonged, nearly always brings the average congressman to heed the voice of the people.

Now, with this stringent statute against lotteries, which the great moral sense of the country required should be suppressed, the first we know this holier than thou republican administration has gone into the lottery business on its own account. The greatest land lottery scheme ever devised has been established by the president and his cabinet, and the "drawing" has been supervised and carried on by United States officials. The prizes are 13,000 tracts of land in the Indian territory, and there are 160,000 persons competing for the chance to obtain them.

That is an extraordinary spectacle of a government breaking its own laws.

But that is a small thing compared to the other laws of the United States that are continually being broken, and the transgressors paid to do so by this same republican administration, by compounding the felonies of slavery and polygamy in the Sulu section of the Philippines. The sultan and his dotees are monthly receiving pay from the United States, with the agreement that these twin relics of barbarism are not to be interfered with, and are indeed fostered by our republican administration by the payments of the money which allow more slaves and wives to be purchased and maintained.

What a howl there would have been from end to end of the United States if a democratic administration had broken the laws and fostered the infamous immoralities of slavery and polygamy and instituted an immoral lottery to raffle off 13,000 tracts of the public land which belongs to the whole people of the United States. But not a voice is heard in protest from the great morality party, because it has been decreed that the hands of our noble president must be upheld and the republican party sustained in any enormities they may commit. The blame cannot be laid on congress, for congress is guiltless so far of any complicity.

WITH THE TARIFF OUT.

An Issue That the Protected Trusts Would Like to See Dropped from Politics.

The nonchalant, if not impudent, way in which the tariff trusts sell their products in this "protected" country for nearly twice what they get for them in "unprotected" countries may again force the tariff question into politics. This would be unfortunate, for business is always disturbed, as the protectionists tell us, when the tariff is being discussed. It would also be unfortunate to have the farmers and laborers understand what a heavy burden the tariff places upon their backs and how it is slowly but surely dividing our people into classes—the rich and the poor. When these citizens realize the wrong and injustice in "protection" they are likely to become discontented and to begin that political division into parties mentioned by ex-United States Attorney General Wayne MacVeigh in his recent address at Harvard. He said: "The alignment of the two great political divisions of American voters, who will sooner or later struggle against each other for the possession of the government, will inevitably be upon this basis: The party of the contented will be ranged under one banner and the party of the discontented will be ranged under the other, and the alignment will steadily develop, increasing sharpness and division, until the party of the discontented, being the majority, has obtained the control of our government, to which, under our system, they are entitled, and then they will be sure to remodel the present system for the distribution of wealth, unless we have previously done so, upon basis wiser and more equitable than those now existing. The one-man party will be, under whatever name, the party of capital and the other party will be, under whatever name, the party of labor."

BYRON W. HOLT.

——The attention of Hanna, McKinley & Co. is called to the fact that men are hunting jobs again, for the Topeka Herald says: "Already the employment offices are reporting more applications than places for work. The requests are not alone for ordinary labor, but carpenters and painters are among the list that frequent the offices." Sherm Williams, commissioner of elections, said this morning: "I anticipate lots of men out of a job this winter! Now, of course, all this is needed, for the job to hunt the man is the word to go forth from the republican managers.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

BRACING A BRIDGE.

For Ordinary Farm Purposes the Use of Stout Wire Is to Be Highly Recommended.

When a small stream is crossed by a light, wooden, sill-and-plank bridge, lumber is sometimes lost or traffic totally interrupted or greatly inconvenienced by the removal or displacement of the structure by a sudden rise in the water due to spring thaws, summer freshets, etc. If the banks of stream are far apart in proportion to the ordinary volume of water and somewhat higher just where the bridge crosses than elsewhere, the high waters will in time of flood be distributed out over the land without affecting the stability of the bridge, but many times the banks are close enough together to concentrate the volume of the stream even in time of low water, and are as high as the level of bridge, or higher. This is true of the situation shown in the illustration

BRACING A FARM BRIDGE.

Fig. 1. A small creek or run, the banks of which are about ten feet apart, is crossed by a light wooden bridge in a roadway of the farm. The stream ordinarily is not nearly up to the top of the banks, and nt times is almost dry, but during one of the sudden freshets mentioned the narrow and high banks confine the fierce current, making the bridge very liable to be washed down stream.

A means of securing the bridge by wire braces, to prevent its entire removal or displacement, is made use of, which may be adopted, no doubt, by many farmers in like cases, or even on the public highway. A good-sized tree stands at one side of the small creek near the water. One end of a strong guy line, made of three strands of ordinary fencing wire twisted together, is fastened around the trunk near foot of tree, extends under one of the large roots which reach out into the bed of the stream, and has its other end secured to one end of bridge sill. No tree being handy on the opposite side of stream, a stout stake or post is set in bank, and another guy line run from this post to the other end of sill. The wires are drawn tight, and prove very satisfactory for the object in view. If it is desired to make use of the plan on a stream having no trees near enough to be available, drive a stout stake at each bank, say 20 to 25 feet up the stream, setting the stakes deep enough to prevent catching the floating rubbish, and arrange the wires otherwise the same as in the situation illustrated. A few minutes' work now, and scarcely any cost, may prevent much delay and trouble at some other time.—J. G. Allshouse, in Ohio Farmer.

GOOD ROADS WANTED.

Demand for First-Class Highways Now Extends from New England to California.

No more striking revision of popular sentiment on the good-roads question has been noticed anywhere than that which, in the last few years, has occurred in New England. In Rhode Island, for instance, people were so accustomed to mire and mud that, until the use of rubber tires impressed the citizens with the true state of their highways, there was little prospect of bettering the conditions. Now, the matter has become one of absorbing interest. Highway engineering in Massachusetts is being prosecuted diligently, and for some time experiments have been conducted in order to determine what material or composition of materials possesses the most desirable properties of cementation and is most likely to resist wear and tear. Rock and sand and gravel from adjoining states have been tested and their value for road-making passed upon by geologists and engineers. Reports similar to those from Massachusetts come from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut. What New York has done and hopes to do for the improvement of its highways is pretty generally known. Although the legislative appropriations for this purpose have not, so far, been so large as the more enthusiastic good-roads advocates have desired, the popular demand that the highways of New York shall be inferior to none in the world was never so strong as it is now.

There is another state which, if recent reports are trustworthy, may outstrip the rest in road construction, at least in so far as concerns the element of economy, and that is California. It is said that the southern part of California is the most [illegible] crude petroleum [illegible] most a song, and using it [illegible] road-making has proved extremely economical and satisfactory. Roadbeds in which the oil is used are not only hard and smooth, but they improve with use, and the oil renders them dustless and waterproof.

With the greatly increased demand for first-class highways, it is very satisfactory to find that the cost of making them is diminishing year by year, not only in California, but elsewhere. The estimated cost per mile of road in New York state for which petitions were received by the state engineer some months ago was about $7,000; and this sum is, necessarily, very much in excess of the cost of roads in other parts of the United States. It affords, however, a very significant and gratifying contrast with the cost of first-class highways in the days of the Romans, which, it is recorded, was about $50,000 a mile.—N. Y. Sun.

COLD STORAGE PAYS.

Experience with Apples Proves That It Is Profitable to Keep Them Until Spring.

For three years now we have placed Baldwin apples in cold storage with remarkable success. We refer to cold storage houses worked by ammonia and machinery, such as are built in large cities on scientific principles. We pick our apples as soon as they have matured, place them immediately in barrels, and draw at once to the cold storage house. The sooner they are put into cold storage after being taken from the tree the better; when the apples have lain in the barn in barrels for a week or two, they have not kept as well as those moved at once to cold storage house. We find that the apples shrink some, and have to be run over before shipment if held until latter part of March. Sometimes it has taken one barrel to fill out the shrinkage of ten barrels. We often find five or ten decayed apples in a barrel of Baldwins opened about April 1. If the apples were held in barns a few weeks before putting in cold storage, we might find a pint or more of bad apples. Baldwins which we put in cold storage, and which we could have sold for $1.20 per barrel last fall, we find no difficulty in selling in large quantities at three dollars per barrel March 15.

Our apples have been carefully graded and have pleased our customers wherever they have gone. C. W. Jennings, a large dealer in North Carolina, writes us that he has bought many car loads of apples each year, but that he has never seen such fine apples as those we sold him; he says the quality and flavor and beauty are superior to apples he has previously purchased, and yet we do not consider our Baldwins of last year up to the average size on account of the long spell of dry weather. Our experience encourages us in placing long keeping winter apples in cold storage. It is certainly profitable to do so. We pay 50 cents per barrel for cold storage from November 1 to May 1. Bartlett pears can also be put in cold storage with profit.—Green's Fruit Grower.

NEVER-TIP MILK STOOL.

No Matter How Unruly the Cow May Be She Cannot Turn the Milker Over.

The little stool shown in the accompanying illustration is unique in the way in which the legs are inserted, being spread over a large space, and it is impossible to turn the milker over. The drawing is out of proportion. The stool should be 12 inches long and 8 inches wide. The seat is made of two-inch pine board. Holes are bored almost through the board, but not quite. These are in slanting directions, so that the legs when fitted will occupy the position indicated in the drawing. Now take a pair of old broomsticks, whittle the ends so that they will fit into the holes, drive them in tight and saw them off any length desired.—Orange Judd Farmer.

NEVER-TIP MILK STOOL.

How to Manage Chickens.

Do not try to crowd too many chickens into one coop or give too many to the care of one hen. Much of the mortality among young chickens is due to this cause, and many think themselves fortunate to raise one-half the chickens that are hatched out, while others by having vigorous breeding stock, taking care to keep coops clean and free from vermin, to give only wholesome food, which is not necessarily the fancy foods of boiled eggs, oatmeal, boiled rice, bread crumbs, etc., which are recommended by many, and by avoiding overcrowding in coops do not lose one in a hundred.—American Cultivator.

The Year of the Silo.

This is a good year for the silo. Feeds of all kinds promise to be high, affected by the shortage in the corn crop. The silo will enable the feeder to utilize all of a crop that is usually partly wasted, and to feed it in such form that he can to some extent avoid the purchase of certain high-priced grains or mill feeds. It is a good year for the owner of a silo to save the cost of his outfit, or at least a part of it, in his feed bill.—National Stockman.

Tomatoes picked before they are thoroughly ripened are of no use to canners.

CROWDS STRUGGLE FOR BILLS.

"Got that $100 bill?" "No, have you?" "No." "Well, let's try that fellow over there." This is a sample of some 10,000 conversations going on simultaneously in all parts of Madison Square, New York, the other afternoon. C. Arthur Pearson, of London, had announced over his signature in a Sunday paper that on Monday afternoon, between the hours of five and seven, five men, each with a $100 bill about him, would appear in the square. The first person showing a copy of the paper who should ask the holder of the bill the question: "Have you got that $100 bill?" would become at once its possessor. The five were there, and so was a crowd of all sorts and conditions of men, women and children. Their number was estimated at from 20,000 at the beginning of the contest to 30,000 near its close.

Jacob Reinstein, of 52 Pitt street, was the first to get one of the bills. After this had been drawn the crowd warmed to its work. Another one of the $100 bills was got by Louise Lloyd, a negress. T. Baxter, Mrs. J. E. Derby, of Boston; T. J. Corrigan, and an unnamed school-teacher were the other lucky ones. There were fights in abundance.

Used Corsets as a Bank.

Mary Clark, a spinster 75 years old, who spent most of her life in the employ of a big cotton mill, was found dead in bed at 137 Turner street, Manchester, N. H., the other morning by a policeman who had been called in when the McIntyre family, with whom she lived, could get no response to repeated calls. The doctor said that death was the result of the extreme heat.

Miss Clark was supposed to have had a little money laid by, but a superficial search brought to light only four five-dollar bills. In looking about the room Policeman Connor happened to pick up a pair of corsets. They were suspiciously heavy, and he ripped them open. From the corsets he and Edward McIntyre cut out $890. The money weighed 3½ pounds. Miss Clark had worn the corsets in the mill every day, being fearful of banks.

Breaks Engagement to Horse-Beater.

Miss Jane Perlis, of New York city, has broken her engagement to Jacob Prince, of Englewood, N. J., and in a letter she sent him she says: "When a man would so brutally beat a horse and so easily lose his temper, the woman marrying him would take the same chances." Prince and Miss Perlis were driving in West Hoboken, N. J., on June 16, when the horse balked. Prince beat it so badly that he was arrested and fined ten dollars. He was unable to pay the fine, but Miss Perlis paid it for him. Prince then began to abuse the policeman who arrested him and was again arrested. He apologized, saying he had lost his temper, and was discharged.

Saw Circus But Lost Hair.

A girl attending a circus in Cleveland the other evening became so much interested in the performance that some miscreant leisurely cut off two feet of the luxuriant brown hair hanging down her back and escaped, and she did not discover the loss until after she had left the circus. But, asks the Chicago Tribune, how can an average human being keep track of what is going on in three rings at once and pay attention to anything else?

A Useless Denial.

No use, President Schwab, says the Chicago Tribune. The denial will never overtake the original story. Greatness hath its penalties.

MADE STRONG AND WELL.

MRS. E. A. CROZIER.

"Please accept hearty thanks on behalf of Peruna, that wonderful medicine which raised me from a sick bed and made a strong and well woman of me in two weeks. I suffered with bearing-down pains, backache and continual headache, and found no relief until I tried Peruna. It cured me completely, and I feel as young and well as when 18. I wish every woman knew the merits of the medicine, and no home would be without it."—Mrs. E. A. Crozier.

Mrs. William Henderson, Bordulac, N. C., writes:

"I was troubled with very serious female weakness; had spells of flowing that exhausted me so that I feared I would lose my mind. I suffered untold agony with my back, the pain extending down my left leg. My pain was so severe that I would have welcomed death at any moment—so no one need wonder that I recommend Peruna so highly, for it cured me entirely of that. Not a sign of pain has returned, and that will soon be two years now.

"I am glad that there is a way I can speak, trusting that many a sufferer will read my testimonial, and not only read but believe."—Mrs. Wm. Henderson.

Mr. B. Clarence Byrd, who has been for some years engaged in the creamery business in Ohio, furnishes the following valuable information derived from his experience, about milk and its adulteration:

The production and distribution of milk and milk products engage the attention of no small part of our population. The use of milk is general and not limited to any class or locality; it is regarded a necessity by almost every family, and for this reason information regarding it is important. In the south and west the number of cows is rapidly increasing.

This branch of agriculture is so widely practiced in the U. S. that this is regarded the leading dairy country of the world.

What is milk? Milk is a whitish, opaque liquid. To the ordinary observer it appears to be a perfect solution, and is commonly regarded as such, being bought and sold by liquid measure, but when placed under the microscope, it is seen to consist of a clear, transparent fluid, containing many minute globules of various sizes.

The fluid part, called the milk serum consists of water and all the other constituents of milk, except the fat, and those other constituents, although solids when separated and dry, are practically all dissolved in the water, or as it is said, are in solution.

The globules are little bodies of pure fat scattered through the serum, and not dissolved. They are semisolid and form with the serum a mixture called an emnision.

Composition.—100 pounds of milk contain about the following amounts of the different constituents: 87 pounds of water, 4 pounds of fat, 5 pounds of milk sugar, 3.3 pounds of caseiu and albumen, and 0.7 pounds of mineral matter or salts.

Concerning the adulterants.—There are a number of different adulterants, in order to keep milk sweet with but little expense.

We find that a liquid called "Freezine" is one of the best that can be purchased. It is perfectly harmless and has no color, and cannot be detected when used. "Freezine" is not injurious to the human system, as it freezes the bacteria and evaporates quickly, leaving the milk in a perfectly healthful condition.

There is "Preservaline" No. 2 used in samples of milk for testing. It is nonpoisonous, but colors the milk. This preservative will keep milk as long as 60 days.

Bichloride of Mercury (corrosine sublimate) and bichromate of potash are deadly poisons and should never be used in creameries or elsewhere.

There is another called the Alkaline Tabs. This is used expressly for testing. It is also a poison.

These are a few facts concerning milk and its adulteration. B. C. B.

Glorified, sanctified and satisfied is the motto of the Holiness aggregation that is holding the boards at Gordon's Hall. Holiness notes—W. H. Romine is the only person, so far, that has had the courage to face the ordeal which a Holiness convert has to go through. It is more severe than an initiation into the "Black Maries"——The dry bones of this old town is getting such a shaking that some of the parts will get lost in the mixing, and, according to the raving of some fellow with a mug on him like Herr Most, and who hails from over the river, Pete to day, is worse than Sodom and Gomorra.——They believe in the faith cure for the ails of both body and soul. Gov. J. C. W. Beckham and wife are the proud parents of a daughter. The youngster arrived at an early hour Friday morning. She is the first baby born to any Kentucky Governor since the Buckner administration, when little Simon Bolivar, Jr., first saw light. The Buckner child was not born in the mansion. The rigidity of militaryism fell heavily upon Gov. Beckham in this event at his home he being at Owensboro inspecting the Third Regiment, which is in camp at that place. The mansion is one hundred and six years old, and this is the first child to be born therein, so far as the oldest inhabitants can recall.—Kentucky Journal.

Joel C. Clore hails from "God's Country," and is as genial a young Kentuckian as ever became acclimated to the frozen North. He has been spoken of for nearly every political office that he could consider, and is one of the big men at the bar. In appearance he is striking and carries something of the sunny South in his swing that is hard to define. When Clore came to Cincinnati some years ago he attended a meeting where the subject under discussion was whether or not to put up a Democratic ticket. His Southern blood shot up 273 in the shade, and he made a speech, which is still memorable. It concluded with, "And if you do not put up a ticket I shall return to my native State of Kentucky, where Democracy is indigenous to the soil, and where candidates spring up without the aid of an eternally confounded convention."—Monday's Enquirer.

A Hundred Years Ago.

A hundred years ago this week one of the most remarkable meetings that ever occurred in the United States took place at Cane Ridge, this country. It was conducted by Rev. Barton W. Stone, then a Presbyterian preacher, and others.

At this meeting many had what was then known as the "jerks." They would be seized with violent convulsions, jerk backward and forward as though they would dislocate their necks; the women's hair would crack like a whip lash; men would fall in a cataleptic trance that would last for days and their bodies would become rigid like modern hypnotist subjects. Others would be seized with the "barks." They would grasp a tree or sapling and stand for hours barking up the tree, like a dog after a squirrel. Many other strange manifestations were recorded. Scientific men from abroad visited the meeting to try and account for the wonderful phenomena.

The meeting house where it originated is still standing, but soon became too small for the crowds which came, even from adjoining states. It was estimated that as high as 20,000 people were on the ground at one time. The meeting lasted one week, the people in attendance camping in the woods nearby. Sometimes there would be five or six preachers preaching at same time in different parts of the ground.

The members at Cane Ridge are arranging to celebrate the event next week.

Thursday night, Eld. J. T. Sharrard began a protracted meeting there, assisted by Eld. C. W. Dick. Whether the same results will follow, remains to be seen. If the "law of suggestion" is true, such a thing is possible.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

A Cure for Cholera Infantum

"Last May," says Mrs. Curtis Baker, of Bookwalter, Ohio, "an infant child of our neighbor's was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctor had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days' time the child had fully recovered, and is now (nearly a year since) a vigorous, healthy girl. I have recommended this Remedy frequently and have never known it to fail in any single instance." For sale by all druggists.

BY FIRE AND WATER.

Nine Lives Lost in the Water Crib at Cleveland, O.

Several Persons Were Injured—One of a Rescuing Party Overcome By the Gas and Died in a Few Minutes.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 15.—Five men were burned to death, four were drowned, three, and possibly four, were suffocated, and several injured as the result of a fire which destroyed a temporary water works crib, two miles off the Cleveland harbor, early Wednesday.

Twenty-six obeyed the order of Manager G. C. Van Deusen, when the flames broke out, and took refuge in the water on floating pieces of wreckage. Four of them lost their hold upon their frail floats and sank beneath the waves just as help reached their comrades.

The crew of the tug J. R. Sprankle heard the fire whistle blown from the crib, and the tug raced to the scene from the harbor. She picked up 18 of the survivors who had drifted to the west of the crib on their floats of boards and wreckage.

Van Deusen and three of his men were hanging in the water from a two-inch line suspended from the crib. Just as the line was burning away above the men's hands a yawl boat from the barge station, manned by two men, dashed into the veil of heat and smoke that enveloped the cries and rescued the four men on the rope at the risk of the boatmen's lives.

The men picked up in the water were brought to the city on the tug Sprankle. They were naked, exhausted and badly burned. Many of them were cut by falling timbers.

The crib is a total loss. It was a frame building, 20 by 50 feet, the sides sheathed with iron. It contained valuable machinery, the property of Shailer & Schninglau, contractors. Their loss will be $200,000.

Mayor Johnson expressed great indignation Wednesday when he learned that no boat or life preservers were provided as safety measures by the contractors at the crib. He declared that the case would receive the closest investigation, and that those found guilty of criminal negligence on the matter would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Late Wednesday afternoon Plummer Jones, of Warren, O., an employe of the tunnel contractors and one of a party of rescuers who descended into the shaft to look for the missing men, was overcome by gas and expired within a few minutes. His body lies in the tunnel 75 feet from the bottom of the shaft and is covered with water. The line attached to the body became fouled and could not be pulled out. David Kelly, another member of the rescuing party, was overcome by gas and is in a precarious condition.

No further attempts at work on the crib fire will be made Wednesday night. Superintendent Kingsley, of the water works department, and Director of Public Works Salen will visit the crib in the morning. The big fire tug Failly is stationed at the crib and is pumping air through a line of hose into the tunnel. This is entirely precautionary, it being the opinion of those informed that there are no more men in the tunnel.

THE FLAGSHIP CHICAGO.

Southampton Authorities Refused to Dock the Cruiser Unless She Discharged Her Ammunition.

London, Aug. 15.—Rr. Adm. Cromwell was in London Wednesday night trying to arrange to dock his flagship, the Chicago, at Southampton. The authorities there have refused to dock the cruiser unless she discharges all her ammunition, and the upshot will probably be that the Chicago will go to Havre or Portsmouth.

The fact that the United States cruiser Colombia docked at Southampton a few years ago for repairs caused the dock authorities to impose new regulations in order to avoid responsibilities. The Southampton dock is a private, and not a government, institution.

BATTLESHIP IOWA.

When She Arrives at San Francisco She Will Receive Orders to Proceed at Once to Panama.

Washington, Aug. 17.—A telegram has been prepared at the navy department to go forward to the Iowa immediately upon her arrival at San Francisco, ordering her to prepare at once to go to sea. When she advises the department that she is ready an order will follow for her to proceed at once to Panama. The little cruiser Ranger, which is at San Diego, was ordered to sail Friday. It is not believed that there will be any delay in her departure, as she has had several days' notice in which to prepare for the sea. She is very slow, however, making not more than six knots, and as the distance to Panama is about 2,700 miles, it would require about 15 days for her to reach her destination. The department, therefore, decided to dispatch the Iowa as soon as the battleship arrives at San Francisco and can prepare for the trip.

San Francisco, Aug. 17.—The battleship Iowa arrived from Puget sound.

The gunboat Bennington, which has been in Oriental waters for about two years, arrived in port after a run of 52 days from Hong-Kong, 37 from Shanghai, 26 from Yokohama and 7½ from Honolulu.

BRITISH SCOUTS CAPTURED.

They Were Surrounded in the Hills By a Superior Force of Boers and Surrendered.

London, Aug. 17.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, August 16:

"While a party of 50 of French's scouts were proceeding to join a column near Bethesda they were surrounded in the hills by a superior force under Theron and surrendered. One was killed and three were wounded, Capt. Bethelheim dangerously."

Lord Kitchener does not give the date, but the casualty list indicates August 8.

Durban, Aug. 17.—Lord Kitchener, with a strong force, is moving on Hondweni, on the border of Zululand, where Gen. Botha is reported to have concentrated 4,000 Boers. An important engagement is expected to ensue.

CAUGHT IN MILWAUKEE.

An Alleged Forger and Embezzler From Duisburg, Germany, Is Placed Under Arrest.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Shadowed by the police of Paris, hounded by the detectives of Scotland Yard, looked for by the sleuths of New York, Philadelphia and Cincinnati, Garhardt Terlinden, of Duisburg, Germany, accused of forgery and embezzlement by the German government, was captured in Milwaukee by Chicago Pinkertons and brought to this city for safekeeping. The prisoner is wanted by the German authorities for having forged and hypothecated 1,500,000 marks worth of charters and securities, the property of the Gnrhardt Terlinden Co., of Duisburg, of which he was manager.

BRICKMASONS' WAGES.

An Increase For Those Employed in the Navy Yards Rests With the Naval Board.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Mr. Hackett, acting secretary of the navy, refused to comply with a request made by representatives of a local bricklayers union that the wages of the 75 or more brickmasons now employed at the Washington navy yard be increased from $4 a day to rates ranging from $4.50 to $5 a day. Such an increase must rest upon a recommendation by the naval board which does not meet until November 1 next.

WILL INVESTIGATE.

Charges That Veterans at Sandusky Soldiers' Home Were Harnessed Like Horses.

Sandusky, O., Aug. 17.—Gov. Nash is expected to be present at the meeting of the board of trustees of the Soldiers' home. It is reported that he comes to investigate charges against the commandant, Gen. T. M. Anderson, whom he appointed. Anderson is charged with having harnessed veterans to a lawn mower and forced them during the hot weather to pull the machine. One is alleged to have died and another is said to be now in the hospital.

Roosevelt at Home.

New York, Aug. 17.—Vice President Roosevelt returned to the city from the west. He went at once to Roosevelt hospital, where his eldest daughter, Alice, is a patient, an abscess having been removed from her cheek. The vice president remained at the hospital Friday night, and went to Oyster bay Saturday.

Southampton, Aug. 17.—The American line steamer St. Paul, which sailed from here for New York Saturday, took among her passengers Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohio, and George Westinghouse.

Victim of a Knock Out Blow.

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 17.—John Dion, the boxer, who was knocked out in the ninth round of a 20-round bout with Charles Armstrong at the Knickerbocker club here Thursday night, died from his injuries Friday.

A GREAT TIDAL WAVE.

Loss of Life and Property at Port Eads, La., and Vicinity.

Logging Camps and Mill Manufacturers Suffered Considerable Loss By Breaking of Booms —Schooner Demasted.

New Orleans, Aug. 16.—The storm which has been sweeping the gulf coast from Pensacola and moving westward during the past two days has prostrated telegraph and telephone wires to such an extent that news from the outlying sections is hard to get. The greatest fears have been entertained for the safety of the people living at Port Eads, at the mouth of the Mississippi river, and for the ships that started for sea just before the storm began. The wires to Port Eads have been prostrated since Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, but the Pleayune reached a man who left there at 2 o'clock Wednesday. He was at Buras, which is 60 miles down the river, and the farthest point with which there is wire communication at the present time. This man describes the storm which swept that section as a regular tidal wave, similar to the one which resulted in such awful loss of life in 1893. He says all the people living on the east bank of the river have moved up to the "jump," which is 15 miles from the mouth of the river.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 17.—The storm has passed and seems to have done no great damage anywhere except along the river below the city, six fatalities occurring near the river's mouth. In the city the only injury was to lakeside resorts and to the section flooded by the break in a canal bank, which was closed before morning. Rice and orange farms on the lower coast were severely injured. The inhnbitants there believe that they were struck by a tidal wave combined with a cyclone. The lives lost were half a mile above quarantine. A large house was overturned with 15 in it, and Mrs. Rosa Walker, her 10-year-old daughter, Ida Walker, Miss Birdie Cobden and Miss Ella Cobden were drowned.

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 17.—The tropical storm which came up out of the south Wednesday and increased in force during the day following is believed to have been the severest in the vicinity of Mobile. The highest wind blew at the rate of 70 miles an hour for some time. Various reports of the drowning of men in the bay have reached here, but it is impossible to confirm them, owing to the complete demolition of all means of communication.

The pleasure yacht Arlel, bound for Fish river with a party of Mobile people on board, is reported to have pounded to pieces on the wharf at Battles, on the eastern shore of the bay. Nothing has been heard of the crew.

Nothing has been heard from Fort Morgan. Two companies of the coast artillery are stationed there. The barracks undoubtedly received the full force of the blow.

No communication can be had with any of the islands in Mississippi sonnd, just outside the bar, 43 miles below here. Any news concerning the fate of the islanders must come by boat, and this is anxiously awnited.

The fruit steamer Herald, from Porto Cortez, arrived late Friday night. She reports speaking a two-masted schooner 65 miles southeast of this port, totally dismnntled. The captain of the schooner declined nssistance. Logging camps and mill mannfacturers have suffered considerable loss by the break of booms. Saw logs and squared timber drifted into Mobile all day, much of it coming up on Royal street, three blocks from the water front.

Montgomery, Aln., Aug. 17.—The storm from the gulf did considerable damage in central Alabama.

Specials from Selma and Troy say that cotton and corn were prostrated around those towns, and the loss to the farmers will be heavy. Trees were uprooted and houses unroofed, but so far no loss of life has been reported.

At Selma, a raft anchored in the Alabama river and supporting a big pile driver was sunk, carrying the machinery, valued at $2,000, to the bottom.

In Augusta county the estimated damage to the cotton crop varies from 10 to 30 per cent. Late corn is prostrated.

Business Part Almost Wiped Out.

Burlington, Ia., Aug. 17.—The business portion of Seaton, Ill., was almost wiped out by fire. The loss is estimated at about $50,000, with insurance about half. The fire was started by the upsetting of a lamp at a dance. Among the burned buildings were Elricks' opera house, the post office, the Independent newspaper office, Connors' hotel and eight other business houses.

To Aid the Strikers.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 16.—The national socialist party Thursday sent out an appeal calling upon their socialist branches to do all in their power to aid the Amalgamated strikers. The socialist organization numbers nearly 130,000 throughout the country.

Bugs Destroy Wheat.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 16.—Bugs have appeared in large numbers in fields of volunteer wheat and threaten to destroy the second growth as completely as they did the first crop early in the spring.

Arms and the Lady.

"Isn't it marvelous!" said the young man as they stood looking at the armless wonder. "He can feed himself without hands; he can write his name; he can thread a needle; he can paint a picture, and he can whittle."

The girl drew a long sigh and said:

"Yes, it is astonishing!"

"See, he is going to play the piano with his toes. Why, that man doesn't need arms. Of what use would they be to him if he had them?"

"Well," she said, rather low, so that the crowd couldn't hear, "they might come in handy if he were out calling, and it was along about nine or ten o'clock, and the lights were turned down, and—and—"

But the master of ceremonies called out: "Now, ladies and gentlemen, if you will just step this way," and there was a rush in which she and her companion were swept down to where the man with the rubber skin was beginning his interesting and instructive performance.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Friendship's Tribute.

The man at whose funeral they were assembled hadn't drawn a sober breath during the last 15 years of his life, and had been noted for always being in trouble with his neighbors. "Well," said one of his old acquaintances, turning sadly away after the services were over, "he was a man of mighty reglar habits."—Chicago Tribune.

STRIKE IS SPREADING.

The Bay View Men at Milwaukee, Wis., Go Out.

Strikers Will Undoubtedly Make An Effort to Induce the New Men to Quit Work and There May Be Trouble.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 17.—The 600 employes of the National galvanizing works, an adjunct of the National Tube Co. at McKeesport, have joined the strikers. This closes every plant in McKeesport.

The center of interest in the steel strike has shifted to the west, where Joliet finally swung into line with the strikers and Milwaukee is likely to follow suit. The news that came out of the west cheered the strikers throughout the districts in this vicinity as no other development since the labor war was declared. In their enthusiasm they count on favorable action at Milwaukee, and, carrying their hopes still farther, say that they will yet win Chicago over. These successes, they declare with apparent confidence, will make them masters of the situation and win the strike. The steel operators, on the other hand, say that the strikers are nearly at floodtide of their success, and that when the ebb comes it can never be stopped. They do not seem to be disturbed by recent events, and with a confidence equal to that of the strikers, talk of the certainty of ultimate success.

The strike leaders are extending their operations to Duquesne and Homestead, the two great strongholds of the Carnegie Co., and claim to be gaining ground at both places. The recent gains here and at Joliet will bring the total men brought out by the third and final call of President Shaffer to about 30,000, and press the grand total to something over 70,000. Thousands of the men out have found other work, and the exact number now idle is unknown. The Amalgamated association is organizing a series of employment bureaus and plans to place many more of the idle men. President Shaffer announced Friday that after September 1 idle Amalgamated men would receive strike benefits of $1 a week apiece, and that some provision would be made for outside the organization.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 19.—The Bay View men will strike. The vote on President Shaffer's order is said to have been unanimous after a session of the lodge lasting five hours. The plant of the Illinois Steel Co. at Bay View will be shut down indefinitely and about 1,400 men will be rendered idle.

Everything is quiet at Bay View Sunday. The majority of the strikers remained at their homes, but some of them gathered in little knots on the streets and discussed the strike. The fires at the Bay View plant have been put out with the exception of the blast furnaces, the output of which is not operated in this city. It is said that 400 men are employed in the blast furnaces. Some of the leaders at Bay View hope for a compromise between the United States steel corporation and the Amalgamated association within the next two weeks.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—The situation at the Illinois steel works at South Chicago was unchanged Sunday night. The report that the Amalgamated men employed at the mills who last week refused to obey Prest Shaffer's order to strike were to hold a conference with Assistant Secretary Tighe, of the Association, looking to a reconsideration of their action, was unfounded.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 19.—A party of strike breakers brought up from the south by special train were safely delivered in the steel mill at Monessen early Sunday morning, and the United States steel corporation expects to add that plant to the number running partly or in full with non-union men within the next 24 hours. The Carnegie properties also resumed Sunday night without a break in the forces operating them, and that fact, joined with a promise of an early start at Monessen, leads the steel officials here to take a very hopeful view of the situation. The strikers claim that men enough to start the Monessen mills can not be obtained, and that they have not yet shown their hand at Duquesne and other Carnegie plants. They promise that developments will indicate their strength to better advantage.

It was anticipated that there would be trouble when the non-union men reached Monessen. The strikers were watching the railroads and river, and had expressed a determination to prevent the entrance of the strike breakers.

The men who were handling the movement for the steel corporation successfully veiled their action, however, and had their charges safely within the plants hours before it was known definitely by any one on the outside that the men had arrived.

A Blank Sent to the Steel Trust.

Columbus, O., Aug. 15.—Secretary of State Laylin sent the following notice Wednesday to Charles M. Schwab, of the steel trust, at Pittsburg: "Dear Sir—Your attention is called to the requirements of the laws of the state of Ohio upon corporations of other states doing business in Ohio, and you are requested to fill out and return to this office the accompanying blank." The blank contains questions on how the United States steel corporation does its business in Ohio.

OUR PENSIONERS.

The Number on the Rolls June 30, Last, Was 997,735, a Gain of 4,206 Over 1900.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Commissioner Evans has prepared a statement showing the operations in principal features of the pension bureau during the last fiscal year as compared with former years. Most of the data will be embodied in his annual report, and the statement is prepared for the use of the national encampment of the G. A. R., which will be held before the report is ready.

It shows that the number of pensioners on the rolls August 30 last was 997,735 a net gain of 4,206 over last year. The total net loss to the roll during the year was 43,586, which includes 38,153 by death, 853 by remarriage, 1,582 by minors reaching the age of 16, 1,538 by failure to claim pension, and 1,460 from other causes. A comparative table shows that the roll for the year just closed is the "high water mark" in the history of the pension bureau, the next highest having been reached in 1894. Of the gains in the rolls during the year 3,849 were from the war with Spain. The losses included two from the revolution, 215 from the war of 1812, 826 from the war with Mexico, and 544 from the Indian wars. The gains to the roll also were 13,334 widows of the civil war and 5,604 from the Spanish war; total, 18,938. The net gain to the rolls in the four years was 4,021.

Pensions granted to widows under the act of June 27, 1890, during the year numbered 10,010, or nearly 4,500 in excess of those granted the previous year.

Survivors, 8,655; invalids, 739,994; widows, 249,086. These comprise 13,124 widows and the 8,655 survivors on account of old wars prior to 1861; 297,675 invalids and 88,802 on account of general laws, disability of service origin, mostly civil war; 438,114 invalids and 145,141 widows on account of the June, 1890, act, civil war disability not due to service; 650 army nurses, and 3,555 invalids and 3,349 widows on account of the war with Spain.

The total amount paid to pensioners as first payments on the allowance of their claim during 1901 was $29,934,764, or $106,238 more than the first payments during 1900. This amount represents the arrears of pensions, aggregating 675 claims allowed, to an average of nearly $1,300 each.

The fees paid to attorneys amounted to $591,345, an increase of almost $74,000, due to the Spanish war. At least 100,000 of the medical examinations held during the year amounted unfavorably to the claimants. The amount paid to pensioners under the general law during the year was $27,867,233, decrease of $1,790,233 from the amount paid last year.

IN A RUNAWAY.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19.—While out driving with United States District Attorney Evans Saturday the horses became frightened and ran away.

Mr. Evans jumped first and received slight injury, but when Mr. Fairbanks attempted to escape he jumped in such a manner that he landed upon his head with great violence. Disabled as he was, Mr. Evans went to the assistance of the senator, who had been rendered unconscious by the fall, and friendly hands soon conveyed him to the Evans home, where he was immediately placed in bed, physicians called and efforts made to restore him to consciousness. For half an hour he remained unconscious, but finally came to himself and his wounds were dressed. The doctors hope to have him out of bed in a day or two.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 19.—Juan Robeles, a Mexican boy 16 years old, was saved from a horrible fate Sunday by a posse which went from here to a settlement of Yaqui Indians, where the boy was about to be put to death by torture for having killed Azula, an Indian, for beating a squaw. THE PHILIPPINE WAR.

Gen. MacArthur Says It Has Laid Waste Part of the Islands.

Throughout Northern Luzon the Insurrection Has Been Dead For Some Time and There Is Freedom of Movement.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—The transport Sheridan arrived Sunday from Manila with Gen. MacArthur and staff and the 14th infantry, under command of Col. Quinton, composing her passenger list.

In an interview Gen. MacArthur said:

"War has wrecked the Philippines and laid waste whole districts. The people in many districts have relapsed into barbarism. The best conditions prevail in Northern Luzon. You may say that the whole territory is pacified, but not tranquilized, but it will not be many months before law and order are observed everywhere.

"While the conditions are not perfect, they are gratifying. A few groups of armed insurgents are still at large, but they will soon surrender, as their power is broken and they are not being aided by the natives. These natives have come to see that surrender does not mean death, and they are coming in every week with their rifles.

"Throughout Northern Luzon the insurrection has been dead for some time, and there is freedom of movement. Still a large criminal class there commits depredations on Americans and natives, though the latter suffer the most severely. The natives are eagerly seeking the establishment of civil government that they may root out these bands of criminals. There is every reason to believe that the whole country will soon be perfectly safe for travelers.

"At present there is some trouble in Samar, but Gen. Hughes, with a large and effective force, has gone after them and will soon bring the insurgents to their senses. That is the worst place, but it is not interfering with the coast business. In Cebu and Bohul and Ocnadi, in Southern Luzon, there is a slight outbreak, but it is caused by the criminal element.

"The civil commission was about to put in force some excellent ideas for the municipal government of the city of Manila when I left. The city is in excellent condition, especially in its sanitary departments, and its growth in business has been enormous."

MANY LIVES LOST.

The Steamer Islander Struck An Iceberg and Went Down Off Douglass Island.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 19.—The steamer Islander, of the Alaskan route, operated by the Canadian Pacific Navigation Co., of this city, struck an iceberg off Douglass island at 2 o'clock on the morning of Thursday last and went to the bottom, carrying down from 65 to 80 souls, including passengers and members of the crew. Some of the survivors arrived here Sunday evening by the steamer Queen. They report that as the vessel went down her boilers exploded, causing the death of many who might have escaped. Capt. Foote was on the bridge when the vessel struck, and stayed there and went down with his steamer.

There was $275,000 in gold aboard the steamer, $100,000 of which was carried by passengers. H. H. Hart, who has spent 16 years in the Klondike, lost $35,000 in dust. Some say that Capt. Foote reached a raft, but when he saw the extent of the distance jumped overboard.

George McL. Brown, executive agent of the Canadian Pacific railroad, after interviewing the officers and passengers who returned, said:

"The purser is remaining in the north attending to the forwarding of through passengers. It is impossible to give an exact list of those lost, but from the fact that 113 were saved the number lost must be very much below the figures mentioned. In my opinion the loss of life will not exceed 20."

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

ENDED IN A TRAGEDY.

The Second Chapter in the Marshall Elopement Scandal at Nicholasville.

Nicholasville, Ky., Aug. 15.—Chapter II. in the Marshall elopement scandal proved a tragedy. John Marshal, a prominent and wealthy farmer, was shot and almost instantly killed by J. E. Higgs, who runs a grocery on South Main street. The trouble dates back to the time Mrs. Marshall, wife of the dead man, startled her friends by eloping with E. Milton Van Avery, alias E. T. Caiman, to whom she was married at Jeffersonville.

Higgs participation in the affair was accomplished in a rather innocent way. Mrs. Marshall, according to a statement made by Higgs' father, sent a note to Van Avery by J. E. Higgs. Of this fact some one informed Mr. Marshall, whereupon he became enraged, roundly abusing Higgs.

During the stormy session which occurred at Higgs' place of business Marshall also charged him with being the intermediary through which his wife's affections were alienated. Higgs, sr., says Marshall also attempted to shoot his son during the interview.

DEBENTURE COMPANIES.

Gov. Beckham Made a Request of Inspector Harry Hines to Inspect Them.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 15.—Gov. Beckham has requested State Inspector Harry Hines to make an investigation of certain investments and debenture companies doing business in this state. This is the result of a conference between Attorney General Breckinridge and United States Assistant Attorney General I. N. Thier, for the post office department at Washington, and Attorney General Sheets, of Ohio, and also because many Kentuckians have filed charges against the so-called investment companies. While the governor has recommended the investigation of this matter, it has been found that the state inspector is powerless to act, as there is no law empowering him to make the investigation. It is probable that at the next meeting of the legislature special legislation will be used against these companies.

There were no witnesses. McNamara died while en route to the hospital in an ambulance.

The McNamara family is wealthy, and the men, six brothers, have been a power in politics. Three of them had killed their man, and none had been punished, although one, "King" McNamara, the youngest, is now a fugitive, for whom there is a reward of $1,500.

John L. Jones and wife pleasantly entertained quite a large number of their old and young friends at their hospitable home, last Thursday.

Gen. Z. T. Baker, one of our shrewd stock dealers, has been handling some very fine stock this season, for which he has been receiving top prices on the Cincinnati market.

G. Wash Roberts, now of Mt. Zion, Grant county, was visiting the haunts of his youth at the Springs, last Sunday, where he has a host of well to-do relatives and friends.

Chas. Burris is building a large and convenient barn on his farm near here. Mr. Burris is one of our progressive farmers and keeps abreast of the times with his farm business.

W. C. Johnson and George Slayback who have been handling T. J. Hughes' steam thresher the past season, have run the machine into the barn, having had a good run of threshing.

Born, to Hugh French and wife, Saturday, August 10th, a bouncing baby boy. Hugh says he spends some of the happiest moments of his life entertaining the new arrival.

Quite a number of our young gentlemen, who owed their distant relatives a long delayed visit, took advantage of the sitting of the grand jury, last week and paid it. They owe much to the grand jury.

As expressed by a lady of culture at the club last Friday night, this drought takes the cake, corn bread and whole ten service. The outlook for a crop was never more discouraging within the memory of the present generation.

The last issue of the Recorder will be preserved by a large number of its delighted readers, owing to its illustrative feature, which bespeaks a kindly interest in our prominent county gentlemen, on the part of its clever editor Success to the old county news buget.

Jim Carpenter, than whom there is no better fellow, comes through Midway regularly every Saturday afternoon, dispensing Porterhouse steak to his many customers. The children are always delighted when Jim comes along, tooting "Goo Goo Eyes" on his silver cornet.

Mr. Lee Conley and wife and child, of Indianapolis, Indiana, were visiting Lee's mother near here the past week. He is an old Beaver product, and left here years ago to engage with a telephone company, with which he still remains, and we are glad to hear he is doing well.

Last week the base ball club composed of players from the different parts of the county advertised that it was going to Williamstown, last Saturday, to take the scalp of the club at that place. The club went according to the announcement, but utterly failed to take the scalp it went after, but, on the other hand, got most beautifully scalped, the score being 19 to 13 in favor of the Grant county talent. The game was a grand slugging exhibition on the part of each club, and the fielders were worn out chasing flies over the Grant county hills and through corn fields and tobacco patches. The visitors were accorded nice treatment, made partial arrangements to play the Williamstown team two games here on the first Monday in September. These will be two good games.

The attendance at court this week is very small. If a person did not know it he could not tell that court is in session.

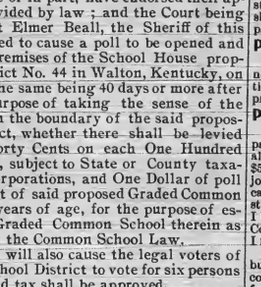
A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.



Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Columbia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of disentery. Everything I perscribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by all druggists.

WOMAN'S RELIEF

A really healthy woman has little pain or discomfort at the menstrual period. No woman needs to have any. Wine of Cardui will quickly relieve those smarting menstrual pains and the dragging head, back and side aches caused by falling of the womb and irregular menses.

WINE OF CARDUI

has brought permanent relief to 1,000,000 women who suffered every month. It makes the menstrual organs strong and healthy. It is the provision made by Nature to give women relief from the terrible aches and pains which blight so many homes.

GREENWOOD, La., Oct. 14, 1900.

I have been very sick for some time. I was taken with a severe pain in my side and could not get any relief until I tried a bottle of Wine of Cardui. Before I had taken all of it I was relieved. I feel it my duty to say that you have a wonderful medicine.

For Sale..

Richards & Roberts have four good work and driving horses for sale. Can be seen at their livery stable in Walton, Ky.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes. If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 09, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1901. NO. 45.

THE question as to when the Democratic National Convention adopted the two-thirds rule has been asked hereabout repeatedly. In Shepherd's Life of Martin Van Buren, the following information on that subject is found:

"When the convention met in Baltimore, Md., on May 27, 1844, the real contest over the two thirds rule came. It was adopted to give the southern delegates who had been chosen previous to Van Buren's letter opposing the annexation of Texas, an opportunity to escape voting for him. Senator Walker, of Mississippi, lead the southern delegates. He quoted the precident of 1832, when Van Buren had been nominated for Vice-President under the two thirds rule, and that of 1835 when he had been nominated for President. In 1844 the rule had not been adopted."

Hon. Ollie James, one of the First District's Democratic idols, was in the city Saturday night enroute home from attending the convention at Bardwell. He remained over several hours. To a Leader representative he stated that he had visited many portions of the district and had found the prospect very bright, and had met with more encouragement than he had expected. He will make the race for Congress to succeed Chas Wheeler, and will begin an active canvass at an early date. He will stump every section of the district with his opponents.—Fulton Ledger.

THE Kenton county Republicans are going to put up their strongest ticket, believing that they can win at the polls this fall, and owing to the racket Col. Davezac and some of his friends have been making since the Colonel's defeat for the nomination for county clerk, they certainly have grounds for their hopes. The Kenton county Democrats will have to pull together if they desire to win this fall.

Now the French are claiming that Paris is "tough" because the Americans who go there demand a wide open town with the limit taken off. Possibly that is true, after all; certain it is, at least, that Americans do things in Paris that they would never think of doing at home.

SAPP appointed five of the committee of ten which is to take charge of the Republican primary in Louisville, and three of the other five are of the Sapp crowd which was but recently charged with burglary and arson at the primary which was so corrupt as to have to be declared off.

THE State Treasury is in good condition, as shown by report a few days since. There were no outstanding claims and money in the treasury. The boys in charge at Frankfort are handling the State's financial affairs in a business like and satisfactory manner.

AN appeal for aid has been made by the people of Zapta county, Texas, as a consequence of a drought of fifteen months. No crops were planted there last spring, and cattle and other stock are dying. The condition of the people is deplorable.

THE dispatches from South Africa bear a suspicious resemblance to those Weyler sent from Cuba. Every day or so, we have a list of forty Boers killed, 500 cows captured, and one Britisher wounded slightly.

THE whole people of Kentucky were uneasy about the life of their young Governor's wife, last week, but they are now rejoicing because of her certain recovery.

THE Courier-Journal's Conclave edition was the greatest paper that ever appeared in Kentucky. It was too immense for description.

BOTH sides of the steel strike have lots of confidence, but money talks all the same, these days, and neither is making much.

THE River and Harbor bill and the Ship Subsidy bill compose a heavy load for the Republican party to carry.

PARLIAMENT has adjourned once more—but the Boers are keeping in continuous session, all the same.

JUDGE LASSING, assisted by Judge Menifee, put the docket of the Boone Circuit Court, at the recent term, in the best shape it has been in for years. Everything was tried that was ready, and the docket was in a manner cleared.

LOUISVILLE has been captured by the Knight Templars, who will carry the keys to the Falls City all this week. The request in Louisville this week is, "if you don't see what you want, ask for it, and it will be forthcoming.

THE Democratic county committee of Trimble county wants it understood that it will not issue a certificate of nomination to any candidate who either by himself or his friends, uses money or whisky to secure votes at the primary election. That is a good idea if carried out.

THAT Democratic bolt that was threatened in Ohio immediately after the State Convention has fizzled out, not enough bolters showing up at the proposed convention, out of which to construct a State ticket, and some of those who were nominated refused to accept. Mr. Bryan's advice seems to have prevailed.

Crop and Stock.

In view of the drouth the State Board of Agriculture of Missouri, and others urge the importance of sowing rye for fall and spring pasture.

Jas. Jones, of Pine Grove, sold last week to Dan Scott about 45 acres of corn in the field at $2.50 per barrel. It will make about 10 barrels to the acre.

J. M. Bailey, of Knott county, sold to C. E. Smith of Lexington, $55,000 worth of white oak trees in Knox county. The purchase was made for dealers in Vienna.

The cucumber crop over almost the entire country is a total failure, and dealers say pickles will disappear from the market by Christmas. There will be no pumpkin pies because there will be no pumpkins.

Director Sage, of the Iowa weather and crop service reports that a second tassel is developing there on the corn that was drying up before the rains. This is almost too good to be true. It means a corn crop after all in many sections where all hope of one had been given up.—Indiana Farmer.

A farmer tells us that in gathering roasting ears the other day, he found many ears filling out with new grains at the small end, and he thinks he will have almost as good a crop this year as heretofore. He said he remembered one year when heavy rains set in after a drought, causing the ordinary small end of the ear to be the larger of the two.—Harrodsburg Sayings.

The drouth in Grant county has been thoroughly broken. Showers have fallen for the past seven days, and Tuesday afternoon a heavy rain, which thoroughly soaked the ground, fell. While the rain has come too late to help the corn materially, should the frost keep off until late, there will be more than a half crop of tobacco in Grant county. The average for corn in the county will not reach three barrels per acre.—Williamstown Courier.

Fifteen car loads of Russian hard wheat, which is a part of the consignment which left Odessa, Russia, four weeks ago, arrived in Kansas City, last week, and is being placed in the government warehouse. Four more car loads are yet to come. There are 14,449 bushels of wheat in the consignment, and it is to be distributed for seed purposes in Kansas and Oklahoma. It is the greatest shipment of hard wheat ever brought to this country. The purpose is to improve the quality of Kansas hard wheat for export flour and the importation is the result of experiments made by B. Warltanline, of Halstead, Kansas. The wheat is in two-bushel sacks. and will be distributed from the government warehouse to points on the Rock Island and Santa Fe railways. J. Bookwalter, of the Niland Grain Company, of that city, will have charge of the distribution. The cost of laying the wheat down in Kansas City was $2.23 a bushel.

SUNSHINE AND MIST.

An hour ago—but one short hour—
The landscape lay all clear and bright,
The hills, in majesty and power,
Stood forth all bathed in radiant light;
The woods near by—the grand old trees,
That hid the shadows at their feet,
Stood crowned with sunlight, as at ease,
And glad once more the sun to greet.

One hour ago, all nature seemed
Reflecting back the smile of God,
The glory of His sunlight streamed
On all anear and far abroad;
It seemed as though to earth again
Had come the beauty and the joy
Of that so brief Edenic reign,
Ere sin its beauty did destroy.

A single hour, and what a change
Has come, so sudden and complete,
The eye no longer has a range
Beyond a few and near-by feet!
A dense gray mist has come between,
And blotted every charm from sight;
The outlook, which so bright had been,
Lies shrouded in the gray of night.

And comes there not in all our lives
Just some such darkened hour as this,
When gloomy fear the soul deprives
Of all that makes for rest and bliss?
When God seems far, and all the hills
Whence comes our strength are hid from sight,
When gloomy fear usurping fills
Our souls with darkness of the night?

But mists cannot endure for aye,
They soon dissolve in drops of rain;
The sunshine through them finds its way,
The hills of God stand out again.
The smile of God illumines all!
How foolish now our fancies seem,
As fades away the gloomy pall,
Like some dissolving night-time dream!

COLEBY'S GOOSE.

By C. Lauren Hooper.

IT was an afternoon in June, and we boys were lounging on the banks of Coleby's pond. It was cool there in the shade, and we felt very comfortable as we watched old Coleby, the blacksmith, at work in his hot, grimy shop just across the sheet of water that bore his name, and which served as a sea for his stately fleet of geese.

Coleby was an honest old German. He owed no man a cent, and was careful that no man should long owe him one.

Just and exact in his dealings, he expected men to be just and exact with him. Nevertheless, he was unfortunate enough to have provoked the mirth of us boys, and, as we lay there in the shade that afternoon, we amused ourselves in a manner that pleased us highly, but sent him to the verge of distraction.

"Coleby, Coleby, bring back that goose!" we cried, with the rythmic swing of the voice with which the charcoal-vender cries his ware through the streets. "Coleby, Coleby, bring back that goose!"

Coleby's goose—that is, the one of the flock that was celebrated in our monotonous song—had one day strayed from the rest as they plucked grass on the common by the pond, and was last seen, as one of the boys told Coleby, near an inverted yawl, raised a few feet from the ground by standards, and used as a hen-coop by a fisherman who lived in the vicinity.

Coleby mourned the loss of his goose, and suspected that some of his disreputable neighbors had taken her.

Having failed to discover the fate of the fowl, he sallied forth one night to investigate. The first place he went to was the fisherman's.

Now, Coleby wouldn't really have gone into his neighbor's coop without just reason, but he had a right to his suspicions, so he only listened quietly outside, with his ear against the weather-beaten yawl.

Suddenly, Coleby heard the drowsy "honk" of a goose—such a "honk" as a homesick goose might make if she were dreaming of a voyage with the fleet on Coleby's pond.

Coleby well knew that the fisherman only had three chickens, two ducks and a drake, and not a goose to his name; so he concluded that the fowl within was his.

Stealthily entering the coop, he took the goose under his arm, but, unused to such treatment, the goose made such an outcry and fuss for freedom that the fisherman was aroused and hastened to the coop door, where he met Coleby, who had finally secured and quieted the frightened bird.

"Here, sir!" said the fisherman; "whose goose is that?"

"It ain'd your goose already," said Coleby. "It's mine goose."

"What do you keep her in my coop for, then?" shouted the fisherman.

"Shame on you," said Coleby, "for stealing a poor goose—a poor goose vat vas lost!"

"Steal it!" shouted the fisherman. "I steal your goose! What do you mean?"

"How did yer goose get in your coop if you did't steal it?" Coleby asked, angrily.

And so the quarrel went on.

The fisherman was enraged. He said he hadn't stolen the goose, and didn't even know it was in his coop.

Coleby would listen to no explanation, but went away triumphant, saying he would have the law on the fisherman, if any more of his geese were missing.

The next day the fisherman told it over the village that Coleby had been out raiding the coops, and had come for one of his ducks and chickens, but the goose already stolen made such a noise that it aroused him, and he came upon the scene only to be accused of having stolen a goose that he knew had not been in his coop.

No honest fisherman, he said, would stand being duped like that, and it was perfectly plain that Coleby had stolen the goose somewhere and took that ingenious way of throwing the guilt on some one else.

In fact a goose happened to be missing from the flock of another neighbor and never was heard of after, so far as I know. Thus the joke was on poor Coleby.

So we lay there in the shade that summer afternoon, and with a persistency that never flagged, we sang in rhythmic monotone:

"Coleby, Coleby, bring back that goose! Coleby, Coleby, bring back that goose!"

The anvil rang louder than ever and the sparks flew madly as Coleby's hammer beat down with fury. He became angrier each minute until at last, in a blind rage, he ran to the edge of the pond, brandishing in his hands a pair of tongs.

He swung them around his head and hurled them at us with the utmost strength of his brawny arm.

"Take dat goose vunce!" he cried, and the tongs went straddling through the air and fell ker-chug right in the middle of the pond.

We boys really knew more about the history of that goose than anyone suspected or we cared to tell.

Alf Waters had caught her in a fence corner and had imprisoned her in his father's unused stable, and all to hear what a fuss Coleby would make, for nothing enraged him so much as a depredation committed on his geese.

Three nights after having taken the goose, Alf tired of his sport, and taking her under his arm he carried her to Coleby's coop. Coleby's coop was locked. What could Alf do? He had no intention of keeping the goose, for he was one of the best fellows that ever lived.

"Now," thought Alf, "I will put poor goosey where she will be comfortable for the night, and in the morning she will go home herself."

The first place Alf thought of was the upturned boat the fisherman used for a coop, and in five minutes the goose was comfortably settled on the ground with the two ducks and drake, while the three chickens slept on the roost above.

There! Alf had done his duty, and it was just in time, for scarcely half an hour afterward Coleby and the fisherman met at the coop door, and each thought the other a thief.

The summer days were filled with the round of boyish pleasures, and, although I say it with regret, we boys frequently requested Coleby, in our most musical tones, to "bring back that goose." And Coleby himself became so angry at us that we would scarcely dare to go near his shop.

But there came an end to our teasing and his anger, and this was how it happened:

Coleby's pond is made by a dam built across Fall creek just half a mile above its union with the Ohio. The dam had been built a long time, and the mill that stood by it was out of repair. We boys used it for general amusement purposes and the fisherman kept his boats there.

Below the dam on the side next the old mill was a deep pool, in which we boys delighted to swim, and into which we used to dive from a long beam that stuck out over it. This beam lay on the floor of the mill, from one side and end of which the weather-beaten dam had been torn by destructive hands. From the beam's end dangled a rope which secured one of the fisherman's boats as it lay on the water below.

One afternoon Alf and I went down to the old mill to see the boys dive. We met Coleby's geese as we went across the common, and they hissed at us, for they liked us no better than did Coleby himself. We cared not a bit for that, so we went on to the pond.

Ed Sawyer, Sam Parker and Tom Rummel were to have a contest for the championship in diving, and were to take the plunge from the long beam.

When we arrived at the mill, there sat six or eight boys on the floor along the open side of the mill, with their feet dangling over the water that lay cool and deep six feet below. They were talking of the merits of the boys who were to dive. Each one had his champion, and was asserting how much he would distance his competitors in the contest.

"Rummel's going to win," said Bill Haines. "I saw him dive under a coal barge at New Albany last summer and come up on the other side, and I know Parker or Sawyer can't beat that."

"Sawyer can," put in Bob Wilkins, getting up and walking to the end of the beam to look out over the common, "and he'll soon show you that he can, for here he comes, and Parker is with him."

We all went to the openside of the mill and greeted the boys with cheers. Tom Rummel, too, was seen coming along by Coleby's shop.

The geese waddled along in the path before him, and in a spirit of fun he ran among them, scattering them right and left. He ran them about until the old gander rose into the air, followed by the whole flock.

They happened to fly toward us, and as their clipped wings could carry them no further, they lit by the mill only to receive a shower of stones, when they took to the water, one of them having been hit by a stone from Alf's hand.

The geese made such an outcry that Coleby came running from his shop, and would have punished Tom had he been able to catch him.

Tom ran to the mill and joined us in singing, "Coleby, Coleby, bring back that goose!" which he kept up until Coleby had done shaking his fist at us and had gone back into his shop. A few minutes later we were busily engaged in the diving contest.

The plan was for the three boys to stand together on the long beam and dive at the same time. Three dives were to be made, the boy remaining longest under water two times out of three to be declared winner.

If each boy won a dive, the contest was to be continued until one of them won two out of three.

To keep the beam from tipping when the boys, with Alf, who gave the signals, stood ready to dive, four or five of us stood on the other end and held it down.

Two dives had been made, Parker being winner in one and Rummel in the other, and very much excited, we stood waiting for the signal from Alf, who stood at the other end of the beam. The divers were poised for the leap, and we silently waited.

"One," said Alf, slowly and distinctly, "two, th—"

"Holt on dere—holt on dere!" exclaimed a familiar voice, in a warning tone.

And, grasping her by the neck, he held up a dead goose.

It was the goose that Alf had put in the fisherman's coop—the very one he had struck a few moments before with the stone. It had fallen out of sight behind a bowlder when hit, and we did not notice that it did not swim away with the others.

"Vat you call dis?" thundered the enraged man, "vat you call dis? I'll show you how to kill my geese."

And he rushed at us with the fury of a madman.

At the very first sight of Coleby, Alf had wound his leg around the rope at the end of the beam and slid down to the fisherman's boat.

Coleby did not see him, but came at the rest of us, brandishing the goose as if he meant to destroy us with it.

As he swung it around his head, we jumped from the beam and scattered in all directions. But we had forgotten. The beam, being left unbalanced, upreared and plunged the three boys with itself into the water.

There it stood, leaning up against the mill, its lower end deep down on the bottom of the stream.

The splashings of the boys in the water, our outcries as we ran here and there to keep out of harm's way, and above all, Coleby's cry of "I'll show you how to kill my geese!" made an uproar that was highly amusing.

Suddenly there came a cry of "Help! help!" We stopped. Coleby stopped, too, and the goose hung down on the floor.

Help! help!" came the cry from the boys in the water.

We ran to the end of the mill where the beam had lain. Rummel was diving down by it. Parker and Sawyer were swimming around, calling for help, shouting "Alf's drowning!" both too frightened to do anything.

There by the beam, sticking up out of the water, was the stern of the little boat, and by it Alf's hands were beating the water. Now he sank, now he rose, but his head did not rise above the water.

In an instant we saw it all. When the beam went down, Alf's leg was still wrapped around the rope, and it had carried him, boat and all down with it, and there he was, drowning before our very eyes.

"Quick—a knife!" I shouted, throwing off my clothes. An open pocket-knife was thrust into my hands. Holding it between my teeth, I plunged into the water.

Alf's leg was bound. I would cut the rope and save his life. But my mouth filled with water; I strangled and nearly lost my senses. I dived, seized the rope to cut it, but was so unnerved that I dropped the knife.

It was all up. Alf would drown. Already I saw him stretched out, pale and lifeless, his hair wet, his lips blue.

No, no; not so bad as that. While we quick-witted boys had exhausted our plans for a rescue, the slow old blacksmith was just beginning to act.

Slowly he took in the situation as he leaned against the upper end of the beam. Then he put his big hands against it and began to push. He pushed it out as far as he could reach, but that was not far enough. With all his massive strength, he pushed it again beyond the reach of his hands.

It stood upright for a moment, then fell forward with a great splash. It sank, it rose, and with it rose the little boat, half full of water, but in it was—Alf, strangling, half conscious, but saved.

One week from that day, five of us boys went over to see Colby. There were Ed Sawyer, Sam Parker, Tom Rummel, Alf Waters and I.

Alf carried a stuffed goose. It was the goose he had put in the fisherman's coop, and had finally killed. She looked as natural as if she were picking grass on the common, save that her eyes had a stare somewhat glassy, which was very natural for a stuffed goose.

I carried a pair of tongs. We had spent half a day in dragging the pond for them, and they were at last found, covered with mud. My sisters had gilded and covered them with ribbons until they were beautiful to behold.

The goose and the tongs were presented to Coleby awkwardly enough, forgetting all the fine speeches we had intended to make, but our sincerity was apparent when we confessed that we had done wrong, were sorry and wished to make a peace offering.

WON HIS BET.

How a Natick Man Got a Word with the Prince of Wales by Accident.

An old story of the king. When—as prince of Wales—he visited America in 1859, it was inevitable that all good Americans should wish to have speech with him, says London M. A. P. Now, at a place called Natick, not many miles from Boston, there lived one Barnes, who kept a hotel. Barnes was a good-natured fellow with a bad stammer, and was the butt of the practical jokes of such wags as there were in Natick. On the eve of the big parade in Boston, he announced his intention of going to see the prince.

"Whatever for?" said one of his friends. "You won't get near him, and ten to one you won't so much as get a glimpse of him."

"I'll b-b-b-b-et ten dollars that I'll g-g-g-et right up to him and t-t-t-alk to him, t-t-oo," stammered Barnes, greatly daring.

The bet was taken then and there, a committee was appointed to go to Boston with Barnes to see fair, and next morning he was piloted by its members to the city and up to the ropes which had been stretched to keep back the crowd. They could see the prince, but a squad of police prevented all outsiders from getting anywhere near him. Yet Mr. Barnes simply murmured:

"W-w-wait a minute." As he spoke the beautiful black horse which had been picked for the prince's riding was led up. He was very fresh—too fresh, as the sequel proved—but the grooms quieted him down well enough for the prince—then little more than a boy—to mount safely. But scarcely was he seated, when the horse began to plunge and rear very violently, so that the prince was unseated, landing on all fours on the turf. There was the wildest excitement on the part of the crowd nearest at hand, the police lost control—and Mr. Barnes' opportunity came. He dodged under the ropes and was the first to grab the bridle of the riderless horse.

The prince quickly rose and limped to the horse's head, while all circled round to learn if he were badly hurt.

"Your horse is feeling p-p-pretty good to-day, p-p-prince," remarked Barnes, as the prince came up.

"A little too good," was the terse reply.

Still holding the bridle, Barnes turned to the "committee," who were craning over the ropes, watching the incident with an excitement that had driven all thought of the ridiculous wager out of their heads.

"I guess I'll take that t-t-ten dollars now!" he shouted.

A SATISFIED AMBITION.

One Man Whose Craving to Be a Circus Man Was Satisfied in Short Order.

"I haven't been to a circus for 40 years," declared the well-known business man, with a chuckle, according to the Detroit Free Press. "The fact is that I always feel like leaving town whenever I hear that one is coming, for fear that I might meet the man to whom I hired out as a circus hand in the days when I was young.

"I suppose there is a period in every boy's life when his only ambition is to belong to a circus. I know there was in mine, and I had it satisfied in the shortest time on record. A small show had pitched its tents on the vile lage green in the little town where I lived, and I desired to adopt the profession right then and there. I applied to the boss for a job and was accepted on the spot as a razorback. What is a razorback? Well, he is a member of the loading gang. You unload in the morning and raise her back at night. I was simply appalled by the amount of work that came my way, followed by such profanity that I never hope to hear again. I was kept on the jump till midnight, when he had the outfit all loaded up, and I breathed a sigh of relief which quickly gave way to one of despair when the boss told me to drive the wagon that had the tents loaded on it. In those days the only means of traveling was by wagon.

"'Say, mister,' said I, timidly, 'when do we sleep?'

"'Sleep?' he roared; 'we don't sleep here!'

"I felt that was a fact, as I knew we had an all night's ride ahead of us, with the weary work of unloading as soon as we did arrive. But, as far as I was concerned, tired nature gave out and I was sound asleep before we had gone a mile. I awoke just as day was breaking and found myself on a lonely country road and without the slightest idea where I was. From a country boy who chanced to come along I learned that the town I was supposed to be headed for was 30 miles away, and that I was getting further away from it every minute. When I realized my position my teeth commenced to chatter. But suddenly a brilliant idea occurred to me.

"'Say,' said I to the boy, 'do you want a pass to the show?'

"'You bet,' said he.

"'Well,' said I, 'drive this wagon to the town where the show is and I will see that you get in. One of our elephants has escaped and I have got to capture him.'

"Then I made for home. I never heard what they did to that country boy when he arrived. I hope they didn't kill him."

SAVING CORN FODDER.

When Properly Preserved in a Dry State It Contains as Much Nutriment as Silage.

There is a growing interest in the preservation of corn fodder, and farmers are finding that cows do well upon corn fed in the husk. It has been my practice for several years to cut up the corn when about half the blades are ripened, and to feed it to my cows in winter letting them do the husking and the grinding. They do this work cheaper than I can do it. I do not feed ensilage. I sell my milk to the condensing factory, and our factory has not progressed far enough yet to take milk that is made from ensilage.

If dry corn fodder is properly preserved it will contain as much nutriment as ensilage does, and more. The trouble is that most of us do not properly save it. When a boy we used to cut off the tops of the corn stalks above the ear and save this for fodder. It made excellent fodder, too. Whether or not it was then argued—as sometimes it has been since—that the topping helped the development of the ear, I do not remember. It is of no advantage in that direction, however, and topping is a waste, for stock will consume pretty nearly the entire stalk, if it is cut up at the right time and shredded. It seems strange that as valuable a forage as good corn stalks should have so long been unappreciated. Good corn fodder is better than timothy hay, and immensely better than a great deal of timothy hay that is fed. Over-ripe timothy, for instance, is not much of an improvement over a dry fence rail so far as food for animals is concerned.—S. G. Atkins, in Epitomist.

HINTS FOR SHEPHERDS.

Sheep may be termed the gleaners or savers of the waste on the farm.

Lambs, wool, mutton and manure are the four cardinal points of sheep raising.

Wool is the farm product that brings the most money in proportion to what it takes from the farm.

A small ram of good form and and fleece is better than a large one without these valuable characteristics.

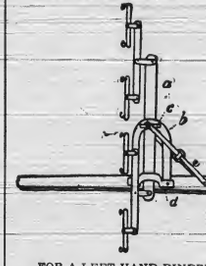
The practice of selling what a man needs in his business is not consistent with sound business policy. In sheep raising it is unsound to the core.

Starvation After Plenty.

Farmers, as a rule, accustomed to raising grain for market, find a good deal of time for leisure in the winter months, and when they embark in the business of feeding cattle are too often found away from home when they should be caring for this stock. To be confined at home day after day, morning, noon and night, with exception for Sundays and legal holidays, does not harmonize with summer habits, and the troughs and racks are filled to overflowing at one time, and allowed to remain empty the next, hunger following surfeit in regular order.—Farmers' Review.

YOUNG FRUIT TREES.

How to Protect Them from Rabbits Is a Problem That Has Puzzled Many a Man.



I have tried several plans of protecting young fruit trees from rabbits, and have unpleasant memories of some; especially the axle grease plan. I bought eight fine apple trees at 37½ cents apiece, and applied the axle grease as directed in an agricultural paper, and next spring all but two were dead; five years later these two were still stunted, and had made little or no growth. I would like to warn all fruit growers against the use of axle grease. Several of my neighbors followed the directions of this article, with equally disastrous results, and no telling how many readers in other parts of the country. Axle grease is an excellent thing on the axle, but on the young tree it is very destructive.

The method which I find to give the greatest satisfaction is as follows: Procure a lot of medium-sized cornstalks and cut them in two-foot lengths. With a stout cord—binder twine preferred—tie one around each end of a stalk, about three inches from end; tying stalk in middle of string, place another stalk beside this one, pass string around, tie and proceed with next stalk, picket fence fashion, until you have enough to pass around the tree. Leave several inches of string beyond the last stalk to tie around the tree. These can be made very fast, and will keep off the rodents nicely, and will be better than rags. The stalk protectors will last several winters. Some use paper and rags for this purpose, but however cheap and easily applied they are not altogether satisfactory; I have known bunny to have intelligence enough to remove this covering for his supper.—E. W. Jones, in Agricultural Epitomist.

CLEVER ARRANGEMENT.

A four-horse double tree for a left-hand binder, cutting a seven-foot swath, may be made as follows: Whiffletree, a, should be six feet long and pivoted in the center with a clevis working in slot, c, just 32 inches from center of tongue. The piece, b, is made of iron three-quarters by four inches and bent in the shape of a horseshoe, with slit, e, cut in it one inch wide by five inches long and bolted to tongue as portrayed, with the iron plate, d, on top. The plate, d, is to prevent the double tree, a, from slipping too far either way. The draft rod, e, is attached to the tongue as close to the machine as possible and gives a center draft, or nearly so. The single trees are 30 inches long. This hitch may be used for either a left or right-hand binder, as by simply reversing b, or putting it on the opposite side of the tongue, it is ready for the right-hand binder. One horse only is on the side of the tongue next to the grain.—W. A. Sharp, in Farm and Home.

SELECTION OF COLTS.

What a French Agricultural Paper Has to Say on This Always Interesting Subject.

How can a good colt be selected? Opinions differ on this subject. Some affirm it is very difficult, if not impossible, to judge a colt before he is somewhat matured. Others pretend that at six months one can decide what he will be, while others say that at 18 months a selection can be made on his merits with almost a certainty. At 18 months the ensemble of the proportions of the head, the chest and shoulders and of the body is very near what it will be at four years if the animal has been well raised, the legs alone lengthening slightly.

There are some indications of a general order that will serve as a guide in the selection of a colt. A colt that has a good resemblance to a matured horse will have very little to acquire. A colt high in the thighs should foretell a large horse, but if the knees are small and the hams narrow and flat the legs will be lank and puny and the colt will develop little force or value for the raiser. The colt that is said to come near the earth is the one to select, for whatever other specialty he may have this is a superior quality. The connoisseur can judge and decide the merits of a colt by a glance of the eye, but the inexperienced must take into account all the knowledge he can obtain. The growth of the common horse often terminates at three years, while that of a race horse is not often achieved until towards five years. One can therefore say a horse is fully matured at five years, but one should not demand a maximum of labor and fatigue until six years.—Journal d' Agriculture Pratique.

PAUL IN A BASKET.

[Copyrighted, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

A Bible incident not often noticed is here used by Dr. Talmage to set forth practical and beautiful truth; text, II. Corinthians 11:33: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall."

Sermons on Paul in jail, Paul on Mars hill, Paul in the shipwreck, Paul before the sanhedrin, Paul before Felix, are plentiful, but in my text we have Paul in a basket.

Damascus is a city of white and glistening architecture, sometimes called "the eye of the east," sometimes called "a pearl surrounded by emeralds," at one time distinguished for swords of the best material, called Damascus blades, and upholstery of richest fabric called damask. A horseman of the name of Saul, riding toward this city, had been thrown from the saddle. The horse had dropped under a flash from the sky, which at the same time was so bright it blinded the rider for many days, and, I think, so permanently injured his eyesight that his defect of vision became the thorn in the flesh he afterward speaks of. He started for Damascus to butcher Christians, but after that hard fall from his horse he was a changed man and preached Christ in Damascus till the city was shaken to its foundation.

The mayor gives authority for his arrest, and the popular cry is: "Kill him! Kill him!" The city is surrounded by a high wall and the gates are watched by the police lest the Cilician preacher escape. Many of the houses are built on the wall, and their balconies projected clear over and hovered above the garden outside. It was customary to lower baskets out of these balconies and pull up fruits and flowers from the gardens. To this day visitors at the monastery of Mount Sinai are lifted and let down in baskets. Detectives prowled around from house to house looking for Paul, but his friends hid him, now in one place, now in another. He is no coward, as 50 incidents in his life demonstrate, but he feels his work is not done yet, and so he evades assassination. "Is that preacher here?" the foaming mob shout at one house door. "Is that fanatic here?" the police shout at another house door. Sometimes on the street incognito he passes through a cloud of clinched fists and sometimes he secretes himself on the house top.

At last the infuriated populace get on sure track of him. They have positive evidence that he is in the house of one of the Christians, the balcony of whose home reaches over the wall. "Here he is! Here he is!" The vociferation and blasphemy and howling of the pursuers are at the front door. They break in. "Fetch out that gospelizer and let us hang his head on the city gate. Where is he?" The emergency was terrible. Providentially there was a good stout basket in the house. Paul's friends fasten a rope to the basket. Paul steps into it. The basket is lifted to the edge of the balcony on the wall, and then, while Paul holds the rope with both hands his friends lower away, carefully and cautiously, slowly but surely, farther down and farther down, until the basket strikes the earth and the apostle steps out and afoot and alone starts out on that famous missionary tour the story of which has astonished earth and Heaven. Appropriate entry in Paul's diary of travels: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall."

I observe first on what a slender tenure great results hang. The ropemaker who twisted that cord fastened to that lowering basket never knew how much would depend upon the strength of it. How if it had been broken and the apostle's life had been dashed out? What would have become of the Christian church? All that magnificent missionary work in Pamphylia, Cappadocia, Galatia, Macedonia would never have been accomplished. All his writings that make up so indispensable and enchanting a part of the New Testament would never have been written. The story of the resurrection would never have been so gloriously told as he told it. That example of heroic and triumphant endurance at Philippi, in the Mediterranean Emmeldon, under flagellation, and at his beheading would not have kindled the courage of 10,000 martyrdoms. But that rope holding that basket, how much depended on it! So again and again great results have hung on slender circumstances.

Did ever ship of many thousand tons crossing the sea have such an important passenger as had once a boat of leaves, from taffrail to stern only three or four feet, the vessel being waterproof by a coat of bitumen and floating on the Nile with the infant lawgiver of the Jews on board? What if some crocodile should crunch it? What if some of the cattle wading in for a drink should sink it? Vessels of war sometimes carry 40 guns looking through the portholes ready to open battle, but the tiny craft on the Nile seems to be armed with all the guns of thunder that bombarded Sinai at the lawgiving. On how fragile craft sailed how much of historical importance!

The parsonage at Epworth, England, is on fire in the night, and the father rushed through the hallway for the rescue of his children. Seven children are out and safe on the ground, but one remains in the consuming building. That one awakes, and, finding his bed on fire and the building crumbling, comes to the window, and two peasants make a ladder of their bodies, one peasant standing on the shoulder of the other, and down the human ladder the boy descends—John Wesley. If you would know how much depended on that ladder of peasants, ask the millions of Methodists on both sides of the sea. Ask their mission stations all around the world. Ask their hundreds of thousands already ascended to join their founder, who would have perished but for the living stair of peasants' shoulders.

An English ship stopped at Pitcairn island, and right in the midst of surrounding cannibalism and squalor the passengers discovered a Christian colony of churches and schools and beautiful homes and highest style of religion and civilization. Fir 50 years no missionary and no Christian influence had landed there. Why this oasis of light amid a desert of heathendom? Sixty years before a ship had met disaster, and one of the sailors, unable to save anything else, went to his trunk and took out a Bible which his mother had placed there and swam ashore, the Bible in his teeth. The book was read on all sides until the rough and vicious population were evangelized, and a church was started and an enlightened commonwealth established, and the world's history has no more brilliant page than that which tells of the transformation of a nation by one book. It did not seem of much importance whether the sailor continued to hold the book in his teeth or let it fall in the breakers, but upon what small circumstances depended what mighty results!

Practical inference: There are no insignificances in life. The minutest thing is part of a magnitude. Infinity is made up of infinitesimals; great things an aggregation of small things. Bethlehem manger pulling on a star in the eastern sky. One book in a drenched sailor's mouth the evangelization of a multitude. One hoat of papyrus on the Nile freighted with events for all ages. The fate of Christendom in a basket let down from a window on the wall. What you do, do well. If you make a rope, make it strong and true, for you know not how much may depend on your workmanship. If you fashion a hoat, let it be waterproof, for you know not who may sail in it. If you put a Bible in the trunk of your boy as he goes from home, let it be remembered in your prayers, for it may have a mission as farreaching as the book which the sailor carried in his teeth to the Pitcairn beach. The plainest man's life is an island between two eternities—eternity past rippling against his shoulders, eternity to come touching his hrow. The casual, the accidental, that which merely happened so, are parts of a great plan, and the rope that lets the fugitive apostle from the Damascus wall is the cable that holds to its mooring the ship of the church in the storm of the centuries.

Again, notice unrecognized and unrecorded service. Who spun that rope? Who tried it to the basket? Who steadied the illustrious preacher as he stepped into it? Who relaxed not a muscle of the arms or dismissed an anxious look from his face until the basket touched the ground and discharged its magnificent cargo? Not one of their names has come to us. But there was no work done that day in Damascus or in all the earth compared with the importance of their work. What if they had in their agitation tied a knot that could slip? What if the sound of the mob at the door had led them to say: "Paul must take care of himself, and we will take care of ourselves." No, no! They held the rope, and in doing so did more for the Christian church than any thousand of us will ever accomplish. But God knows and has made record of their undertaking. And they know.

How exultant they must have felt when they read his letters to the Romans, to the Corinthians, to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, to the Philippians, to the Colossians, to the Thessalonians, and when they heard how he walked out of prison, with the earthquake unlocking the door for him, and took command of the Alexandrian corn ship when the sailors were nearly scared to death and preached a sermon that nearly shook Felix off his judgment seat. I hear the men and women who helped him down through the window and over the wall talking in private over the matter and saying: "How glad I am that we effected that rescue! In coming times others may get the glory of Paul's work, but no one shall rob us of the satisfaction of knowing that we held the rope."

Something occurs to me quite personal. I was the youngest of a large family of children. My parents were neither rich nor poor. Four of the sons wanted a collegiate education, and four obtained it, but not without great home struggle. We never heard the old people say once that they were denying themselves to effect this, but I remember now that my parents always looked tired. I don't think they ever got rested until they lay down in the Somerville cemetery. Mother would sit down in the evening and say: "Well, I don't know what makes me feel so tired." Father would fall immediately to sleep, seated by the evening stand, overcome with the day's fatigues. About 35 years ago the one and about 37 years ago the other put down the burdens of this life, but they still hold the rope.

But there must come a time when we shall find out who these Damascenes were who lowered Paul in the basket, and greet them and all those who have rendered to God and the world unrecognized and unrecorded services. That is going to be one of the glad excitements of Heaven, the hunting up and picking out of those who did great good on earth and got no credit for it. Here the church has been going on 19 centuries, and yet the world has not recognized the services of the people in that Damascus balcony. Charles G. Finney said to a dying Christian: "Give my love to St. Paul when you meet him." When you and I meet him, as we will, I shall ask him to introduce me to those who got him out of the Damascene peril.

We go into long sermons to prove that we will be able to recognize people in Heaven, when there is one reason we fail to present, and that is better than all—God will introduce us. We shall have them all pointed out. You would not be guilty of the impoliteness of having friends in your parlor not introduced, and celestial politeness will demand that we be made acquainted with all the Heavenly household. What rehearsal of old times and recital of stirring reminiscences! If others fail to give introduction, God will take us through, and before our first 24 hours in Heaven—if it were calculated by earthly timepieces—have passed we shall meet and talk with more Heavenly celebrities than in our entire mortal state we met with earthly celebrities. Many who made great noise of usefulness will sit on the last seat by the front door of the Heavenly temple, while right up within arm's reach of the Heavenly throne will be many who, though they could not reach themselves or do great exploits for God, nevertheless held the rope.

Come, let us go right up and accost those on the circle of Heavenly thrones. Surely they must have killed in battle a million men. Surely they must have been buried with all the cathedrals sounding a dirge and all the towers of all the cities tolling the national grief. Who art thou, mighty one of Heaven? "I lived by choice the unmarried daughter in a humble home that I might take care of my parents in their old age, and I endured without complaint all their querulousness and administered to all their wants for 20 years." Let us pass on round the circle of thrones. Who art thou, mighty one of Heaven? "I was for 30 years a Christian invalid and suffered all the while, occasionally writing a note of sympathy for those worse off than I, and was general confidant of all those who had trouble, and once in awhile I was strong enough to make a garment for that poor family in the back lane." Pass on to another throne. Who art thou, mighty one of Heaven? "I was the mother who raised a whole family of children for God, and they are out in the world Christian merchants, Christian mechanics, Christian wives, and I have had my reward for all my toil." Let us pass on in the circle of thrones. "I had a Sabbath school class and they were always on my heart, and they all entered the kingdom of God, and I am waiting for their arrival." But who art thou, the mighty one of Heaven on this other throne? "In time of bitter persecution I owned a house in Damascus, a house on the wall. A man who preached Christ was hounded from street to street and I hid him from the assassins, and when I found them breaking into my house and I could no longer keep him safely I advised him to flee for his life, and a basket was let down over the wall with the maltreated man in it, and I was one who helped hold the rope." And I said: "Is that all?" And he answered: "That is all." And while I was lost in amazement I heard a strong voice that sounded as though it might once have been hoarse from many exposures, and triumphant as though it might have belonged to one of the martyrs, and it said: "Not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, and base things of the world and things which are despised hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not to bring to naught things which are, that no flesh should glory in His presence." And I looked to see from whence the voice came, and lo! it was the very one who had said: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall."

Henceforth think of nothing as insignificant. A little thing may decide your all." A Cunarder put out from England for New York. It was well equipped, but in putting up a stove in the pilot box a nail was driven too near the compass. You know how that nail would affect the compass. The ship's officers, deceived by that distracted compass, put the ship 200 miles off her right course, and suddenly the man on the lookout cried: "Land ho!" and the ship was halted within a few yards of her demolition on Nantucket shoals. A sixpenny nail came near wrecking a Cunarder. Small ropes hold mighty destinies.

A minister seated in Boston at his table, lacking a word, puts his hand behind his head and tilts back his chair to think, and the ceiling falls and crushes the table and would have crushed him. A minister in Jamaica at night, by the light of an insect called the candle fly, is kept from stepping over a precipice a hundred feet. F. W. Robertson, the celebrated English clergyman, said that he entered the ministry from a train of circumstances started by the barking of a dog. Had the wind blown one way on a certain day the Spanish inquisition would have been established in England. But it blew the other way, and that dropped the accursed institution, with 75 tons of shipping, to the bottom of the sea or flung the splintered logs on the rocks.

Nothing unimportant in your life or mine. Three naughts placed on the right side of the figure one makes a thousand, and six naughts on the right side of the figure one a million, and our nothingness placed on the right side may be augmentation illimitable. All the ages of time and eternity affected by the basket let down from a Damascus balcony.

A DEAD LIVER

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. But the liver was overburdened, deadened—stopped work. There you are, with a dead liver, and spring is the time for resurrection. Wake up the dead! Get all the filth out of your system, and get ready for the summer's trials with clean, clear blood, body, brain free from bile. KINGSVILLE, KY., Aug., 22, 1901.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Kingsville is 136 miles south of Cincinnati, on the Ciucinnati Southern R. R, at the south approach to the King's mountain tunnel, which is one mile long. It is a thriving little town of 400 inhabitants, three large dray goods stores, one of them carrying a $10,000 stock, one drug store, two doctors, two blacksmith shops, three churches—Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian, two Sunday schools—Christian in the morning and Methodist afternoon, and the best common school building in the county.

Millions of feet of lumber have been shipped from this point since I came here. There are five saw mills within three miles of town. Hotel Penebaker is always open to accommodate the traveling public.

We have just passed through seven weeks of the hottest, dryest weather known to this part of the State, but thanks to Him Who sends the rain on the just and the unjust, for on the 12th of August our drought was broken by plenty of rain, raining good and steady for 60 hours, and it has rained some every day since.

Corn will make two-thirds of a crop. Pastures never were better at this season. Tobacco is good but is Frenching some on account of the wet weather.

People here were talking about starving, but since the rain they are wearing broad smiles on their countenances.

Cattle are plentiful in this county, and two weeks ago could have been bought at a very low price. Calves could have been bought as low as $2 per head, but not so now, as there will be plenty of food if it is not destroyed later.

God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform, and 1901 has shown His wonders—cold spring, the hottest and dryest summer since 1854, and now there is an abundance of rain.

Mr. Editor, tell Perry Cason that I am coming up this fall to vote for him. I would like to vote for M. F. Wingate also, but he did not run quite fast enough in the primary. I will give D. M. Snyder a lift, too.

C. L. HENSLEY.

A Cause for Rejoicing.

There are living in this county quite a number of teachers and other prominent citizens who received their education within the walls of the National Normal University, at Lebanon, Ohio. All of these have a very warm place in their hearts for this famous Institution, and we are sure they will rejoice to learn that the outlook for the University for the coming year is very bright indeed. Many improvements have been made and a faculty has been engaged that is probably superior in education and in teaching ability to any that the school has had for years past. The Institution will have at its head, Prof. J. Oscar Creager, an experienced educator, who, after spending several years in Normal Schools, has taken special work in the Ohio State University, in Harvard and in Yale, receiving from the latter the degrees of A. B. and M. A.

Graduates from this Institution can be found in all parts of the land, engaged in every occupation. They attribute their well recognized success not alone to the thorough education and practical common sense equipment which one is able to obtain at Lebanon, but also, to the energy and spirit which are instilled into every one who attends this school.

While the training of teachers is an important work of the school and has given it an enviable reputation, yet in the many other departments which are sustained, young men and women are prepared by the best methods for every business and profession.

There is probably not another school in the land where so many superior advantages can be had in the time and for the small amount of money. The tuition is $8 per session or $38 for the year of 48 weeks. Good board can be had for $1.50 per week.

The school is located in the beatiful town of Lebanon, and since it was established there in 1855, has trained more thau 50,000 students. To anyone seeking an education we would recommend this Institution. A catalogue can be had for the asking.

A Cure for Cholera Infantum.

"Last May," says Mrs. Curtis Baker, of Bookwaiter, Ohio, "an infant child of our neighbor's was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctor had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days' time the child had fully recovered, and is now (nearly a year since) a vigorous, healthy girl. I have recommeuded this Remedy frequently and have never known it to fail in any single instance." For sale by all druggists.

At 10 o'clock to-day the bell will tap and the big Boone fair will be on, and in the matter of exhibition and attendance the indications are it will not be behind any of the past. The only department that is likely to fall short in exhibits is that of agriculture, and no doubt it will be much better than has been anticipated. To-day mules and draft horses will be exhibited in the ring, while sheep will occupy the stock pens, and fruit and pantry and dairy will be shown in floral hall. To-morrow beef cattle and saddle horses with gentlemen and boy riders as special features, are the ring attractions, hogs at the stock pens, and flowers, paintings, drawings and artificial flowers in floral hall. Friday's ring show will consist of dairy cattle and harness horses, with the baby show, the handsome lady contest, fancy turnout, lady riding and best lady driver as the special attractions. Embroidery, quilts, etc., will render floral hall especially attractive for the ladies. The exhibition in the ring on this day will be exciting and interesting. On Saturday saddle horses will be shown, and lady riding, lady and gentleman riding, and the cakewaik for colored people, will make the exhibition in the ring especially interesting. Grain and vegetables in the hall. The several large premiums offered on horses will bring a large number of animals to compete for them, and some of the best horses in northern and central Kentucky are expected to be among the entries.

The Holiness people who held meeting at Petersburg for a week or more, began preaching at the court house here Monday night. They have engaged the court house for two weeks. Their meeting cannot be said to be under way yet, hardly.

It has been resolved, firstly, to suspend the payment of all accounts for war material pending and to limit the expenses to the payment of the armed force and administration.

"Secondly, to proceed to expropriate all the necessary elements for the feeding, equipment and mobilization of the army.

"Thirdly, to levy forced and voluntary loans according to circumstances and to impose war contributions in order to meet the expenses of each department without depending on the national capital.

"The governors are hereby amply authorized to proceed in these matters according to the requirements of the cases, without the need of approval from the government and each governor must assume the responsibility in order to save the situation within his territory."

Venezuela Steamers Transport 800 Men From Maracaibo and Coro to Assist in Invading Colombia Near Rio Nacha.

New York, Aug. 23.—Dr. A. J. Restrepo, diplomatic agent of the liberal party now attempting to take possession of the government in Colombia, received a dispatch Thursday from the liberal agent at Quito regarding the recently reported battle between the government, or clerical, forces at Pasto. The dispatch was as follows:

Quito, Aug. 20.—The expected battle near Pasto was fought on Saturday, the 17th, and the liberal generals, Lergio Perez and A. Rosas, won a great triumph over the clericals.

Through his secretary, Dr. Restrepo explained that Pasto, where the battle was reported to have been fought, was in the extreme southern part of Colombia, 2,000 miles from where Gen. Uribe-Uribe was operating, and that it indicated successful execution of the plans of campaign mapped out by Uribe-Uribe and forwarded to the commanding officers of the other liberal forces before the general left New York early in the summer.

Willemstadt, Curacoa, Aug. 23 (Via Haytien Cable).—Venezuelan steamers have transported 800 men from Maracaibo and Coro, under command of Gen. Javila, who defeated and captured Gen. MAY DEFY THE POWERS.

Delay of the Chinese Plenipotentiaries in Signing the Protocol Causes Comment.

Peking, Aug. 24.—The delay of the Chinese plenipotentiaries in signing the protocol is causing some uneasiness in the foreign community here, although the ministers of the powers do not think that the Chinese intend to defy the powers by ultimately refusing to sign. Indeed, they believe China is anxious to wind up the negotiations speedily.

Decrees reciting the punishments and suspending the examinations will be issued before the Chinese signatures are affixed.

Prince Ching, at the request of the empress dowager, telegraphed to her verbatim the restrictions as to the importation of arms.

Li Hung Chang, having practically conducted all the active negotiations, has retired into the background, leaving to Prince Ching the responsibility of consummating the work.

Earl Li finds himself in the same precarious position that he occupied at the close of the negotiations following the war with Japan. The native press is unanimous in violently denouncing him for what is called his surrender to the foreigners; and a number of officials have petitioned the emperor to punish him for betraying his country.

London, Aug. 24.—"Immense quantities of arms and ammunition are being manufactured in the arsenals of China," says the Peking correspondent of the Times, "and immense quantities are also being imported, mainly by way of the Yang-Tse-Kiang."

"Apparently there is a movement on foot on the part of Great Britain, Japan and the United States," says the dispatch to the Morning Post from Chee Foo, "to force Russia to evacuate Niu Chwang."

Dewey and Benham, will be compelled to declare him to be disqualified, and several more days will then be occupied in finding a substitute for him.

Will Continue the Struggle.

Paris, Aug. 24.—The Gaulois publishes an interview with Mr. Kruger at Hilversum in which he said the reports that he would have recourse to privateering were "mere fables." HE PAID THE PENALTY.

Henry Noles, of Winchester, Tenn., Burned at the Stake.

Noles Emphatically Stated That There Was No One Implicated in the Deed But Himself. The Mob Was Orderly.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 26.—Henry Noles, the Negro who criminally assaulted and shot to death Mrs. Charles Williams, wife of a prominent farmer near Winchester, Tenn., last Friday, was captured early Sunday morning at water tank, near Cowan, Tenn. He was taken to Winchester by his captors and placed in the county jail. Sheriff Stewart made haste to barricade the jail and protect the prisoner. Soon an angry mob of several hundred men gathered, but Assistant Attorney General Matt N. Whittaker appeared and made a speech to the crowd. He appealed to them to assist him in allaying excitement and upholding the majesty of the law. This appeal was supplemented by Judge J. J. Lynch, Capt. W. P. Tolley, Jesse M. Littleton, Foster Ramsey and others.

No sooner had their appeals been made than several hundred citizens from the neighborhood where the crime was committed came up and augmented the crowd to thousands. They swept forward upon the jail, overpowered the sheriff and his deputies took the prisoner and started for the scene of the crime, 12 miles distant, at 10:15 a. m.

The mob was orderly but determined. It seemed that the whole population for miles around had turned out to see the fate of the wretch. A procession three miles in length followed the mob to the Williams home. Arriving at a point in sight of the scene of the crime, the Negro was placed upon a stump and given a chance to make a statement.

He mounted the stump stolidly, and laughed as he began his statement. He said:

"Tell all my sisters and brothers to meet me in glory. I am going to make that my home. Tell my mother to meet me where parting will be no more."

He was then asked as to whether any one else was implicated in the crime. Noles stated emphatically there was no one implicated but himself.

"Why did you kill Mrs. Williams," was asked.

"I just done that because I had nothing else to do."

BURNED BY MOB.

Small Grocery Store and Dwelling Occupied By Miles Brooks, Colored, Destroyed.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 26.—A small grocery store and dwelling at Thompson Springs, eight miles from Birmingham, occupied by Miles Brooks, a Negro, was burned by a mob Sunday morning. Brooks is alleged to have written an improper letter to Mrs. Cuteliff, a white woman, who had occasionally patronized his store. Daniel Cuteliff, the woman's husband, searched for the Negro for two days. The store and dwelling were both closed during that time, and Sunday a crowd of men who had joined in the search burned the dwelling and store. Twenty shots were fired into the building, but the Negro had left the house and no one was hurt.

TURKEY'S BACK-DOWN.

French Papers Hail the Sultan's Yielding as a Great Triumph for France.

London, Aug. 26.—Although the French papers hail Turkey's yielding as a great triumph for France, more especially as it was largely believed that the sultan's obduracy was due to the supposed friendship between Germany and Turkey, it is felt in London, despite considerable satisfaction over the outcome, that there is a grave doubt as to whether France has achieved more than a paper victory.

The British theory is that M. Constans really wished to force Turkey to purchase quays which are notoriously unremunerative. The sultan has avoided this, thus securing the practical results, while leaving to M Constans the empty congratulations

The country is literally burned up by drought. There is not a green thing to be seen except cactus plants. Zacapata county is 50 miles from the nearest railroad station, and whatever in the way of foods that is sent to the farmers in the famine-stricken place must be hauled from Loredo, a two days' trip at best.

MORE TALK OF PEACE.

Strike Leaders Are Willing to Make Certain Concessions.

What These Terms Are and the Mode of Their Presentation, Are at Present Carefully Guarded Secrets.

Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—In furtherance of the "peace" programme which is said to have been in the course of preparation for several days, it was given out Sunday by one on the inside and one who should know that the amalgamnted executives have consented to have certain propositions made to the officials of the steel corporation through members of the conciliatory committee of the National Civic Federation, which proposals are expected to bring about a settlement of the great strike. Those interested in the matter were in waiting all day Sunday for word to proceed with the programme as outlined at the conference of the amalgamated executives and the conciliatory committee of the Civic Federation last Friday. The propositions which are to be taken to New York, carry certain concessions by the amalgamated officials which it is hoped will pave the way for the reopening of the direct negotiations between the association and the company. The proposition carries much of the terms under which President Shaffer and his advisors stand willing to settle. What those terms are and the mode of their presentation are carefully guarded secrets. There is alone the implication that they contain concessions of such importance that those in interest expect the corporation to drop its adverse attitude and reopen negotiations.

While the conferees were discussing peace plans the amalgamated men were shown the impracticability of sympathetic strikes by the miners and other organized men affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The action of President Shaffer in abrogating the wage contracts with the Federal Steel Co., covering its western mills, and in other instances was questioned. Messrs. Mitchell, White and Jenks spoke of the importance of strict observance of wage agreements as contracts by the labor unions.

President Shaffer maintained his position to the satisfaction of most of the conferees.

It has been reported that the conferees disapproved the move in abrogating the Federal Steel Co. contracts, and told President Shaffer so with unmistakable emphasis.

THE CITY OF MANILA.

It Has Been Decided to Increase the Troops There by Four Infantry Companies.

Manila, Aug. 26.—In the city of Manila there are now less than 1,000 effective soldiers, and it has been decided to increase this number by four companies of infantry. The official reason for the increase is that the guard duty is too heavy for the present force. As a matter of fact, however, there is a feeling that although there is no apparent prospect of trouble, nevertheless in the event of an uprising in the future, such as is always possible among the Malays, it would be better to have a sufficient body of troops available.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Louisville Rapidly Filling With Plumed Guests in Attendance at the Triennial Conclave.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 26.—Commanderies of Knights Templars are pouring into Louisville from the four corners of the United States. The city is rapidly filling with its plumed guests, although the triennial conclave proper does not begin until the grand parade starts Tuesday morning.

Imposing religious exercises were held Sunday afternoon. At 1 p. m. the knights assembled at their various commanderies, and at 2 o'clock marched to the Galt house, where the general formation was made for the march to the Broadway Methodist church, where the services were held at 3 p. m. The column was led by the templars of DeMolay and Louisville commanderies, and the entire body formed an escort for the grand master of the grand encampment, Reuben H. Lloyd and the other grand officers.

The ground floor of the church was reserved for knights in full uniform. The ground floor of the Sunday-school room was reserved for ladies of visiting knights and for knights in uniform accompanied by ladies.

The form of service had been prepared by Sir Knight Rt. Rev. Thomas U. Dudley, Episcopal bishop of Kentucky. With a few changes it was the form of worship used by the grand commander of Kentucky. Services opened with a special musical programme. At the opening the knights rose and stood while it was sung, and while Grand Prelate J. C. W. Coxe, of the Washington, Ia., commandery, delivered the ritual exhortation. This was followed by prayers, the gloria, and Te Deum Laudamus, and the reading of Bible passages.

The most striking part of the service then came when the grand prelate delivered the faith of the knights, who, with uplifted sword, recited with him the Apostles' creed. After the coronation hymn Grand Prelate Coxe delivered his sermon, his text being "What think ye of Christ?"

After the taking of a collection to be delivered to the almoners of the Louisville commanderies for distribution to the poor, the hymn St. Hilda was sung, and after prayers the service closed with the benediction.

DILEMMA OF REPUBLICANS.

Enormous Growth of Trusts and Monopolies Under Protection Staggers Them.

The unexpected often happens in politics. When the republicans enacted the Dingley tariff bill they said it settled the tariff question and that the policy of protection would not again be disturbed. They claim that prosperity is dependent upon the maintaining of the protection wall they have so carefully erected. But suddenly some of the most pronounced friends of protection express their purpose of making a breach in the wall, and the whole tariff matter is again brought up for discussion by the very men who said it was settled for all time. The enormous growth of trusts and monopolies under the protection granted them by the republicans was foretold by the democrats when the Dingley bill was enacted, and now the people are being aroused by the fact that the foreigners are buying trust productions for less than they are, the allies of the trusts in congress are in a dilemma. They must cut off protection from the trusts or the prospect of defeat stares them in the face. But to acknowledge they are wrong and that their theory of protection is at fault is another predicament, and the great majority of the republicans, under the leadership of Hanna and the president, have determined to erade the strait they are in by the unconstitutional and roundabout way of reciprocity.

But reciprocity will not accomplish what the people are demanding, that protection be withdrawn from the trusts. There is another danger looming up to disarrange the protection theory, and the only way that can be averted is by giving up the colonies that have been acquired by the expenditure of such vast sums and the sacrifice of so many lives. This the Nashville American discusses when it says: "After a delay for which there was no defense, free trade has been established with Porto Rico. The country has finally performed its "plain duty" as pointed out by President McKinley before he signed the Porto Rico tariff bill. Free trade between all American possessions is a policy which no party can afford to ignore or defy. When the republican party, through force of circumstances which no party could control, accepted and adopted the old democratic policy of territorial expansion, it entered upon a policy which is the enemy of a tariff policy. Expansion and free trade go together. A severe blow was struck the republican policy of a protective tariff when Dewey's guns in Manila bay gave to this country the Philippine archipelago, and when the war with Spain gave us Porto Rico and paved the way for the ultimate annexation of Cuba. Free trade has been established with Porto Rico, and free trade with the Philippines must follow. It is inevitable. Expansion is an entering wedge which must eventually drive asunder the tariff wall erected by republican legislation. The tobacco and cane and beet sugar and rice and fruit growers may succeed in delaying free trade with the Philippines, as they have delayed for a time free trade with Porto Rico, but the time is not far away when trade will be as free between the Philippines and the United States as it is between the states of the American union. And the time is coming when there will be free trade with Cuba also. The logic of events will force free trade in other directions."

The only way the people will ever get any relief from the tariff tax and the extortion of the protected trusts is by revising the tariff on the democratic principle of a tariff for revenue only large enough to produce what money the government requires economically administered. Protection is the mother of trusts and must go the way of all monopolies.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

—If Hanna is elected president the monogram-initials of the United States will more fitly than ever constitute the dollar mark.—St. Louis Republic.

—A Terre Haute man is prosecuting two fellow workmen for provoke. They called him Mark Hanna. The plaintiff ought to make out his case. —Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—The kind of reciprocity the farmers and manufacturers need is something real and practical. They are tired of paper promises and oratorical fustian and bombast.—Philadelphia Times.

—"Coin" Harvey does not like the way things are going in the democratic party pretty well. Things are coming our way, all right, all right. It may be now the kingdom's coming and the year of jubilee!—Albany Argus.

—Within the republican organization and acting as a strict partisan, no man can strike a really effective blow at the trusts, which have the support of the administration, of nearly all the recognized leaders of the party and of perhaps not less than 90 per cent. of all the republicans in public life. On the other hand, the democratic party is practically a unit in opposition to the trusts.—Washington Times.

—The republican leaders know that they have good cause to fear the resentment of organized labor. They cannot point to one instance in which their party has stood on the side of organized labor as against the exactions and oppressions of the trusts. The steel strike is logically injurious to the republican party. It is so because organized labor is fighting the trusts in that conflict, and the republican party is the creator and defender of the trusts.—St. Louis Republic.

OUT FOR RECIPROCITY.

Senator Cullom, of Illinois, has been visiting Canton, and, of course, was interviewed. When asked what prospect is there of tariff legislation by congress next winter, he replied: "I do not think there will be any, at least in the form of a general revision of the tariff. Of course, I am not in a position to speak authoritatively for the president, but I feel I am representing his ideas when I say it.

"There are, however, some things we ought to go into which will amount to a partial revision of the tariff. There are at present pending before the senate some ten commercial treaties. These treaties are all of a reciprocity character, and if they are ratified will amount to a change in the tariff with the countries with which they are made. It seems to me as if it would be wise to ratify at least some of them. A feeling has grown up abroad that the United States is disposed to act in what may be called a hoggish manner in its trade relations, and if these reciprocity treaties can be drawn so as to be for the mutual advantage of both countries entering into them, I think it would be beneficial all around."

There is the republican programme right from the fountain head. No revision of the tariff, even to prevent the trusts selling their products to foreigners cheaper than in the United States. That is evidently the presidential idea, but the president has no part under the constitution in originating revenue bills; that is expressly the province of the house of representatives. That a bill will be introduced by some republican member to strike out of the tariff the protection to some of the most monopolistic trusts has been promised. How many republicans will be found to vote for it is a question, in view of the evident favor of the administration to continue to protect the trusts.

The democrats will be ready to vote for such a bill if it is reported by the committee on ways and means. But it is probable that the administration will control the majority of the committee and the bill will be pigeonholed.

With regard to the reciprocity treaties that the senator talks about, they are opposed on two grounds. Some republican senators and all the democrats oppose them on the constitutional ground that the executive and the senate cannot originate tariff legislation. Then the protected industries, like the wine and fruit growers of the Pacific states, object to being traded off that some other industry may have an enlarged market with France or Germany and these industries come in and compete with them.

The fruit growers and other agricultural producers are certainly entitled to protection as long as it is the policy of the government, and these fruit growers are the only farmers that do get any real protection under the present system. The republicans are controlled by the trusts, and tariff reform can only come from the democrats.

AS TO THE SHIP-SUBSIDY.

Defeat of Mark Hanna in 1904 Will Settle the Iniquitous Scheme.

The shipbuilding plants have about a year's work ahead, running at full capacity, and yet Mark Hanna declares that his ship subsidy steal is needed to build up the merchant marine. Commenting on this, the Philadelphia Record says: "If it were not for the lingering expectation of receiving large steamship subsidies out of the pockets of taxpayers there would be no disparagement of the prosperity of American shipbuilding interests. Although this industry has undergone a new development under the most favorable conditions without public aid, there is no doubt that the subsidy scheme operates as an obstruction to its march. More yards would be opened and more ships built for the ocean service at fair profits but for the prospect of the larger gains from subsidy. Apart from the iniquity of this subsidy scheme, its removal from congress by the defeat of the Hanna bill at the next session would be promotive of the ocean transportation interests of the country."

And as further evidence of how little a subsidy is needed, a statement issued by the bureau of navigation, treasury department, shows that during the last month 112 new ships, of 16,120 gross tons, were added to the American merchant marine. Of these 65, of 8,278 gross tons, were built on the Atlantic and gulf coasts; 10, of 3,354 gross tons, on the Pacific coast; 23, of 1,125 gross tons, on western rivers, and 14, of 3,363 gross tons, on the great lakes. The largest steam vessel built on the great lakes during the month was the Pere Marquette No. 17 at Cleveland, by the American Shipbuilding company.

—The American Tin Plate company has advanced the wages of its employes two per cent., while the men asked for ten. Why did not the company advance the wages to the amount of the "protective" tariff? The tariff is for the benefit of American labor, you know.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—Senator Cullom has dissipated all doubts that Hanna is still boss at the white house. After an interview with the president the Illinois senator has announced that there is to be no "tinkering with the tariff by the next congress"—the exact words used by Mark when Mr. McKinley was under suspicion of being somewhat disloyal to the "fruitful mother of the trusts."—Richmond Dispatch.

Commonwealth's Attorney Sharp was apprised of the matter Friday at noon, and his informant is authority for the statement that Mays had trouble with the Logans some years ago, because of his wife. He went to the Philippines as a member of the regular army, and was only recently mustered out, together with Golden. On their return to this section they were equipped with steel coats of mail, army rifles and big pistols. Several days ago they started for the scene and on the way are said to have riddled several schools and church houses.

Nicholasville, Ky., Aug. 21.—After hearing the testimony in the case of the Commonwealth vs. John and James Higgs, charged with the murder of John Marshall, on Wednesday of last week, Judge Phillips, before whom the case was heard, decided John Higgs had a right to shoot Marshall after he (Marshall) had attempted to shoot his brother Jim and while Marshall and Jim were struggling for the possession of Marshall's revolver. Both the Higgses were, consequently, acquitted.

Seven witnesses were examined by the prosecution and five by the defense. The evidence showed Marshall premeditated an attack on the Higgses, alleging they had carried notes from his wife to young Cainan, alias Van Avery. Cainan and Mrs. Marshall were recently arrested together in Louisville.

Convinced that Jones was there the sheriff and his posse surrounded the woods. They came upon Jones and the woman. He opened fire upon the officers. All Patrons of Husbandry in Northern Kentucky are urged to be present at the Boone Co. Fair Friday, August 30, 1901. A register will be conveniently placed upon the grounds, and every "Granger" is asked to register, with name of his Grange, and postoffice. Please wear Grange buttons, and thus inaugurate what is to be known in future years as "Grange Day" at the "Boone Fair."

Mrs. Theodore Cook, of Patriot, Ind., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Jacob Klopp and family.

The melon market holds up very well, there is a brisk demand that readily absorbs all that are put on the market.

Potatoes at $1 per bushel and green corn at a bit per dozen are in great demand in Aurora. Peaches are a drug at from 35 to 60c per bushel.

We made garden one day last week—planted beans, lettuce seed, radishes, corn, cucumbers and transplanted some cabbage plants, and expect a bountiful supply of vegetables the first of Oct.

GAINESVILLE, FLA., Aug., 19, 1901.
To the Editor of the Recorder:

Having believed for several years that Florida would become one of the best stock countries, I take pleasure in sending you Bulletin of our experiment station confirming my ideas. I have an opportunity of establishing a large stock farm, and knowing the love of many of my old county people (State of Boone) as of the good old State, it would give me pleasure to give "corn-dodgers" any information. We have a climate that can not be excelled. One of my daughters who was in Kentucky during the late hot weather, wrote in sympathy for me that as it was almost unendurable there, she feared to hear of me, that it must be "roasting" here. I wrote her to come here to "cool off." Our highest mercury had been 97, and that 90 there was as hot as 97 here, yet it was reported 110 there.

It seemed that our late freezes would undo us, but may have been blessings in disguise, as our country is again getting cheerful in industry. We have many industries that are inviting. Pineapples that are very profitable, celery, strawberries, vegetables, besides the orange, tho the fine stock we will show withinin few years will please the fancy of Kentuckians.

Please remember me most kindly to all my old friends—in fact to all Boonetes. Yours Truly,

GEO. T. GAINES.

I will cut your buggy wheels down and put on new rims and round edge steel tire for $7 50. I will put you on a leather grain drill top with curtains colored black for $9 50 up. Satisfaction guaranteed.

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Columbia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of disentery. Everything I perscribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by all druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rails good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901; $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1901. NO. 46.

The Blood.

Blood is a mighty river of life, the mysterious center of chemical and vital actions as wonderful as they are indispensable, attracting our attention no less by the many problems it presents to speculative ingenuity than by the many practical conclusions to which these speculations lead.

It is a torrent impetuously rushing through every part of the body, carried by an elaborate net work of vessels, which in the course o- twelve months convey to the varif ous tissues not less than 3000 pounds of nutritive material, and from the same sources not lees than the same amount of waste. Every moment of our lives there is nearly 10 pounds of this fluid flowing in one continuous rushing stream from the heart through the great arteries, which branch continuously, becoming small, smaller at each subdivided, until the microscope can alon detect them, when they are known as capillaries, although they are no more to be compared with the finest down than is each distinctive particle of down with a cable. The finest lace becomes sackcloth beside them, yet we cannot pierce their mysterious network without setting free the contents. In these the blood yields some of its nutriment materials,and receives in exchange some of the wasted products of tissue, and thus modified the stream continues its rapid course backwards to the heart, through a system of veins, which originates among the capillary system that forms the termination of the arteries, and which instead of subdividing like the arteries, becomes gradually less and less numerous twigs entering branches and trunks until they reach the heart, which no sooner has it poured into than it rushes through the lungs, and from them back again to the heart and arteries, thus completing the circle or circulation.

This wonderful stream, ceaselessly circulating, occupies the very center of the vital organism, midway between the functions of nutrition, and those of exertion, feeding and stimulating the organs into activity, and removing from them all their useless material. In its torrent upwards of 40 different subetances are hurried along: it carries gases, it carries salts—yea, even carries metals and soaps! Millions of organized cells float within it, and of these cells by some considered organic entities, 20,000,000 arc said to die at every pulsation of the heart, to be replaced by other millions.

The iron which it rushes onwards can be separated. Prof. Berard did this and kept a specimen on exhibit in his lecture room. One ingenious Frenchman has suggested that coins should be struck from the metal extracted from the blood of great men. Please refrain from suggesting that we wash our hands with the soap obtained from the same source.

To the naked eye the blood appears as a homogeneous fluid, being more or less scarlet in color, but the microscope reveals to us the fact that while it is a fluid, it carries within itself certain solid bodies of definite shape and size—so definite indeed that a mere stran, no matter where, will, to the experienced eye, betray whether it be the blood of a mammal, a bird, a reptile or a fish.

Take a drop of blood from your finger. Now it is red. Put it upon the slide of your microscope, cover it with a thin glass and look. That which was so deep a scarlet in the mass now becomes a pale, reddish color, from which you must conclude that the depth of tint arose from the dense aggregation of those yellow discs, which you find therein, some of them adherent together, and presenting the appearance of piles of half eagles. It is to these we would now call your attention. Among scientists they are known as blood corpuscles, blood globules, blood cells and blood discs. Swammerdamm in 1658 was the first to see them, and he called them globules of fat. In 1673 one Leiwenhock located them in human blood, and startled the then world of scientists by giving the minuteness of their dimensions while at the present day there is not an ameteur, who is not familiar with them. There must be some relation in the form and size of these discs and their functions, but as yet, that point no one has explained. Generally the larger are found in the less advaneed organisms, that is they are larger in the embryos than in the adult, larger in birds than in mammals and larger in reptiles and fishes than in birds. The question now arising is, "Is the blood alive?" This has divided scientists for many years, each being correct from his own standpoint.

What is meant by the blood being alive? If so be that an organic structure having a specific composition, and passing through a definite cycle of changes such as birth, growth, development and death can truly be said to live, then blood, which manifests these cardinal phenomena of life must be pronounced to be alive. This no one would deny, but, if it be meant that blood has an independent vitality unlike the vitality of anyother tissue, a vitality which can be manifested apart from the organism, the opinion would be wholly at fault. Blood is vital and has vital properties; but so has every tissue of the body, and in no sense can we attribute to it independent life.

Now let us pass from the solids to the plasma in which they float—from the cells to the serum. While in circulation we see that there is nothing solid in it but the discs and corpuscles: yet no sooner does it pour from the vessels, than that part of the liquid becomes converted into a jelly,from which a yellow fluid separates itself. The whole is called the clot, the yellow fluid the serum; and the process of change—the coagulation. This was known to the ancients, but was not examined until the 17th century, when fibrine was detected, and until recently was supposed to be identical with the substance of muscular tissue, but we now know that the fibrine with the blood is not the same substance as the fibrine of muscle, which latter is called musculine, or syntonin.

These are a few of the properties of that wonderous fluid we named blood as far as science has explained them, but before leaving the subject we desire to say a few words respecting the relation blood bears to nutrition, since that relation is not generally understood. We know that all the tissues are nourished by the blood. But in what way is that affected? Blood, in itself, is perfectly incapable of nourishing the tissues—so much so that if it be poured on them from the rupture of a vessel, it hinders nutrition, and acts like a foreign substance, therefore we see it rigorously excluded from them and shut up in a system of closed vessels: but as it rushes along them certain of its elements ooze through their walls and furnish a plasma from which the tissues are elaborated. In exchange certain products of waste are taken up by the blood and carried to the organs of exertion: thus the muscles demand one set of principles: the nerves a second: the bones a third, and each drawing those it needs, allowing the others for which it has no need to pass on.

Let the speculative eye traverse the marvelous scale of created beings upwards, from the simplest to the most complex, and it will be observed that assimilation first takes place by the direct relation of the organism to the surrounding medium: next arrives the interposition of ageencies which prepare the food for the higher effects it has to produce, and instead of relying on organic substance in solution, the organism is seen extracting nutriment from other organisms: and finally is seen the operation of still more complicated agencies which impress on the digested food still higher characters, converting it into blood, and it is distributed according to the momentary requirements of each part, so that when an organ is required to put forth increased energy there is always sent an increase of food to supply it. ***

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. F. Grant's, Bellevue.

THE Burley market last week was again comparatively fair as far as the offerings are concerned. It also presented a very satisfactory appearance in regard to the prices obtained. In general, the market was strong and the buying firm and active.

Mrs. Harriet Sheets, of McDonald, Pa., sent a half of a five-dollar bill to the Treasury Department and asked that it be redeemed. She made an affidavit to the effect that while the bill was lying on her cutting table and she was cutting out a pattern the scissors snapped it in two. She presumed that in clearing up the scraps of her pattern after the cutting she had gathered in the rest of the five-dollar bill and thrown it into the fire.

Later the department received the other half of the five dollar bill from another women of the same town. She explained that she had found the half on the floor of her home and did not know what had become of the other half. Each wanted the bill redeemed for its face value The department investigated the case and found that in all probability the second woman to send in a portion of the bill had found it in a package which had been sent by the dressmaker. The department decided to redeem the bill for the dressmaker and sent her a new one.

Mr. E. E. Schreiner, who is in charge of the redemption division tells of another peculiar case. It appears that a man and his wife in Oneida county, New York, quarreled over the possession of some money, which the man held in his hand. The woman tried to wrest it from him. In the scrimmage a five-dollar bill was torn in two. The couple separated. The man sent in half of the bill for redemption and the woman sent the other half with identical explanations as to how the bill was torn. The department was in a quandary for a time, but finally decided to send each of the claimants $2,50.

A Shocking Calamity.

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. It's simply wonderful for Burns, Boils, Piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25c. Sold at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner's Florence; O. N. Grant's Bellevue.

HARLAN COUNTY Republicans have broken into the Court of Appeals with their troubles. Sappism is rampant in the Republican party in Kentucky.

Dr. Holbrook Curtis, of New York, a year ago reported to the American Medical Association his experiments with fluid extract of ragweed for the purpose of making patients immune from hay fever. His plan was to give internal doses for several weeks before the time for the attack, and he had good results from the treatment. This year similar experiments have been made in various parts of the United States, and are said to have been attended with remarkable success. The Philadelphia Times is responsible for the statement that many persons in that city have been rendered immune in this way.—C.-J.

WHILE the Democrats are discussing the question of the election of a United States Senator to succeed Senator Lindsay, they must bear in mind that the first thing necessary is the election of a majority of the next General Assembly. The Republicans will put up the strongest fight they know how, hoping to succeed in securing enough members to control the Legislature, and a few mistakes on the part of the Democrats may result in a fruition of Republican hopes. Proceed carefully all along the line and a win out is a certainty.

THE Louisville Republicans, or rather boss Sapp, held a convention the other day and nominated a ticket for city officers, but the nominees are refusing to accept, and it is altogether likely that a third attempt will have to be made before a ticket can be obtained. Dick Knott has been very anxious to be allowed to name the ticket, but Mr. Sapp understands, clearly, Knott's motives, and refuses to allow him a "say" in the matter.

THE Henry County Publishing Company, of Eminence, has sold its entire plant and good will to E. A. Gullion, former editor of the Carrollton Democrat, for $2,800. Mr. Gullion is a thorough newspaper man, and his ability is generally and accepted.

THE manner in which Louisville entertained the immense crowd of visitors within her gates, last week, was an honor to the entire State.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR

H. B. Stoddard, of Texas, Elected Grand Commander.

Frank H. Thomas Captured Junior Graud Wardenship—The Next Conclave Will Be Held in San Francisco in 1904.

It is estimated that 40,000 Sir Knights were in line when the big parade moved at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday headed by Maj. John H. Leathers, the grand marshal.

This pageant extended over a route of four miles, and was the crowning glory of the conclave. Knights templars from nearly every nook und cranny of the country, including even Honoluln, were in line.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 28.—The key to the city was formally turned over to the Knights Templar by Mayor Weaver Tuesday afternoon.

When the formal welcome to the knights was extended by Judge Barker, of Louisville, acting for Gov. Beckham, and ex-Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, the mention of his name elicited applause.

Col. Breckinridge delivered the chief address at this function. Grand Master Lloyd responded briefly. It was so late when the programme was completed that there was little time for the actual business of the grand encampment.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 29.—Colorado Commandery No. 1, of Denver, before an admiring throng of 18,000 people and under the critical eyes of a board of judges composed of three regular army officers and a representative of the Knights Templar, Wednesday captured first prize in the competition drill teams from commanderies of the knights. St. Bernard No. 35, the favorite with the majority of spectators, captured second place, while Golden Gate No. 16, of San Francisco, and Hanselman No. 16, of Cincinnati, came in for third and fourth prizes respectively. California Commandery No. 1, being the only mounted command, had no difficulty in capturing the trophy for the best appearance and drill on horseback.

A score of handsome Kentucky belles, acting as sponsors, presented the prizes. This over, the contestants and their sponsors led a grand march, after which dancing began.

The trophies were of silver, and were as follows: First prize, 24 pieces, valued at $3,000; second prize, 25 pieces, libation set, valued at $2,000; third prize, center piece, valued at $1,300; fourth prize, two pieces (mounted), valued at $900.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 30.—After electing officers and selecting San Francisco as the place of meeting the first Tuesday in September, 1904, the 28th triennial conclave of Knights Templar, which has been in progress here since Tuesday, Thursday adjourned to the date set, and the festivities came to a climax at a magnificent ball held Thursday night at the horse show building.

Col. George M. Moulton, of Chicago, was elected to succeed Mr. Stoddard as deputy grand master.

Rev. W. H. Rugg, of Rhode Island, advanced one rank to the office of grand generalissimo, made vacant by the election of Col. Moulton.

William B. Melish, of Cincinnati, O., was elected to succeed Rugg as captain general, while Joseph A. Locke, of Portland, Me., the junior grand warden, was made senior grand warden.

These officers were elected without opposition. The only contest came in the election of grand recorder and junior grand warden. There were 15 candidates. On the first ballot Frank H. Thomas, of Washington, D. C., received 137 votes. As only 141 votes are necessary to choice, it was regarded as certain that the second ballot would elect him. The second ballot gave the office to Thomas, he receiving 185 out of 208.

In the contest for the grand recordership W. H. Mayo, of St. Louis, who held the office for six years, was pitted against John A. Gerow, of Detroit. Mr. Mayo led on the first ballot, but lost steadily thereafter, and the office went to the Detroiter on the fifth ballot. H. Wales Lines, of Connecticut, was re-elected grand treasurer practically without opposition.

The installation of the new officers followed. Sir Knight Stoddard, the new grand master, was given an enthusiastic reception by Texas templars Thursday night.

He was promoted to be major general of volunteers in recognition of his services. At the close of the Spanish war he became a brigadier general in the regular army.

YELLOW FEVER SERUM.

The Commission Has Definitely Severed Connection With the Brasilian Expert.

Havana, Aug. 30.—Maj. Havard, chief surgeon, says that as the yellow fever commission regards the experiments with the Caldas serum as demonstrations of its uselessness, the commission has definitely severed connection with the Brazilian expert, and will not supervise any further experiments conducted by him. "Dr. Caldas has all along maintained that he had found the yellow fever germ in the intestines," remarked Maj. Havard Thursday, "whereas all the experiments conducted here prove that the germ of the disease is in the blood, people having been directly inoculated by blood infection from a person suffering with yellow fever.

She Knew Amos Keeter.

She was a very talkative old aunty and her memory was remarkable. Her nephew from the city soon realized the strength of both of these characteristics.

"Say, aunty," he put in when he found an opening in the old lady's continuous chain of reminiscences, "did you ever know the Skeeter family that used to live around here somewhere?"

"Knew 'em all," cried the old lady, without a moment's hesitation. "Yes, indeed."

"Did you know Amos?" continued the joker.

"Amos Keeter!" cried the old lady again. "Well, I should say I did. Many's the party he's taken me to. Amos Keeter? Dear, dear, how his name does call up the good old times!"

And then the wicked nephew had to go out behind the woodshed to laugh.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CLEVELAND FLOODED.

A Cloudburst Does About $1,000,000 Worth of Damage.

The Surging Waters Spread Over An Area Nearly Eight Miles Long and About One and a Half Miles in Width.

Cleveland, Sept. 2.—With the breaking of dawn Sunday morning the citizens of Cleveland awoke to look upon a scene of unparalleled devastation and destruction caused by a raging flood. While the entire city was more or less affected, the great volume of raging water vented its anger over miles of the eastern portion of the city and caused an amount of damage approximated at $1,000,000.

The appalling overflow was caused by a terrific rain that commenced to fall shortly after 2 o'clock, turning into a perfect cloudburst between the hours of 3 and 5, and then continued with great force until nearly 10 o'clock. The storm, according to the weather officials, was the heaviest that ever swept over Cleveland since the establishment of the government bureau in this city over 40 years ago. That no lives were lost is nothing short of a miracle, as the stories of thrilling escapes from the water on several of the principal resident streets of the city are told.

The surging waters spread over an area in the east end nearly eight miles long and a mile and a half wide.

Great volumes of water poured over from Doan and Giddings brooks down Quincy street, swamped Vienna street, rushed over Cedar avenue, back over on East Prospect street, rushed like a mill-race down Lincoln avenue to Euclid avenue, and then on to Glen Park place, where houses were undermined as though built of straw, and almost incredulable damage done to streets and property.

Over a large share of this exclusive residence territory the water rushed with terrific force, varying in depth from one to six feet. Culverts, trestles and bridges were torn down, and for hours nothing seemed capable of stemming the tide of destruction. Hundreds of residents, who were imprisoned in their beautiful homes like stranded islanders, were almost panic stricken. Danger signals were flashed about the city speedily as the disabled telephone system would allow and the work of rescue commenced.

Rowboats plied back and forth assisting whole families from perilous positions, but these proved painfully inadequate, and it was soon found necessary to go to the extraordinary precaution of calling on the life saving crew from the river, a distance of seven miles.

The life boats were quickly loaded on wagons and hurried to the scene of destruction.

The torrent surged with awful force for hours in Deering street, from Fairmount to the Boulevard, and over a dozen families were penned in like rats in a trap, with water five and six feet deep surrounding their homes. At this point the life saving crew worked valiantly, and, assisted by squads of firemen and policemen, finally succeeded in landing the terror-stricken people in places of safety. The fear was greatly enhanced by the momentary expectation that the great Shaker Heights dam would break loose and belch forth terrible destruction.

Shortly before noon the torrent succeeded in undermining a score of graves in St. Joseph cemetery, at the corner of East Madison and Woodland, and the bodies were soon being tossed about in the waters.

The great flood boiled over the banks of Doan brook all along the Boulevard and caused damage that it will take months to repair. Great jagged holes are torn in the beautiful driveway, and the look of ruin stretches in every direction.

The street railways will suffer an immense loss, extending in varying degrees over every portion of the city.

THE EXPIATORY MISSION.

It is Doubtful Whether Prince Chun and His Party Will Go to Berlin.

Berlin, Sept. 2.—It is now very doubtful, according to a dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Insel, Switzerland, whether Prince Chun will come to Berlin to make formal apology for the murder of Baron Ketteler. Members of the expiatory mission say: "Under present conditions we can never go to Berlin. We would rather die than accept them."

It appears that they object particularly to Prince Chun's attendants prostrating themselves before Emperor William, inasmuch as this is a special honor reserved for the emperor of China and would involve a recognition of the kaiser's equality.

REBELS DEFEATED.

Important Engagement in Batangas Province Between Hale's Troops and Insurgents.

Manila, Sept. 2.—Everything points to the early capture or surrender of Miguel Malvar, the insurgent leader. When either event occurs everything will be favorable to the establishment of permanent peace.

It is in the plans of the military authorities as a first step toward reducing the force, to make two departments instead of four, which would result in a considerable saving. The headquarters of one department would be Manila and of the other Iloilo.

Each day shows an increasing number of surrenders and captures in all the disaffected districts. Later accounts of the recent engagement in Batangas province between Capt. H. C. Hale, with a detachment of the 30th infantry, and the insurgent leader, Gonzales, show that it was more important than it was first considered. Many deserters and renegades were seen and heard giving commands in English. Col. Gracias, two officers and 50 men were killed after an engagement lasting three hours.

Monday Dr. Pardee de Tavera, Benito Legarde and Jose Luzuriaga took the oath of office as members of the Philippine commission. The American members, with their secretaries, have been assigned to the following administrative departments: Mr. Worcester, department of the interior; Mr. Wright, department of commerce and police; Mr. Ide, department of finance and justice, and Mr. Moses, department of public instruction. The commission is considering the advisability of abolishing the income tax and of making other changes in internal revenue.

Two new political parties are in process of formation, Senor Paterno heading one and Senor Pubad the other. Both favor the ultimate independence of the Philippines.

Senor Paterno proposes that the members of the congressional party who came on the transport McClellan to examine into the general administration of affairs in the Philippines to be awarded medals bearing on one side features of the Goddess of Liberty and on the other the inscription, "Home Rule for the Philippines."

Within a few months electric traction will replace horse power on the street railroads in Manila.

TRADE IN CUBA.

The Exports and Imports During the First Seven Months of This Year.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Some figures relating to the export and import trade of Cuba for the first seven months of this year, compared with a similar period last year, just published by the division of insular affairs, war department, indicate that radical changes are going on in that trade, and that the United States and other North American countries are the sufferers in this turn of trade. It is known that the exports from Cuba for the period mentioned this year were valued at $38,033,930, as against $43,469,055 for the same period last year, while the imports for the same period were worth $26,997,817, as against $19,955,492 for the corresponding period in 1900. The imports from the United States diminished 6.4 per cent, and that of other North American countries 15.6 per cent.; Cuba shipped to the United States during the same period 14.1 per cent. more goods than during the preceding year, and to the other North American countries 148.8 per cent. more.

WAS IT EXPLORER ANDREE?

Kankakee, Ill., Sept. 2.—Walter W. Cobb and G. W. Shields, who have just returned from a 45 days' trip through the Hudson bay region, bring back a story told by Indians of the far north that may relate to the missing explorer Andree, and one of his two companions.

At Moose Factory, a Hudson bay trading post at the mouth of Moose river, the seven men stationed there reported that a party of Indians who came down from the far north last spring told of the finding of the bodies of two white men at a point about 900 miles north of Moose Factory. The story of the Indians was that the bodies were found in a broken basket, their description of which seemed to indicate a basket of a balloon.

THE DUQUESNE PLANT

Strike Matters Are Now Centered at the Mills There.

The Amount of Strike Benefits to Be Paid the Strikers Has Been Placed at $40,000 Every Week.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 31.—While there is no actual change in the steel strike situation, much transpired calculated soon to produce results. The conference between the Bay View committee and the Amalgamated officials, the continued efforts of President Burns, of the Window Glass Workers' association, to bring about arbitration or conciliation, the scathing editorial in the Labor World, calling for the impeachment of President Shaffer; the march of the strikers of McKeesport to Duquesne, and the decided effect of the injunction proceedings at Canal Dover, O., all indicate that the crisis is approaching, and that an important change in affairs is not far distant. What the outcome will be no man can tell.

The details of the conference of the Bay View committee and the Amalgamated officials has not yet been divulged by either party, but the fact that the committee is here at all would indicate that the Bay View strikers are uneasy.

Notwithstanding the report from New York that no conference has been held or arranged for between C. M. Schwab and Simon Burns looking to arbitration, the latter has not relaxed his efforts in this direction, and seems determined to bring about some sort of compromise.

The first break in the strike at McKeesport was made Friday evening when about 40 men went to work in the seamless tube department of the National tube works. The men returned to work on the same basis they worked before the sympathetic strike was inaugurated. The men did not organize, although they met with the Federation of Labor men a number of times.

Pittsburg, Sept. 2.—The principal interest in strike matters Sunday was centered in the Duquesne plant, where it was expected the strikers would make a decided move toward closing down the entire works. The report from there Sunday night said the situation was critical. The two boss melters and all first helpers went to work as usual Sunday morning, and all 12 furnaces were charged. Only one second helper went in, and all ladle men stayed out. The strikers made a thorough house to house canvass of open hearth men all day. At 4 o'clock, the time for helping and ladle men to go on, pickets were on duty on the streets and turned back three ladle men. The night turn is badly crippled, but men were brought from the Bessemer department to help out and the mill is running full. Sixty of the day turn men are off, and the strikers say not a man will report Monday morning. If the open hearth is shut down the 40-inch mill must also shut down.

A conservative estimate of the amount of strike benefits that are to be paid by the Amalgamated association to its striking members now idle has been placed at $40,000 every week. This is basing the number of beneficiaries at 10,000 and the average payment to a member at $4 a week. Secretary Williams, of the association, said that the payments will be made every two weeks, commencing September 14, and will be continued so long as the strike lasts.

The strikers stole a march on the manager of the Star tin plant at about midnight and took from him nine of a party of 12 non-unionists being taken to the mill.

The men arrived over the Pennsylvania railroad from Philmlelphia about 11:50 p. m., and were met by a large force of policemen, who had orders to see that they were safely landed in au omnibus, to be driven to the mill at Twelfth street. The policemen at the Union station performed their duty successfully, but after the vehicle left the station it was surrounded by a crowd of 350 strikers. Stones and vile epithets were hurled at the newcomers, and in spite of the efforts of the driver of the bus to speed his team, the strikers reached the mill ahead of the non-unionists, completely overpowering the two lone policemen stationed there and literally carried off nine of the men and lodged them in a hotel on Liberty avenue.

Milwaukee, Sept. 2.—The members of the Bay View lodge of the Amalgamated association listened to a statement by J. D. Hickey Sunday night, in which Mr. Hickey reported in detail what transpired at the meeting of the Amalgamated association officials and the officers of the United States steel corporation. Mr. Hickey says the strike is practically lost, as 72 per cent. of the mills are now working.

No action was taken by the lodge here. Another meeting will be held in a week.

BOILER EXPLODED.

Eleven Persons Were Killed and a Score Injured on the Steamboat City of Trenton.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—While the steamboat City of Trenton, of the Wilmington Steamboat Co., was on her way from this city to Trenton, N. J., Wednesday afternoon her port boiler exploded, killing 11 persons and injuring over a score of others. Four passengers are missing, but as many sustained slight injuries, it is thought the missing may be among those who did not find it necessary to go to the hospital.

After the explosion the boat took fire and ran aground. She lies a wrecked and blackened hulk, in the marshes opposite Torresdale. Her hold is filled with water, and it is feared more of her passengers and crew may be found in the bottom of the boat when the water is pumped out.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—It developed Thursday that the result of the explosion of the boiler on the steamer City of Trenton, while on her way up the Delaware river from this city to Trenton, was more appalling than was at first supposed. Nine persons are known to be dead, at least 20 are missing, most of whom are believed to have been on the steamer, and two of the injured still in the hospital will probably die.

Although the searchers have been dragging the river ever since Wednesday afternoon, they have been unable to find any more bodies. That there are more victims in the river is the firm belief of the authorities, and their failure to find additional dead is supposed to be due to the strong current in the river.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—The bodies of four more victims of the steamboat explosion on the Delaware river last Wednesday were found Sunday, making a total of 23 bodies so far recovered. Three of them were identified as Clara Weild, aged 15; Nellie Ballantyne, aged 23, and Elizabeth Gillison, aged 22. Four persons are still missing and six lie at the morgue waiting identification.

It is probable that the missing may be among the unidentified, as several of the bodies were burned beyond recognition.

PRESIDENT'S DAY.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The ceremonies and other formal functions which will mark President McKinley's visit to the Pan-American exposition have been finally arranged by the committee on reception. On arriving here a presidential salute of 21 guns will be fired by a squad of United States soldiers from Fort Porter, bells will ring and whistles blow. Escorted by a platoon of mounted police, the president will be driven to the residence of John G. Milburn, where, with his party, he will be entertained during his stay in Buffalo.

On Thursday, President's day, President McKinley will leave Mr. Milburn's house for the exposition at 10 o'clock. On Friday morning the president will be taken for a drive through the grounds to Niagara Falls by special train. He will return at 4 o'clock and hold a public reception in the Temple of Music.

WENT TO THE BOTTOM.

George Belcher, the Well-Known Expert and Fancy Swimmer, Drowned.

New York, Sept. 2.—George Belcher, of Brooklyn, well known as an expert and fancy swimmer, was drowned at Broad channel, Rockaway beach, Sunday. He was giving an exhibition in deep water of how a swimmer could carry a person on his back, and his daughter Eva, 18 years old, was the one he carried.

Hundreds of people were intently watching the two, when Belcher and his daughter began to flounder in the water. The crowd thought this was part of the exhibition, and no one made a move to help until Belcher's wife, who was among the spectators, began to scream that something must be wrong. Both swimmers sank. Finally a man in the crowd rushed into the water, and, after diving, brought the girl's body to the surface. She was revived, but when her father's body was recovered life was extinct.

STRANGE SIGHT.

A Fleet Knight Chased and Caught a Colored Woman Who Had Grabbed His Purse.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 30.—The sight of a plumed knight chasing wildly through the streets with a large black Negro woman doing her best to keep away from him interested passersby on Seventh street, near Main. Out on the street they flew, resembling grim death pursued by a templar. Finally the knight overhauled the fugitive, and an up-to-date policeman landed her under the city hall clock at the Central police station.

The knight was Sir C. M. Walter, of New York, who was passing an alley on Seventh street, near Main, when two Negro women stepped out and seized him while one thrust her hand into his inner coat pocket and took out his wallet containing $67.

Sir Knight Walter seized the woman, who handed his pocketbook to the other, who fled. The Sir Knight was fleet of foot, and the chase resulted as described.

The woman, Gertrude Brown, was held under $1,000 bond.

Mrs. Sarah Rice departed this life on Wednesday the 28th ult., of a painful and lingering illness. At her funeral, which was preached by the Rev. Tafe Johnson, the following beautiful reflections which she penned on the spur of the moment of inspiration caused by viewing an icy laden branch of a tree, was read to the congregation of mourning friends, who requested your correspondent to try and get them published in the Recorder:

"How to keep up is the vital question. Before my widow is a beautiful green branch of a tree in full dress. Last winter that same branch was so laden with ice that it seemed as if it must break. There are many in this sad world who are as my branch was, laden with ice. It seems as if their sorrows were like hail storms, and how to keep up—how to hold on seems to be the one vital question. If any such should read about my branch, let me say to them, do not break, cling to the one faith that God has not forgotten you. He holds the wind in His fists and the waves, that now seems as if they would swallow you up, in the hollow of his hands. You may look up and say, 'Thou hast a charge, no waves can wash away and let the storm that does Thy work deal with me as it may.' And so by simple faith in God's goodness and love you hold on: and when in future, like the branch near my window, it is all summer with you, you will remember the sorrows as waters that have passed away. My branch did not have a will of its own, but we have will and God can energetize them and we must use our wills and say though He slay me yet will I trust in Him and He never slays but to make alive. Thou breakest down but to build up, not destroy. Thou doest right, O, God."

Everything looks very favorable for a largely increased Democratic vote at Walton in the coming county election. The split in the Republican party here which seems to be a bad one, together with the active entrance into Republican policies at the Burlington convention of a large majority of the colored voters of Walton, who were influenced to do so by their political friend, seems to have healed all differences in the Democratic party. I am informed that the Gold Democrats have returned to their first love and will all be in line to a man. The Brown people have also seen the error of their way and will be with us this time. I have been very anxious to know what W. H. Metcalfe and his friends, who are numerous here, would do in the coming election after the way he was treated by his fellow Republicans of the Boone county Republican committee, so I took the liberty to ask him. His reply was "This is the worst drought we have had in this country for years, in fact, is the worst I have ever seen." After thanking him for this information he said, "It looks to me like the tomato crop will be a light one unless we have a very late fall and plenty of rain from now on." To all of which I readily agreed. He then undertook to talk to me about the Graded School, but I quit the conversation here.

Your correspondent asked the Honorable N. S. Walton how he liked the Boone Fair. He said, "it was splendid. My wife and I first went around the outer circle and struck some good side shows. We then lit on the promenade and waltzed around, reversed ourselves and returned. We met many good old friends that seem to be resurrected. In the inner circle were horses as beautiful as the world affords—horses that would have been coveted by the Arabian Knights. We didn't go into that circle because in it was a tall, handsome man with a big whip. We saw many of nature's noblemen, and the ladies reminded us of the angels that step forth ou the variegated clouds, pure from God."

FAIR NOTES.

It did rain again on Friday.

Considering the size of the crowds good order prevailed.

Jeff Eddins and John Baldon made industrious policemen.

Several of our Indiana neighbors were present two or three days.

The dining hall and refreshment stands were patronized liberally.

Delia Hunter and Minnie Cleek were the premium cake walkers.

The fair demonstrated that there are very few saddle horses in this county.

About 20,000 people passed in at the gates during the four days' exhibition.

The crowds on Friday and Saturday were as large as could be well taken care of.

There was no scarcity of water on the grounds at any time, either for man or beast.

P. E. Cason was Secretary Perry's assistant, and N. E. Riddell assisted Treasurer Rouse.

Dr. Crisler, of Ludlow, is a great admirer of a flue horse, and he was on hand every day.

The unsuccessful exhibitors did not do as much kicking as did those who were rooting for them.

Large premiums will bring out the fine stock, and $100 rings should be more numerous next year.

For the want of time several of the rings programmed for Friday were postponed until Saturday.

The exhibit of vegetables and farm produce did not indicate a drought had prevailed for many weeks

The excellent ring show this year has made a reputation for the Boone fair that should be maintained.

Milton Goodridge, of Oldham county, attended the fair and met many of his Boone county acquaintances.

A Poland china hog, said to be valued at $2,000 was walked around the ring on Friday. He was a beaut.

The voting for the handsomest young lady was conducted on the square, each person being allowed but one vote.

Thomas Burgis, of Scott county; W. C. Hankinson, Mal Edwards and E. E. Hyatt, of Ohio, each served as a judge.

Saturday a tire on a bicycle sulky exploded in the ring, and many supposed someone had discharged a pistol.

Col. Berry, of Newport, was on hand Friday, with a pleasant smile and a hearty hand-shake for all of his acquaintances.

Congressman Gooch, and his wife and two daughters, were in attendance on the last two days, and formed many pleasant acquaintances.

Judge Cantrill, of Georgetown, was in attendance on Friday and Saturday, forming the acquaintance of Boone county people.

Mrs. B. L. Gaines and daughter, of Carrolltou, were amoug those from a distance, who attended the fair and met many of their friends.

F. M Walcott, Master of the State Grange, was in attendance two or three days. On Friday, "Granger day." about 300 Grangers registered.

Col. John M. Mosby, the popular Lawrenceburg fair Ring Master, was one of the large crowd on the last day. He was much pleased with the exhibition.

A. G. Jones, of Bourbon county, took premiums to the amount of $270. He told Treasurer A. B. Rouse that he will be on hand again next year with his stock.

Friday morning Jas. Carroll was talking to a lady on the promenade, when a drunken man put in, and and Jim been let alone he would have flogged the man then and there.

Col. Craddock, of the Kentuckian-Citizen, arrived at the eleventh hour, and the young (?) man's head was soon set in a whirl by the sight of the great number of handsome ladies in the large crowd.

J. G. Blanton and wife, of Stamping Grounds and J. E. Rouse, of Payne's Depot, Scott county, and M. L. Rouse, of Fayette county, attended the fair several days, and met many of their Boone county friends.

Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Laile, made his parents supremely happy when he captured the premium in the baby show, in which there were a large number of entries. Gordon is certainly a handsome child.

Several of those who make it a business to attend all the country fairs they can reach, say the Boone county fair this year outclassed any they ever saw. The exhibit of beef cattle was the only one on which it was short.

Jones, Ray, Hughes, Parker and Throckmorton & Gatskill, foreign exhibitors, added largely to the excellence of the horse shows this year. The large premiums induced them to come, and next year like premiums will induce others to come from abroad.

Clayton B. Shourds, of Chicago, and G. W. Morrison, of Indianapolis, prominent citizens of their respective cities, attended the fair on Saturday. The latter acted as judge in the ring all day. He was acting in the same capacity at the Rushville, Indiana, fair, up to the evening before.

After the close of the fair there came very near being a serious shooting down at Finch's saloon. Thomas Roberts, of Verona, fired one shot at J. W. Aylor, and it is said it would have taken effect had someone not knocked Robert's arm up just as he pulled the trigger of his pistol. No person we have seen is able to tell what caused the shooting.

The chronic kickers were on hand as usual, this year. Each year these parties declare "such decisions will ruin the fair, and at the next there will be neither stock nor spectators." These same false predictions they have made annually for six years, and the exhibition each year has been better than that of the succeeding, while the fair has continued to grow in popularity. These chronics seem to have an influence in a direction opposite to that intended.

The effort to get a vote on the free turnpike proposition is off for the present. Monday was the last day in which the county court could enter an order calling the election for November, and as the petition contained only about half the required number of names, it was not presented to the court.

IN MEMORIAM.

A SUMMER SERMON.

Discourse Full of the Breath of Hills and Fields.

Dr. Talmage Applies His Text to the World in Which We Live—The Need of Olive Branches in Every Day Life.

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is full of the breath of the hills and fields and is a summer sermon: text, Nehemiah viii, 15, "Go forth unto the mount and fetch olive branches and pine branches and myrtle branches and palm branches and branches of thick trees to make booths."

It seems as if Mount Olivet were unmoored. The people have gone into the mountain and have cut off tree branches and put them on their shoulders, and they come forth now into the streets of Jerusalem and on the house tops, and they twist these tree branches into arbors or booths. Then the people come forth from their comfortable homes and dwell for seven days in these booths or arbors. Why do they do that? Well, it is a great festal time. It is the feast of tabernacles, and these people are going to celebrate the desert travel of their fathers and their deliverance from their troubles, the experience of their fathers when, traveling in the desert, they lived in booths on their way to the land of Canaan. And so these booths also became highly suggestive—I will not say they are necessarily typical, but highly suggestive—of our march toward Heaven and of the fact that we are only living temporarily here, as it were, in booths or arbors, on our way to the Canaan of eternal rest. And what was said to the Jews literally may be said figuratively to all this audience. Go forth unto the mountain and fetch olive branches and pine branches and myrtle branches and palm branches and branches of thick trees to make booths.

Yes, we are only here in a temporary residence. We are marching on. The merchant princes who used to live in Bowling Green, New York, have passed away, and their residences are now the fields of cheap merchants. Where are the men who 50 years ago owned Washington and New York? Passed on. There is no use in our driving our stakes too deep into the earth; we are on the march. The generations that have preceded us have gone so far on that we cannot even hear the sound of their footsteps. They have gone over the hill, and we are to follow them. But, blessed be God, we are not in this world left out of doors and unsheltered. There are Gospel booths or Gospel arbors in which our souls are to be comforted. Go forth unto the mountain and fetch olive branches and pine branches and myrtle branches and palm branches and branches of thick trees and build booths.

Well, now we are ready to construct a Gospel arbor or Gospel booth, and how shall we construct it? Well, we must get all the tree branches and build. According to my text, we must go up into the mount and bring olive branches. What does that mean? The olive tree grows in warm climates, and it reaches the height of 20 or 22 feet, a straight stem and then an offshoot from that stem. And then people come, and they strip off these branches sometimes, and when in time of war the general of one army takes one of these olive branches and goes out to the general of another army, what does that mean? Why, it means unsaddle the war chargers. It means hang up the war knapsacks. It is but a beautiful way of saying, Peace!

Now, if we are to-day going to succeed in building this Gospel arbor we must go into the mount of God's blessing and fetch the olive branches, and whatever else we must have we must have at least two olive branches, peace with God and peace with man. When I say peace with God, I do not mean to represent God as an angry chieftain, having a grudge against us, but I do mean to affirm that there is no more antagonism between a hound and a hare, between a hawk and a pullet, between elephant and swine than there is hostility between holiness and sin. And if God is all holiness and we are all sin there must be a treaty, there must be a stretching forth of olive branches.

There is a great lawsuit going on now, and it is a lawsuit which man is bringing against his Maker. That lawsuit is now on the calendar. It is the human versus the Divine, it is iniquity versus the immaculate, it is weakness versus omnipotence. Man began it. God did not begin the lawsuit. We began it. We assaulted our Maker, and the sooner we end this part of the struggle, in which the finite attempts to overthrow the infinite and omnipotent—the sooner we end it the better. Travelers tell us there is no such place as Mount Calvary, that it is only a hill, only an insignificant hill, but I persist in calling it the mount of God's divine mercy and love, far grander than any other place on earth, grander than the Alps or the Himalayas, and there are no other hills as compared with it, and I have noticed in every spot where the cross of Christ is set forth it is planted with olive branches. And all we have to do is to get rid of this war between God and ourselves, of which we are all tired. We want to back out of the war, we want to get rid of this hostility. All we have to do is just to get up on the mount of God's blessing and pluck these olive branches and wave them before the throne. Peace through our Lord Jesus Christ!

Oh, it does not make much difference what the world thinks of you, but come into the warm, intimate, glowing and everlasting relationship with the God of the whole universe! That is the joy that makes a hallelujah seem stupid. Why do we want to have peace through our Lord Jesus Christ? Why, if we had gone on in 10,000 years of war against God we could not have captured so much as a sword or a cavalry stirrup or listed off one of the wheels of the chariot of his omnipotence. But the moment we bring this olive branch God and all Heaven come on our side. Peace through our Lord Jesus Christ, and no other kind of peace is worth anything.

But my text takes a step further, and it says, Go into the mountain and fetch olive branches and pine branches and palm branches. Now, the palm tree was very much honored by the ancients. It had 360 different uses. The fruit was conserved, the sap was a beverage, the stems were ground up for food for camels. The base of the leaves was turned into hats and mats and baskets, and from the root to the top of the highest leaf there was usefulness. The tree grew 80 feet in height sometimes, and it spread leaves four and five feet long. It meant usefulness, and it meant victory—usefulness for what it produced and victory because it was brought into celebrations of triumph. And oh, how much we want the palm branches in the churches of Jesus Christ at this time! A great many Christians do not amount to anything. You have to shove them off the track to let the Lord's chariots come along.

I know the old plan was, the plan now is, in regard to worldly investments—you hear it, merchants tell you—do not put everything into one thing, do not put all your eggs into one basket. But I have to tell you in this matter of religion you had better give your all to God and then get in yourself. Oh, says some one, "My business is to sell silks and cloths." Well, then, my brother, sell silks and cloths to the glory of God. And some one says, "My business is to raise corn and carrots." Then, my brother, raise corn and carrots to the glory of God. And some one says, "My business is to manufacture horseshoe nails." Then manufacture horseshoe nails to the glory of God. There is nothing for you to do that you ought to do but for the glory of God.

Usefulness is typified by the palm tree. Ah, we do not want in the church any more people that are merely weeping willows, sighing into the water, standing and admiring their long lashes in the glassy spring. No wild cherry, dropping bitter fruit. We want palm trees, holding something for God, something for angels, something for man. I am tired and sick of this flat, tame, insipid, satin slippered, namby-pamby, flighty-tighty religion. It is worth nothing for this world, and it is destruction for eternity. Give me 500 men and women fully consecrated to Christ, and we will take this city for God in three years. Give me 10,000 men and women fully up to the Christian standard. In ten years 10,000 of them would take the whole earth for God. But when are we going to begin? We all want to be useful. There is not a man in the pews that does not want to be useful. When are we going to begin?

But the palm branch also meant victory. You all know that. In all ages, in all lands, the palm branch means victory. Well, now, we are by nature the servants of satan. He stole us, he has his eye on us, he wants to keep us. But word comes from our Father that if we will try to break loose from this doing of wrong our Father will help us, and we look the black tyrant in the face, and we fly at him, and we wrestle him down, and we put our heel on his neck, and we grind him in the dust, and we say, "Victory, victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ!" Oh what a grand thing it is to have sin under our foot and a wasted life behind our backs. "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven and whose sin is covered."

Do you not think we had better begin now to celebrate the coming victory? In the old meeting house at Somerville my father used to lead the singing, and he had the old fashioned tuning fork, and he would strike it upon his knee, and then put the tuning fork to his ear to catch the right pitch and start the hymn. But, friends, do you not think we had better be catching the pitch of the everlasting song, the song of victory, when we shall be more than conquerors? Had we not better begin the rehearsal on earth? "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat." For the Lamb which is in the mist of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them to living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

But then we must have that other olive branch, peace with man. Now, it is very easy to get up a quarrel. There are gunpowdery Christians all around us, and one match of provocation will set them off. It is easy enough to get up a quarrel. But, my brother, do you not think you had better have your horns sawed off? Had not you better make an apology? Had not you better submit to a little humiliation? "Oh," you say, "until that man takes the first step I will never be at peace with him. Nothing will be done until he is ready to take the first step!" You are a pretty Christian. When would this world be saved if Christ had not taken the first step? We were in the wrong. Christ was in the right, all right and forever right. And yet He took the first step. And instead of going and getting a knotty scourge with which to whip your antagonist, your enemy, you had better get up on the radiant mount where Christ suffered for His enemies and just take an olive branch, not stripping off the soft, cool, fragrant leaves, leaving them all on, and then try on them that Gospel switch. It will not hurt them, and it will save you. Peace be with God, peace with man. If you cannot take those two doctrines, you are no Christian.

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

From sorrow, toil and pain
And sin we shall be free,
And perfect love and friendship reign
Through all eternity.

But this evergreen of my text also suggests the simple fact that religion is evergreen. What does the pine branch care for the snow on its brow? It is only a crown of glory. The winter cannot freeze it out. This evergreen tree branch is as beautiful in winter as it is in the summer. And that is the characteristic of our holy religion. In the sharpest, coldest winter of misfortune and disaster it is as good a religion as it is in the bright summer sunshine. Well, now, that is a practical truth. For suppose if I should go up and down these aisles I would not find in this house 50 people who had had no trouble. But there are some of you who have especial trouble. God only knows what you go through with. Oh, how many bereavements, how many poverties, how many persecutions, how many misrepresentations! And now, my brother, you have tried everything else, why do you not try this evergreen religion? It is just as good for you now as it was in the day of prosperity. It is better for you. Perhaps some of you feel almost like Muckle Backie, the fisherman, who was chided one day because he kept on working, although that very day he buried his child. They came to him and said: "It is indecent for you to be mending that boat when this afternoon you buried your child." The fisherman looked up and said: "Sir, it is very easy for you gentlefolks to stay in the house with your handkerchief to your eyes in grief; but, sir, ought I to let the other five children starve because one of them is drowned? No, sir. We maun work, we maun work, though our hearts beat like this hammer."

You may have had accumulation of sorrow and misfortune. They come in flocks, they come in herds, upon your soul, and yet I have to tell you that this religion can console you, that it can help you, that it can deliver you if nothing else will. Do you tell me that the riches and the gain of this world can console you? How was it with the ecclesiastic who had such a fondness for money that when he was sick he ordered a basin of gold pieces brought to him, and he put his gouty hands down among the gold pieces, cooling his hands off in them, and the rattle and rolling of those gold pieces were his amusement and entertainment. Ah, the gold and silver, the honors, the emoluments of this world, are a poor solace for a perturbed spirit. You want something better than this world can give. A young prince, when the children came around to play with him, refused to play. He said: "I will play only with kings." And it would be supposed that you would throw away all other solace before this regal satisfaction, this imperial joy.

A thousand sacred sweets
Before we reach the heavenly fields
Or walk the golden streets.
City of eternity, to thy bridal halls
From this prison would I flee.
Ah, glory! That's for you and me!

My text brings us one step further. It says: "Go forth into the mount and fetch olive branches and pine branches and myrtle branches and palm branches and branches of thick trees." Now, you know very well—I make this remark under the head of branches of thick trees—that a booth or arbor made of slight branches would not stand. The first blast of the tempest would prostrate it. So then the booth or arbor must have four stout poles to hold up the arbor or booth, and hence for the building of the arbor for this world we must have stout branches of thick trees. And so it is in the Gospel arbor. Blessed be God that we have a brawny Christianity, not one easily upset. The storms of life will come upon us, and we want strong doctrine; not only love, but justice; not only invitation, but warning. It is a mighty Gospel; it is an Omnipotent Gospel. These are the stout branches of thick trees.

Well, my friends, you see I have omitted one or two points not because I forgot to present them, but because I have not time to present them. I have shown you here is the olive branch of peace, here is the pine branch of evergreen Gospel consolation, here the palm tree branch of usefulness and of victory, and here are the stout branches of thick trees. The Gospel arbor is done. The air is aromatic of Heaven. The leaves rustle with the gladness of God. Come into the arbor. Come into the booth. I went out at different times with a fowler to the mountains to catch pigeons, and we made our booth, and we sat in that booth and watched for the pigeons to come. And we found flocks in the sky, and after awhile they dropped into the net, and we were successful. So I come now to the door of this Gospel booth. I look out. I see flocks of souls flying hither and flying thither. Oh, that they might come like clouds and as doves to the window! Come into the booth. Come into the booth.

DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES.

Ably Set Forth by E. M. Sharon at the Iowa State Convention.

The democrats of Iowa, in convention at Des Moines, Wednesday, August 21, by a vote of 661 to 558 reaffirmed the Kansas City platform after one of the most bitter struggles ever known in an Iowa state convention. Much to the surprise of Bryan leaders, the opposition captured the committee on resolutions and submitted a majority report with the signatures of eight out of eleven members, but the minority report, presented by ex-Congressman Walter H. Butler, of Polk county, was forced through, after an exciting contest. The most noticeable feature of the meeting was the opening address of Temporary Chairman E. M. Sharon, who spoke in part as follows:

"The democratic party must not be a negative party—a party of mere opposition. It cannot be a party of calamity which draws vitality and success from industrial or financial depression.

"It will merit success because it grapples the problems of the present and strives to their solution wise statesmanship, the wisdom that comes from democratic principles, because it is guided by the compass of the constitution, ever pointing to the great declaration of human rights which the fathers proclaimed at the beginning and fixed in the firmament of our national life. From that guide and that chart we get our cardinal principles of equality of all men—natural and corporate—to enjoy the rights and bear the burdens of government.

"While it remedies the wrongs of special legislation for favored classes, it will labor for the upbuilding of right industrial and commercial progress, for real expansion from within that will make our country the great political and commercial power of the world, while all of our people will share in its prosperity, while they enjoy the blessings of free government and the noblest citizenship.

"We are facing to-day conditions that are momentous, destructive to our industries, our commerce and the welfare of our people—conditions that have been created by the republican party in violation of the democratic doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none—that it was the destiny of the United States to be the great arbiter and power, the dominant power of the western hemisphere.

"Imperialism and trusts are the two great dominant evils of our national life. They produce the two great issues which the democratic party must meet.

"The colonial policy of the administration had its inspiration and its demand from place hunters, concession grabbers, from those who have or seek special privileges in our acquired possessions. If the administration had said to those who sought concessions in Havana and Manila that its policy was equal rights to all and special privileges to none we should have had no war in the Philippines and our army of occupation would long ago have left Cuba.

"There can be no solution of the trust problem, there can be no breaking down of monopoly until government favor is withdrawn from them. Destroy monopoly and special class privileges and you kill the trusts. Commence in the patent office, the fountain head of legalized monopoly.

"If the government at Washington would demand that the stock of every corporation licensed by it represents money or property at its actual worth—if it will take care that it gets no undue advantage from transportation companies, that it uses no unfair means to destroy legitimate competition, that it sells its products for a fair price, that it treats its employes honestly and pays fair wages for a fair day's work, if it will oblige it to pay an income tax upon its possible earnings, we would find a great many Napoleons of finance losing interest in what are now the vast monopolies and trusts of the world and honest business men could use their methods of operation for the benefit of our industries.

"If congress persists in refusing to submit necessary amendments to the constitution of the United States it is the duty of the states to call a convention for that purpose and revise the constitution by adding to it the grants necessary to enable congress to control the trusts, destroy monopoly, provide for the election of United States senators by the people and provide for an income tax on persons and corporations sufficient in time of peace to pay the greater part of all the expenses of the national government."

Keep Close Watch.

Democrats that wish to control the government so that the revision of the tariff and the control of the trusts through the amendment to the anti-trust law and other necessary legislation must work earnestly that fit men, able, honest and true, are nominated for congress and for members of the legislatures that will elect United States senators. It is none too soon to be shaping events to this end. First-class nominations will always bring added support to such candidates in many congressional districts, enough to turn the tide of battle. There are 50 such districts now represented by republicans who will all vote in the next congress to prevent anti-trust legislation. As all the people are interested in striking down monopolies that oppress them, keep close watch on the way your congressman votes. If he is a democrat he will be against the trusts; if he is a republican he will almost certainly do nothing to prevent them continuing to rob you? Call the attention of your republican neighbors to the votes as they occur. Ask your congressman to send the Congressional Record to the public library that all may be informed of what congress is doing.

—The democrats of Ohio, Maryland and Virginia have shown their understanding of the demands which the present makes on their party. Their example will be followed by the great body of the party all over the country. There may be a few states in which democrats will show themselves to be still wedded to their shattered political idols. But they are few.—St. Paul Globe.

—The plain fact of the matter is that the republican party has been Hannaized, and in this condition will never lift a hand in sincerity and truth to stay the course of monopoly or drive the syndicates out of the government at Washington.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The London papers say that during the past two years there has been an increase of 30 per cent in the resident American population of that city.

POLICIES OF REPUBLICANS.

Prosperity Has Not Always Come Under That Party's Domination.

It is a standing argument of the republican spellbinder and republican newspaper that when their party is in control the country is prosperous, while disaster always follows in the wake of a national democratic victory, says the Washington Times. The great objection to this argument is that it is not true. It is a claim that will not bear scrutiny in the light of the country's past history. There have been some exceedingly favorable conditions in the United States with the republican party in absolute control of national affairs. The panic of 1873 came with the republican power at its height, and republican policies in full force. There was not even a remote prospect of any change. Gen. Grant had just been reelected and had nearly a full term to serve. And yet the financial storm swept the country like a tornado, and there never was a complete recovery until considerably more than a score of years had passed.

There was another smaller panic in 1881-82, and the whole period between 1873 and 1893 was one of very general depression, subject only to temporary and spasmodic revivals. This is a matter of economic history, and the cause of the troubles has been made the subject of the most exhaustive investigations on both sides of the Atlantic. During all of this period the policy of the country was exclusively republican, for the democrats never controlled both houses of congress and the presidency at the same time, and consequently were unable to place a democratic measure upon the national statute books.

The panic of 1893 likewise came with every vestige of our economic legislation of republican enactment. The only democratic measure we have had since the civil war was the Wilson tariff, and this was not enacted until about 15 months after the financial storm broke. The great moneyed interests of the country insisted that the panic was caused by the Sherman law, a distinctively republican measure, and during the debate on the repeal bill Senator Sherman declared in the senate that if the law were repealed (that is, the purchase clause of it) prosperity would return in ten days. The repeal bill passed, but prosperity did not return in ten days, or in ten months, or in five years. And when the campaign came on in 1896, forgetting their former declarations, the republican leaders asserted that the continued hard times were owing partly to the Wilson tariff, and partly to the silver agitation; but they conveniently omitted to explain what caused the trouble before the Wilson law was enacted and before the silver agitation began.

The panic of 1893 was, in fact, a forced one, brought on by President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle, in collusion with the New York banking, for the express purpose of giving the country an "object lesson," and thus forcing a repeal of the Sherman law. The effort was eminently successful in all respects except in restoring prosperity. In carrying out this delectable scheme, as is well known, Mr. Cleveland put himself outside the pale of true democracy, and straight in line with the current republican thought. There might and probably would have been some trouble even without this artificial forcing of the panic, for the business stagnation was almost world-wide, and we could not reasonably hope entirely to escape; but the panic would not have come when it did or have been so severe. When the revival came, that also was international in character, the change appearing in Europe about a year before it did here. But our main purpose now is merely to show how unfounded is the claim that we always have prosperity under republican policies.

TRUSTS FOSTERED BY TARIFF

Artificial Bolstering of the Tariff Has Made America the Home of Trusts.

The protective tariff league, whose publication bureau is just now especially active in denouncing any republicans who favor a revision of the tariff is also informing its devotees that there are trusts in free trade England, and therefore it cannot be protection that breeds trusts, or fosters them; so that something else must be looked for that is the "mother of trusts."

This view of the matter is commented on by the Washington Times, which says: "The champions of the tariff-pampered trusts in the United States have been in the habit of meeting the demand for the removal of duties from trust-controlled products by pointing to England, where, it is said, there are many trusts flourishing under the banner of free trade. That sort of argument may be satisfactory to those who are anxious to be satisfied, but it ought not to be to one who is honestly seeking a remedy for what is undeniably a very great evil.

"If the claim has ever been made that there are and can be no trusts at all without the aid of the tariff, the claim has been thoughtlessly urged by only a few not very well-informed people. Large capital and combinations in business are nearly always an advantage to those who combine. Obviously an individual with a million dollars capital can make many profitable turns in business that are impossible to a man whose capital is only $5,000 or $10,000. This is true in England as it is anywhere else.

"But the circumstance that large capital has an advantage in and of itself does not prove that it is wise to increase the advantage by relieving it of all competition and giving it a complete monopoly by tariff laws which operate directly to that end. To illustrate: If not English trust unreasonably advances the price to the consumer, foreign goods will at once come in and bring the price down again. In the United States, the price may be set up 25 or 30 per cent. and still the foreign goods cannot compete for the protection of the American consumer. The result is that the English trusts are forced to content themselves with profits no greater than flow naturally from the advantageous working of their larger capital; while the American trust not only has this advantage, but a very much greater one in the tariff which enables them to charge the American consumer 25 or 30 per cent more than the same goods are worth in the world's markets. The man who does not see the difference between the two cases must be either willfully blind or most woefully stupid. It is the artificial bolstering of the tariff that has literally made the United States the home of the trusts, and has swollen them to such proportions that the greatest combinations in England look like babies by comparison.

EVERYBODY IS AFFECTED.

No Matter What His Occupation, Every Workingman Is Oppressed by Combines.

How do you like the trusts as far as you have had to do with them? If you are a farmer have you bought any barbed wire or other trust produced article lately and have you reckoned how much tax you are paying the trusts? If you are a railroad man have you been thrown out of employment or forced to seek another field of labor by the combine the railroads have entered upon? If you are a storekeeper you have come in contact with the oil trust, the sugar trust, the cereal trust, the tobacco trust and a good many others and you find they are not only cutting your profit but dictate what you shall sell and where you shall buy.

If you are a clerk or a bookkeeper you have found that the coal trust and the beef trust are getting more of your income than you can afford and while they are paying millions of profit, you are unable to save a penny.

If you are a member of a labor union you know what the trusts are doing and that the steel strike is but the beginning of an attempt to overthrow organized labor and then reduce wages. The cotton mill trust has just reduced wages 14 per cent.

The railroad combine is gradually advancing rates, there is a dearth of potatoes, they have raised the rates on this necessity from the Northwest to Chicago nearly 25 per cent. and freight on coal has been advanced in about the same proportion. These advances are but the opening wedges for the ultimate extortions that it is possible for the trusts to force all to pay. That they will be cautious in making increased prices is also certain, for they are managed by the shrewdest men in the world. They are now engaged in forcing their goods into foreign markets at prices averaging 25 per cent. less than they charge us at home. This they are enabled to do through the protection granted them by the tariff.

Wise Democratic Policy.

The purpose of the democrats in the several states, as their conventions are held, seems to be the putting aside of matters on which the party could not agree in the last two national campaigns and which brought about its defeat. By confining attention in the state contests to those question which are directly involved, ignoring those which are not properly in issue, an opportunity will be given for the reuniting of the party upon such issues as may naturally arise in the next national campaign.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GOVERNMENTAL AID.

Extracts from Address Delivered by Col. J. B. Killebrew Before Tennessee Road Convention.

The general government of the United States should aid in building the great highways, as was contemplated by the founders of the government. In fact, the power given in the constitution to establish post offices and post roads might justly be construed so as to include all roads needed for postal service. Rural mail delivery will necessitate thousands of such roads through the country districts. Why should not the general government aid in building them? How could the government expend money that would do so much good to the people of this nation? Good roads would make the country more attractive, and would tend to relieve the congestion of population in the cities. The greatest drawback to country life is the inability to move with ease from point to point, owing to the bad condition of the highways. Why cannot the government make appropriations for the highways on land as well as the highways on water? But few go over the latter, while millions go over the former. Congress votes subsidies to railroads, steamships and for mapping the seas of commerce. This is a very necessary and important work, but not more important than making the highways on land. We all know how anxious congressmen are to get an appropriation in the rivers and harbors bills for the improvement of some insignificant stream in their state. How much wiser it would be to vote this appropriation for making some highway between two cities or between two states. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been wasted on streams that can never be made navigable, which, if expended on our highways, would give us the best system of roads in the world.

Suppose the general government should appropriate every ten years an amount equal to that now expended for pensions, say, $150,000,000, for the building and improvement of the roads of the country. This would give, in round numbers, two dollars per capita for the entire population of the United States. This continued for two generations, would grade, macadamize, and gravel every great public thoroughfare in the country, when aided by local appropriations.

Who would begrudge the expenditure after such roads have been built? Who would not say that the expenditure was a wise one, elevating in its influences and adding immensely to the tangible wealth and commerce of the country? We paid more than this amount in the expenditures of the Spanish war. Is there a single person who would not receive a benefit from good roads far greater than he received from the Spanish war? Put it in another way: Is there a single person now using the highways of the country, or whose business is in any way affected by the traffic on the highways of the country (and this touches the business interests of every man and woman in the United States), who would not be willing to pay as much for good roads as he has paid for the war with Spain?

In almost every material thing the United States takes the first rank except in the matter of roads. In this respect it is far behind the most enlightened nations. In all the states some good roads have been built, but would it not add immensely to the growth and prosperity of this country to have its highways improved so as to be in harmony with all its other great improvements? It is the one thing in which we are still lingering in the unrelieved darkness of the Middle Ages; it is the one blot upon our escutcheon of material progress; it is the one thing that would benefit every man, woman and child in the United States, and yet we hesitate to do it.

Objections are made by many that it is not the duty of the general government to aid in building roads; that if it did it would place upon the general government the responsibility for the welfare of the people. But is not the general government responsible for the welfare of the people? The constitution gives the authority to build roads for postal service. Why not, then, build them? The improvement of our rivers is done for the welfare of the people. Why should not roads be built for their greater welfare? Both are highways, one by water, the other by land.

THE KOCH SENSATION.

German Bacteriologist's Tuberculosis Ideas Are Not Accepted by the World of Science.

The statement of Dr. Robert Koch, the eminent bacteriologist and physician, at the recent British congress on tuberculosis, that human tuberculosis and bovine tuberculosis were radically different diseases has created a stir among physicians and dairymen. Dr. Koch said he has amply demonstrated that cattle could not be infected with human tuberculosis. The counter proposition that human beings were not liable to infection from bovine tuberculosis was harder to prove, but he stated that personally he was satisfied that this was the case. Post-mortem evidence supporting this belief was recited at length. Human immunity from bovine infection disposes of the belief of infection from dairy products, and he considers this source of danger so slight as to be unworthy of precautionary measures. These statements, coming from the most eminent authority living, carry much weight and are greeted with much joy by dairymen, although they are not accepted by all scientists. Indeed, they are bitterly repudiated by Virchow and others almost as prominent as Koch, and the weight of professional opinion in the United States will be against Koch's latest views until they are at least fully substantiated by experience.

The absurd positions which some of our state boards of health and other officials have taken regarding tuberculous cattle are again emphasized, and it is shown that there has been needless slaughter of many animals. One of the strongest props of pure milk venders and tuberculin users will be knocked out from under them if Koch's views are sustained—that milk from infected cows is not dangerous to use. Already an agitation has been started in some states to repeal existing laws requiring the inspection and use of the tuberculin test on cattle.

There is no need to go to the other extreme and relax all vigilance in respect to tuberculosis among cattle. While a mild form of the disease does not affect the general usefulness of an animal, a badly infected herd never has and never can be profitable to the owner, because of the large death rate and great loss from diminished production of sick animals. It is evident to all that the most healthful surroundings, cleanliness and best care of the animals pays in increased production and better general health of the herd, and for this reason, if for no other, all badly affected animals should be disposed of. Dairymen and cattlemen must come to look upon tuberculosis in the same way as they do toward hoppy jaw, anthrax and other contagious diseases—that is disastrous to the herd and unprofitable to the owner. —Orange Judd Farmer.

Dairy Wisdom in Granules.

Never use "butter increasers," for anything that will recover the casein as well as the fat from milk, is a fraud, and the product is not butter. Never milk in a rusty tin pail, or put milk into any receptacle that is rusty. Coloring matter does not affect the wholesomeness of butter. Never put ice into cream to cool it. If you let butter freeze it will soon go off flavor. The cow and not feed, gives the richness to milk. Ensilage does not affect the quality of butter, though to a very highly cultivated taste it may slightly flavor the butter. Milk contains from four to five per cent. of sugar. Cream is often kept too long in winter, and poor butter is the result. A good cheese ought to be one-third fat. Feed the cow the same for cheese as you would for butter.—Horace Benton, in Agricultural Epitomist.

Annual Butter Production.

It is reported that the annual output of butter in the United States has now reached the grand total of 1,400,000,000 pounds, which seems at first glance an aggravated case of overproduction, but when the amount is divided among our population it gives each one less than 18½ pounds for a whole year, or less than seven-ninths of an ounce a day. If everybody is able to eat as much butter as he wants, then we are among the lightest eaters of butter of the so-called civilized countries, and instead of trying to build up a foreign demand for butter we would better try to enlarge the appetite of our own people for that product.—Rural World.

IRELAND'S CLAIM.

The Green Isle Does Something in the Way of Supplying the World's Wants.

"It surely makes me laugh, this talk I see in the English papers, and in yours, too," said Mr. W. O'Leary, of Limerick, reports the Washington Post. "It's 'England supplies the world, and America supplies what England has not got,' 'England is worried over American competition,' 'English brewers are buying up American breweries to save themselves from American competition,' 'England, the great shipbuilding nation.' Don't you know that Ireland has a bigger brewery than all England? Don't you know that the shipbuilders of Ireland can buy and sell the shipbuilders of England and Scotland? Don't you know that the 'canny Scot,' who is supposed by American journalists to like his own harsh liquor, patronizes Irish products in preference to his own?

"Ireland has the largest brewing and shipbuilding concerns in the world. Ireland supplies half the British empire with handkerchiefs, collars, table cloths and shirts and puts on British tables the choicest breakfast bacon and butter. The English usually conceal the identity of the two last named under the brand of 'Wiltshire' and 'Dorset,' but it is Irish and the treasury officials can testify to it. Neither the Tyne nor the Clyde nor the Mersey show anything equal to the shipbuilding concern of Harland & Wolff at Belfast. Yet there is nothing the English and Scots are so proud of as their shipbuilding. For years this firm has held the highest place in the world so far as tonnage launched is concerned. The yards employ 9,000 men and support a good-sized town. The works cover 80 acres, and the Teutonic and Majestic, two of the most famous ocean greyhounds, were built there. It's a byword in the British navy that no breakdown of machinery, a thing so frequent, has ever occurred in any British naval vessel built in the Belfast yards.

"Not anything shoddy ever comes from Ireland. That is why the bulbriggan is imitated by British and German manufacturers. Guinness, of Ireland owns the largest brewery in existence. Their products pay a half million pounds excise every year. There are 13,000 Irish breweries, but Guinness produces one out of every 20 barrels of beer credited annually to Great Britain. It is a funny thing, and a bad thing for America, as well as Ireland, that many native merchants sell the poorer grades of American butter as 'Irish,' and pure Irish butter is sold as 'Dorset' or 'Danish.' Scotland—the canny Scots, who like none but their own liquor—drink 500,000 gallons of Irish whisky every year. Look up the statistics, my boy, and you will see that I have understated the amount that Ireland gives to England annually, not only for her consumption, but in most cases for the purpose of receiving an English brand before sale.'

KING OSCAR A GOOD FELLOW.

How the Popular Swedish Ruler Good-Naturedly Helped a Newspaper Man.

Like all other European royalties King Oscar of Sweden is frequently called upon to appear in public in connection with the inauguration of public enterprises, the laying of foundation stones, etc. On all such occasions these notable personages are expected to and generally do deliver speeches. These addresses in most cases are prepared by private secretaries, but King Oscar's speeches are nearly always impromptu, says a London exchange. Some time ago he was passing through Gothenburg on his way to inaugurate a new railway. At the station he was accosted by a newspaper man who had been sent to the inauguration as a reporter to some big Danish paper. The journalist wanted a copy of the speech to telegraph to his paper because he had no time to wait for its delivery if the speech was to appear in his paper the next morning. So he asked the king to give him a copy of the speech which had been prepared for him. His majesty laughingly replied that his remarks would be impromptu, at which the reporter betrayed considerable alarm, because under these circumstances it would be impossible for his paper to get the speech. Seeing the newspaper man's perturbation the king said:

"Oh, well, come into my carriage and I will give you an idea of what I am going to say."

No second invitation was needed. The two men entered the carriage and as it rolled toward the depot King Oscar dictated a speech, which the reporter shorthanded. As delivered at the exercises the address was almost word for word a duplicate of that given in the carriage.

Thought It Was Young Again.

Everybody has heard of the old warhorse that prances and snorts and sniffs the battle from afar whenever it hears a bugle call. Well, at Wellington the other day, a young lady was driving the old family nag. In its youth the family nag had been a racer with many winning races to its credit. As the young lady drove down the street a bunch of ponies, driven by a man whirled on the run from a side street, and attempted to pass. But with tail up and nostrils distended the family nag renewed its youth, joined in the race, and came down the pike an easy winner. But think how the old horse must have felt next morning—you brothers in the sere and yellow leaf, who, thinking you were as young as you used to be, raced on occasion with the ponies on the pike.—Kansas City Journal.

WASHINGTON'S DOG CEMETERY

Nation's Capital Has a Burial Place for Canines of High Degree.

A cemetery for dogs has now been established in Washington, D. C., and is expected to prove a useful institution. Most people who love their canine pets are puzzled to know how to dispose of them after their demise, inasmuch as local laws usually forbid their burial within city limits. Interments in the back yard will make trouble, if the police know of it, and, on the other hand, to consign the remains of a dearly loved animal to a casual colored man for relegation to the most convenient ash dump is not agreeable to the feelings, says the New York Herald.

Accordingly there ought to be a burying ground for dogs in the outskirts of every city. The one in Washington has been established by a company of gentlemen who are dog lovers, and the locality chosen is on the old Bladensburg road, a short distance beyond the limits of Washington proper. It is in a grove of beautiful oaks, sloping toward a green meadow, and adjoins a famous estate formerly owned by W. W. Corcoran, which has been in litigation ever since the death of that millionaire.

Lots are sold just as in any ordinary cemetery, and the owners, having paid the small price demanded, may obtain for a moderate fee, given to the man in charge, whatever attention they may desire for the graves, including the erection of headboards with suitable inscriptions and the planting of grass.

To some people this may seem to be carrying sentiment too far, but there are plenty of others who think that the lifelong faithfulness of a four-footed friend amply deserves the bestowal of a permanent resting place decently cared for.

PE-RU-NA AVERTS DANGER

In That Critical Time When a Girl Becomes a Woman.

MISS BESSIE KELLOG.

Miss Bessie Kellog, President of the Young Woman's Club, of Valley City, North Dakota, writes the following from First street, South, Valley City, North Dakota:

"Ever since I matured I suffered with severe monthly pains. The doctor did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help me. He finally suggested that I have an operation. One of my friends who had been cured of a similar affliction through the use of Peruna, advised me to give it a trial first, and so I used it for three weeks faithfully. My pains diminished very soon and within two months I had none at all.

"This is six months ago, and during that time I have not had an ache nor pain. I give highest praise to Peruna. Every woman ought to use it, and I feel sure that it would bring perfect health."—BESSIE KELLOG.

The experience of Miss Bessie Kellog, of North Dakota, ought to be read by every girl in the land. It is a critical period in a woman's life when she ceases to be a girl and becomes a woman. Very few pass through this period without some trouble. The doctor is called and he generally advises an operation. Perhaps he will subject the patient to a long series of experiments with nervines and tonics. The reason he does not often make a cure is because he does not recognize the trouble.

In a large majority of the cases catarrh of the female organs is the cause. Peruna relieves these cases promptly because it cures the catarrh. Peruna is not a palliative or a sedative or a nervine or a stimulant. It is a specific for catarrh and cures catarrh wherever it may lurk in the system.

This girl was lucky enough to find Peruna at last. As she says, the doctors did not seem to understand what the trouble was and the medicine he prescribed from time to time did not help her. Peruna hit the mark at once and she is now recommending this wonderful remedy to all the other girls in the United States.

Thousands of the girls who look at her picture will see and read her sincere testimonial, will be led to try Peruna in their times of trouble and critical periods. Peruna will not fail them. Every one of them will be glad and it is to be hoped that their enthusiasm will lead them to do as this girl did—proclaim the fact to the world so that others may read it and do likewise.

Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann, Amsterdam, N. Y., writes:

"I have been sick with catarrh of the stomach and pelvic organs for about five years, and had many a doctor, but none could help me. Some said I would never get over it. One day when I read your almanac I saw those who had been cured by Peruna; then I thought I would try it. I did, and found relief with the first bottle I took, and after two more bottles I was as well and strong as I was before."—Mrs. Christopher Fliehmann.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

ALL DRUGGISTS.

CANDY CATHARTIC — Cascarets — taste good. Eat them like candy. They remove any bad taste in the mouth, leaving the breath sweet and perfumed. It is a pleasure to take them, and they are liked especially by children.

SWEETEN THE STOMACH — Cascarets — sweeten the stomach by cleansing the mouth, throat and food channel. That means they stop undigested food from souring in the stomach, prevent gas forming in the bowels, and kill disease germs of any kind that breed and feed in the entire system.

PURELY VEGETABLE — Cascarets — are purely vegetable and contain no mercurial or other mineral poison. They consist of the latest discoveries in medicine, and form a combination of remedies unequaled to make the blood pure and rich and make clean skin and beautiful complexion.

LIVER TONIC — Cascarets — tone the stomach and bowels and stir up the lazy liver. They do not merely soften the stools and cause their discharge, but strengthen the bowels and put them into lively, healthy condition, making their action natural.

MILD BUT SURE — Cascarets — never grip nor gripe. They act quietly, positively and never cause any kind of uncomfortable feeling. Taken regularly they make the liver act regularly and naturally as it should. They keep the sewage of the body properly moving and keep the system clean.

BOON FOR MOTHERS — Cascarets — increase the flow of milk in nursing mothers. If the mother eats a tablet, it makes her milk mildly purgative and has a mild but certain effect on the baby. In this way they are the only safe laxative for the nursing infant.

CURE CONSTIPATION — Cascarets — taken patiently, persistently, will cure any form of constipation, no matter how old or how often other remedies have failed. They are absolutely guaranteed to cure any case, or purchase money will be cheerfully refunded.

NEVER SOLD IN BULK — Cascarets — cost 10c, 25c, 50c a box. Samples sent free for the asking. We publish no testimonials but sell Cascarets on their merit under absolute guarantee to cure. Buy and try a box to-day or write us for free samples and booklet.

$100 REWARD will be paid to any reader of this paper who will report to us any attempt of substitution, or sale of "something just as good" when Cascarets are called for, and furnish evidence upon which we can convict. All correspondence confidential.

A Communication.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at nights. I tried several doctors and various patent medicines, but could get nothing to give me any relief until my wife got a bottle of this valuable medicine, which has completely relieved me.—W. S. Brockman, Bagnell, Mo. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

New York, August 14.—Careful examination of the reports of leading life insurance companies shows that in a great majority of cases the beneficiaries receive much; more than the total amount paid to the company by the insured. This is in every case in direct proportion to the thrift of management and the character of investments of the company. The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, by far the largest and strongest of the life companies reports for the five weeks ending August 3, a total of 359 death claims amounting to $1,341,197.36. For this the insured paid a total of but $668,967,98, or not quite half the amount received by beneficiaries. Between January 1, and July 1, 1901 the Mutual Life paid 2312 death claims for $8,156,298,89, which cost the insured only $4,742,353,31, much less than one-half. The company has returned to policy holders a grand total of over $450,000,000, and has steadily growing assets of more than $330,000,000.

These are among the resons which are inducing so many thrifty business men to look to life insurance as the most profitable investment for the protection of business or family. The Mutual life is said to be writing much more insurance than in any previous year.

The above taken from the Lexington Morning Herald, gives the readers an idea of the proportions life insurance has assumed in the great country of ours as a protection and a savings institution. The Mutual Life is mentioned because it is the largest in the world.

John P. Walker, one of the oldest citizens of Dearborn county, Ind., died one day last week, near Aurora. He was one of the pillows of the Democratic party and will be greatly missed by that organization. He was born in Ireland February 2, 1816.

Business is booming in Aurora this summer. Everybody has work that wants it. A number of fine residences and two large business houses are being erected. The sidewalks on each side of Second street are being torn up and will be relaid with artificial rock and be widened two feet.

During a violent thunder storm last Tuesday, lightning struck the large barn belonging to R. R. Gaines, situated near the Gasburg school house, killing a horse belonging to Jas. Snyder, jr. Two other horses standing by the side of the one killed were not hurt. Five men were in the barn and were slightly stunned. The lightning passed thro a lot of hay without setting it on fire.

This community was thrown into great excitement by the sudden disappearance of James Moreland from the house of Terry Bondurant and shortly after daylight, nearly every man around was searching for him for three or four hours. He was finally found covered up in the hay in R. R. Gaines' barn nearby. He has been in very bad health for a long time, which caused his mind to become unbalanced.

Jim Burns was laid up nearly all of last week.

Ed Baker and family, of Coal City, were visiting relatives here last week.

This is the first time in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants that corn cutting came before tobacco cutting.

Miss Eliza Hewett had quite a mishap last Thursday. She went to water her horse, when the horse stumbled, throwing her head first in a pond of water. She escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Etta Smith, wife of Dr. Geo. Smith, of Welsburg, Ind., attended the grandmother's funeral here last Thursday. The Doctor could not come on account of having some patients that he could not leave.

GUNPOWDER—Mrs. Rella Corbin and two sons, of Augusta, were visiting relatives here, last week.

Clint Blankenbecker and W. N. Surface will attend the Alexandria fair, next Saturday.

Harrison Clore bought of John Aylor one of his rams, that took the premium at the fair last week.

E. H. Surface is busy marketing his crop of peaches. They are extra fine and he is realizing a good price.

M. L. Rouse and daughter, Miss Ivs, of near Lexington, attended the fair, and we are glad to know that Mr. R.'s health has improved very much, he having been on the sick list all summer.

The death angel has again visited this community and taken from our midst Mrs. Fannie Clarkson. The summons came early Monday morning and she passed peacefully and quietly away. She had been an invalid for several months and suffered intensely during that time to her illness. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Slater at Hopeful church. Tuesday afternoon, after which the remains were buried in the Hopeful cemetery in the presence of a host of friends and relatives. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her death. She united with Hopeful church early in life and was a faithful member until death. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was of a party that inetnded making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Lacyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rims good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather side quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes if you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 60, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1901. NO. 47.

NEWS from Buffalo, N. Y., is eagerly sought.

As might be expected the name of the fiend who shot the President, is unpronounceable.

ACCORDING to last reports the President is improving nicely, no bad-symptoms having appeared.

It is not indispensable to an assassination that the victim should die. Assassination is defined "to kill, or attempt to kill, by surprise or secret assault."—C. -J.

JUDGE CANTRILL'S charge to the Franklin county grand jury, Monday, was a hot one, delivered straight from the shoulder, and some of those whom he got close to will raise a howl.

THE New York Clearing House Committee has called Secretary Gage's attention to the demand for currency to move the crops and expresses the hope that measures will be adopted by which a portion of the Treasury surplus may be replaced in circulation.

A MEETING of the Goebel Monument Commission was held in Frankfort Monday and an Executive Committee was appointed to arrange for the erection of the monument. The amount of the fund, which was raised by popular subscription, is $13,322,25.

IT is apparent that the farmers of this county will enter the winter under most unfavorable conditions. At this time there is no promise of any fall grass, and without material assistance from that direction provender for stock will not be sufficient to last through the winter.

THE chairman of the Ohio Republican State Executive Committee refused to acquiese in a suggestion from the chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee that all appointments for political speeches for the campaign in Ohio be cancelled as a mark of respect to the President.

THE Frankfort police arrested a man, Monday, that wore a big black patch over one eye and carried an ugly looking gun in his pocket. The lame eye was a sham but the pistol was all it appeared to be. The man was lurking about the county attorney's office, and it was feared he wanted to give an anarchical performance,

THE Cynthiana Times says: The contest for the nomination, for State Senator from the Thirtieth district was amicably settled Friday by the Robertson County Committee re-counting the ballots, which increased Hon. E. Kenton's majority from 31 to 37. Mr. Kenton expressed himself as favoring Hon. James B. McCreary for U. S. Senator."

FROM the report of the Teachers' Institute held at Walton, last week, as furnished the RECORDER by the Secretary, the conclusion that the Conductor was pretty nearly the whole thing again as usual, is justified. The teachers, all of whom are well up in educational matters and abundantly qualified to make an Institute interesting and profitable, apparently took very little part in the proceedings, merely lending their presence. Why this was thus can be accounted for only on the theory that the teachers wanted their hired man to earn his money.

THE attempt to assassinate President McKinley at Buffalo, last Thursday, was the act of a fiend in the guise of a human. People may be divided in political and religious opinions, but when it comes to the acts of the assassin or of the would-be assassin, all who are worthy of the name human are of one opinion, and that is that the laws of this country do not provide a penalty anything like severe enough for such a grave offense. The attempt on President McKinley's life was an awful shock not only to this nation but to the, world, and the anxiety on the part of this country ever since the news of the attempt to take the President's life was flashed over the wires from Buffalo, has been intense. Political differences are forgotten, and all true Americans unite in a prayer for the President's speedy and perfect recovery. Full particulars of the shooting appear on another page in this issue.

WAR AT BEAVER

About 9 o'clock last Saturday night the sheriff was summoned by telephone to Beaver to arrest some parties who had been making the village unusually lively that afternoon. Deputy Sheriff Allphin responded to the summons promptly, and about noon Sunday he arrived from the scene of action with Lon and Berl Henry, whom he lodged in jail in default of $200 bail each, the arrest being made under a warrant issued by Esquire Noell. The particulars concerning the melee are about as follow: The boys were in their cups that afternoon as boys will sometimes get, and between 5 and 6 o'clock, the fighting properties of the whisky began to assert themselve, and it was not long until a general mixup was in progress. The two Henry boys and John Ryan opened the ball. Ryan was making poor progress with two antagonists, when Will Howard attempted to lend him a helping hand. The Henrys were making a desperate fight, and were very careless as to what kind of implements they used. They put Ryan out of the contest with a smash in the face with a heavy stone that not only gave him a vivid view of all the stars know to the astronomers, but relieved him of several of his teeth, and left his face in a badly mangled condition. Howard was given a swipe with a knife that laid open an ugly gash from the right to near the left ear, exposing the wind pipe, while he received, also, an ugly cut in one hand. Will West got into the scrap during its progress, and when Ryan and Howard had been disposed of the Henrys turned their attention to him, when he started west, taking refuge in T. J. Hughes' store, where Merit Jack interposed and checked the pursuers whose gleaming blades seemed to thirst for West's blood. Mr. Jack succeeded in getting the Henrys to leave by way of the front door, which he closed and locked, after which West left the room via the rear door. Hostilities were now suspended and Dr. Ryle was called to administer to the necessities of the wounded. Fortunately he found nobody in a necessarily dangerous condition. The Henrys gave bond yesterday for their appearence at the next term of the circuit court, and they were released from jail.

STATE NEWS.

Peter Carter, aged 72 years, is the father of the baby that took first prize at the Lawrenceburg Fair. He is living with his fourth wife.

The Court of Appeals will convene for the next term on September 16, with nearly a thousand cases on the docket, fifty-five of which are Commonwealth cases and the others civil cases, 550 of which are cases under submission, and 365 appearance and continuance cases.

Richmond Climax: "Notwithstanding the general complaint of a short corn crop, Judge E. C. Million tells us that he has 50 acres of that cereal at Newby, this county, that will make 15 barrels to the acre. Mr. Ashford Million, of the same locality, says his crop is the best that he has had in 10 years.

The large tobacco barn belonging to Church Minor and situated on his farm, near Cleveland, burned last Friday night. Mr. Minor sustains a great loss, as the barn contained a large purchase of tobacco, considerable hay and corn, also many farming implements. He carried a small insurance on the barn but no insurance on the contents.—Owen News.

The damage done to crops in Grant county by the drouth can hardly be estimated. In some parts of the county corn may make as much as half a crop and it is doubtful if the average in the county will be as much as a third crop. Tobacco has not suffered so much as corn, and it will, if frost keeps off until the first of October, make something like half a crop.—Williamstown Courier.

FISCAL COURT IN SPECIAL SESSION.

Telephone Franchise Settled.

A special term of the Fiscal Court was held last Thursday, all the justices of the peace being present. Several claims against the county were allowed, but the most important business considered was the proposition to donate the iron bridge that use to span Woolper creek, at Plattsburg, to be erected across Big Bone creek at the point known as the Fish Trap. The question of donating the bridge was thoroughly discussed by the court and several witnesses heard as to the necessity of bridge at the proposed location. The court finally entered the following order.

"On motion of Esqs. Gaines and Walton, the old Woolper bridge now owned by the county of Boone is hereby donated for the use of a bridge across Big Bone creek at what is known as the Fish Trap, on condition that it be placed across said creek in good condition for public travel, the expense of erecting same to be borne by Gallatin county; and when so completed said bridge shall be the joint property of the two counties. Four months from this date is granted for Gallatin county to accept this proposition and bind herself to place said bridge in proper position, and in the event of the bridge being so used it shall be constructed under the supervision and to the satisfaction of a committee of three to be appointed by the judge of the Boone county court, who shall act with a similar committee appointed by the Gallatin county fiscal court" W. W. Grimsley, M. E. Hance and J. W. Kennedy are appointed a committee to present the above proposition to Gallatin county fiscal court.

The next important matter considered by the court was the telephone franchise for this county, and on that subject the following order was entered:

"Ordered by the court that the Boone county Telephone Company of Burlington, Ky., and The T. J. Hughes Telephone Company, of Beaver Lick, Ky., have the privilege of erecting over the public roads and highways of this county a telephone and telegraph system for a period of twenty-five years, and so long as said company do not interfere with the travel on said roads, and no other company, corporation, partnership, or persons shall use, erect or maintain a telephone or telegraph system over the public roads and highways without the consent of the fiscal court within said time."

A Rough Ride.

A trip over the free turnpike from the Bellevue pike to Woolper creek is sufficient to put the most ardent advocate of free turnpikes to thinking along the line of the opponents to free pikes. That road was in a bad condition when the county took charge of it; and it has continued to grow worse until its condition rivals that of the roughest creek road. Until Boone county inaugurates a better system for keeping her public roads in order she has no business with free turnpikes. Let someone come forward and introduce a system for keeping in repair the public roads that will insure the proper application of the money raised for road purposes, a system by which repairs put on roads will repair, and then free turnpikes will follow in a short time.

Caught Only Two.

M. T. Garnett, Sidney Gaines and Ben Cason and son were fishing down on Gunpowder last Wednesday. Their work netted two good bass for the Casons.

A Real Estate Deal.

Judge Lassing has purchased of Robert Wilson the residence and premises he has occupied here in Burlington for several years.

Insurance Election.

On the first Monday in next month the Boone County Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, will hold its annual election of officers. There appears to be a contest for the offices of secretary and agent.

Two Daily Mails Wanted.

An effort is being made to secure two mails a day for the Union office—noon and evening. The patrons of the office will find that two mails a day are a great convenience, and will increase the business of the office considerably.

N. K. A. A. ELECTION.

The stockholders of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association met on their fair grounds last Wednesday afternoon, and elected officers for this year. B. F. McGlasson was reelected president, E. H. Blankenbeker, vice-president, and A. B. Rouse, treasurer, without opposition. Alvin Perry, of Independence, and Hubert Conner, of Hebron, were put in nomination for secretary. Mr. Perry was elected. J. L. Riley, F. A. Utz, J. O. Griffith, Orin Percivall and W. E. Walton were reelected directors on the first ballot. The unanimity with which all of the above officers were reelected shows that the stockholders are perfectly satisfied with their administration of affairs.

A Big Will Suit.

Frank Brown died in California last December, estimated to be worth $100,000. Several parties in this part of the country were named in his will for various amounts. Among the people in Crittenden who were thus fortunate were, Ella and Vina Brown, who received a devisal of $7,000 each; Tim N. and Fred Brown $3,000 and $2,000 respectfully; Edwin Brown, $600; John Brown's two sons of Cincinnati, $5,000; while John Brown himself was left the remainder of the estate. A contest has been instituted and an attempt will be made to break the will by the heirs who are left out in the cold. Hon. J. G. Tomlin, of Walton, will fight the case at this end of the line, while a California attorney has been employed to look after the contestors' interest at the California end.—Crittenden Cor. Williamstown Courier.

Crop Report.

Agricultural Commissioner Nall writes encouragingly of crop conditions in his report for the month just closed. It is made up from the reports of one hundred correspondents in about as many of the counties of the State. It shows that while early corn had already been too badly injured when the drouth was broken to be much benefited that the late planting was given a start which promises a fair yield, and that the summary of estimates for the entire State is 61 per cent., as compared with an average crop, a gain of 6 points over the report of August 1. The tobacco crop has, the Commissioner says, done better, being more recuperative, gaining for the month 21 points and reaching 78 per cent. of a full crop.

World Coming to An End Again.

Professor Ludwig Morienburger declares that the world is coming to an end again. His explanation of the phenomenon is that it has jumped its orbit and is careering around in space. He says that owing to this fact the summers will become hotter and the winters will become cooler till the human race can no longer endure the transition. There seems to be something mysterious about this theory, but the average person will not attempt to unravel it. He will simply put his trust, as heretofore, in the coal man and the ice man and the established ways of providence.

Election Officers.

The County Election Commissioners must, under the law, meet not later than Sept. 20th and appoint for each election precinct two judges, a clerk and sheriff to act as such in their precinct. The County Executive Committee of the two political parties may on or before September 15 designate in writing for each precinct a list of not less than eight names, from which the officers of election must be elected, one judge must be selected from each list and the sheriff from one and the clerk from the other.

Ex-Slaves To Be Pensioned.

Tuesday night a negro woman addressed a large crowd of colored people at the court house. She is endeavoring to get the old exslaves pensioned by the government, and her mission is to agitate the colored people and prevail upon them to demand pensions. She is an excellent talker and uses able arguments.—Marion Press.

A Shocking Calamity.

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. It's simply wonderful for Burns, Boils, Piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25c. Sold at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner's Florence; O. N. Grant's Bellevue.

A Wild West Performance.

Deputy Sheriff Allphin went to Big Bone, one day last week, to arrest Leonard Miller, who, under the influence of liquor, gave a Wild West performance on the public highway near Union as he was going home from the fair on Saturday evening. He compelled two or three young men, who came along from the fair, to halt and get out of their buggies and cut pigeon wings in the dust, keeping time to the music he made by the rapid firing of his six shooter. Recognizing the enormity of his behavior, Miller made himself very scarce as soon as he sobered up and the officer failed to find him.

The Harvest Home.

With a good day the attendance at the Harvest Home next Saturday will be large and the exhibition interesting. The young people who enjoy dancing will have the undisturbed use of the platform all day with excellent music with which to keep time with flying feet. The occasion will be a fitting conclusion of the outdoor enjoyments of the season.

Faith Cure Failed.

The Glasgow Times says a Michigan faith-cure man put a pistol to his own body and pulled the trigger, declaring the Lord would protect him from harm. The Lord, however, wisely refrained from interfering with the fool-killer's business, and the funeral was set for 8:30 the next morning on account of the intense heat.

Late Corn Hit Hard.

The late corn has been given a severe jolt by the dry weather, and fields which it was thought would be very much benefited by the showers last month, will be no better than the early corn.

Hogs Feasting on Peaches.

It is very seldom that hogs are fed on peaches, but they are consuming their full share of that delicious fruit this year. Some of the farmers are giving them all they will eat.

A Good Showing.

The monthly balance sheet of the offices of the State Auditor and Treasurer was on hand in the Treasury at the close of business on August 31, $194,088.55.

A Short Stay.

The Holiness preachers who came here to hold a two weeks' meeting preached for two nights and then left. They said the board they would have to pay was too high for them.

A Nice Balance.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer show a nice balance on the right side of the ledger, and that the last fair was a success financially as well as otherwise.

A Bad Combination.

A bad cold accompanied by a very severe sore throat has been annoying several of our citizens, some of whom have been quite sick of it.

Wheat Sowed In the Dust.

It is said sow wheat in the dust if you want a good crop. It now looks like the drill will be followed by a dense cloud of dust this fall.

Fined and Acquitted.

On Wednesday of last week John Noel was fined $25 and given 10 days in jail by a jury in Squire Walker's court, the charge being abusing his family and general cussedness at home. It developed later that the jury had not been sworn and defendant's attorney, J. W. Cammack, asked for a new trial upon that ground, which was granted the next day. At the second trial Noel was acquitted, greatly to the disgust of attorney J. W. Douglas, who prosecuted the case.—Owenton Herald.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. F. Grant's, Bellevue.

The Poultry Yard.

Oats are egg producing.

A turkey hen will not moult until after setting.

The chickens that eat the most grit are in the best condition.

As a general rule a hen that fattens easily is not a good layer.

When fattening geese give a mixture of corn and wheat.

It is not usually a good plan to help chicks out of the shell; there is too much risk.

To have good layers we must breed from good laying stock.

Filth is very easily carried to the system through the drinking water.

Rolled oats or pin head oatmeal is an excellent food for very young chickens.

In marketing poultry the quality and condition are prime factors.

Prepare a good shade for the fowls; they will need it now that hot weather is here.

Hens must have carbonate and phosphate of lime for their shells keep supply where they can help themselves.

The nests should be thoroughly; cleaned up occasionally, burn up the old material before putting in new.

One advantage in feeding whole or cracked grain in the place of soft food is that it does not compact in the crop.

In a great majority of cases failure is caused by the man, not the hen, the market nor the climate.

The best plan to mark chicks is to buy a punch for that purpose and put a hole in the web of the foot.

Sprinkling the nests with a solution of carbolic acid will aid materially to keep free from vermin.

It never pays to crowd the fowls at any time and especially so when they must be confined the greater part of the time.

When turkeys can be given a free range they can be kept at a comparatively small expense but in confinment they eat more than hens.

Too much stimulating food causes over egg production and the result from such a course is poor hatches, weak chicks and inferior stock.

We have many times urged that horses should be watered before feeding grain, and given instances of harm to horses where this was neglected. The Breeders' Gazette emphasizes this matter in the following:

"No one can rightly lay claim to the name of a horseman who would make a practice of allowing a horse to distend his grain-loaded stomach by drinkiug after eating and thus wash the undigested food out of the stomach into the intestines. Such ignorant practice is a fruitful cause of colic and chronic malassimilation. Some men—again not horsemen—argue that a horse knows when he wants a drink and should be allowed to take it at will, and hence permit their horses to load up with water on a stomach full or indigested food. If a horse always knows what is best for him, why fence him off from fields of growing corn, for instance? Why not let him eat his fill of this one feed? A horse under natural conditions will take care of himself; under the artificial conditions with which man surrounds him he must be cared for. The stomach of the horse is a small affair. If overcrowded with water after feeding the grain is flushed out and either is voided almost an entire waste or else sets up an irritation which produces colic. A persistent following of the reprehensive practice of watering immediately after feeding is apt to result in chronic mal-assimilation.

The ideal practice is to water a half hour before giving a horse his oats. If that is not practicable, then give him water immediately before feeding. At least one hour should elapse after eating before a horse is watered; two hours is far better. The observance of this simple rule, founded on the plainest physiological grounds and confirmed in the experience of the best-posted horsemen, will avoid trouble, either acute or chronic, that will almost certainly follow its persistent disregard.

Jule Frank, of Cincinnati, bought in Garrard county for the United Beef Company, of New York, of W. S. Beasley 182 cattle, and of Gibbs Brothers 150 head. The average weight was 1,600 pounds, and the price was $6.35 to $5.60. The cattle are for export, and to be delivered this month.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—A carload of the most important mail that has left Australia in years is being rushed across the continent with the utmost speed to catch the Southampton mail steamer at New York at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. The mail would be due to arrive by regular train service at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning, one hour late for the morning train over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern. To overcome the advantage of one hour, it will have to average better than one mile a minute from here to Cleveland.

CHANCES REGARDED AS EVEN

The Selection of the Columbia to Defend America's Cup Pleases the British Press.

New York, Sept. 5.—The World says: From private sources it is learned that the Columbia was chosen to defend the America's cup, and in consequence of this decision there will be no race Thursday.

London, Sept. 6.—The selection of the Columbia to defend the America's cup is a matter of great satisfaction to the British press. The chances of the race are now regarded as even; but there is no disposition to express overconfidence in the result. It is generally conceded that the Constitution might still have proved the faster boat had there been sufficient time for further experiments and tuning up.

THEY HAD A QUARREL.

Howard Hit Caleb Powers With a Heavy Inkstand.

The Combatants Are the Alleged Goebel Murder Conspirators in Jail at Frankfort—Howard's New Trial Opens Monday.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 5.—James Howard and ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers, the alleged Goebel murder conspirators, in jail here, fell out late Wednesday afternoon and Howard threw a heavy inkstand at Powers, striking him in the head. Powers was knocked over and bled profusely. Drs. Demaree and Crutcher were called and dressed the wound. They remained with Powers for over an hour. The only witness to the affair was ex-Adjt. Gen. J. K. Dixon, who was in conference with the two men. Powers was too ill Wednesday night to be seen, and Howard, on the advice of his attorneys, refused to talk. The affair has caused a big sensation. Howard's case will be called in the circuit court here next Monday, and his attorneys have been in conference here nearly all of Wednesday.

Powers was unconscious for nearly 35 minutes, and it was at first thought his skull had been fractured, but Dr. Demaree said Wednesday night that he could not find any evidence of a fracture. He remained with the patient till a late hour. Symptoms of concussion developed and a slight paralysis of the left arm and side appeared.

Dr. Demaree would not state how serious he thought the wound might prove, but indicated that he considered his condition serious. Col. J. K. Dixon, assistant adjutant general under the administration of former Gov. Taylor, who had just returned from eastern Kentucky, where he made up considerable money for the defense of both Powers and Howard, was in the room with the men, and a controversy between the two men arose as to a division of the money. Both men grew angry, and Howard seized an iron inkstand, which he hurled at Powers with terrific force. Powers was struck on the side of the head, just above the partal bone. A branch of the temple artery was severed and a gash four inches laid open. Howard made a statement to the jail guards that Powers had imposed upon him on several occasions recently, but Powers' friends regard the assault unprovoked. Both men have been in jail over a year, and they have apparently been the best of friends. Howard, talking to Col. Dixon afterward, expressed deep regret that the affair had occurred.

Chaffee has appointed a board of officers to take into consideration the recommendation for brevets and medals of honor that have been submitted covering the period of military operations in the Philippines, and to make such recommendations as shall seem merited, with special reference to the circumstances in each case. The details of the board is as follows:

MONROE DOCTRINE.

London, Sept. 5.—The Daily Chronicle says: "The United States will find their hands fully occupied if they construe the Monroe doctrine as enjoining them to the duty of acting as guide, philosopher and friend toward all the Central and South American republics. The mediation of the United States would probably be an unmixed good for Colombia and Venezuela, but it would be watched with considerable distrust by Europe."

SCHLEY'S WITNESSES.

The Request That a Number of Them Be Brought to Washington Has Been Granted.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Adm. Schley has made a request of the navy department that a number of witnesses which he expects to call before the court of inquiry be brought to Washington at this time in order to permit of conferences between them and counsel. In response to this request Acting Secretary Hackett Wednesday advised the admiral that if he will furnish a list of those he desired to come, they will be brought here as rapidly as circumstances permit.

SHORT OF FUNDS.

Colombia's Financial Straits Are Extreme and She is Pushed to the Last Point.

Colon, Sept. 9.—The United States battleship Iowa arrived at Panama Saturday.

Colon, Sept. 6, via Kingston, Sept. 7 (Refused at Colon by the censor and forwarded by steamer to Kingston).—Colombia's financial straits are extreme, and she is pushed to the last point to obtain funds. The Colombian paper is now worth less than three cents, and gold continues to depreciate. Seventy or eighty per cent. of the people of the country sympathize with the revolution and are opposed to the present government, largely, it is asserted, on account of the government's exaction of taxes and imposts and other vexatious efforts to raise money. This financial distress, coupled with the extent of the revolution, which momentarily becomes more threatening—this being especially the case in the Venezuelan entanglement—it is asserted, constitutes the strongest reason why Colombia can not go to war with Venezuela with any hope of success.

The future contains no promise of financial betterment, and the people become daily more burdened. Forced loans are common, and their daily recurrence is expected. In some cases "customs receipts have been hypothecated months in advance as security for these loans, and in other cases no security is given. The continuation of such governmental impositions increase the liberal ranks, and the prolongation of the present situation will, it is believed, increase the liberals' chances of success.

The government is holding the army, which it is making strenuous efforts to pay, and which, with the official employes, seems strong enough to prolong the present situation, but unable to deal the revolution a crushing, effective blow. Time will strengthen the rebels' position throughout the country, but in the isthmus district they notably lack leaders. The government to-day owes the 1,500 troops on the isthmus $15,000 in gold in back pay.

Reports are again in circulation that the liberals are concentrating at Chorrera, on the Pacific coast, 15 miles north of Panama. Similar reports have been current for weeks past.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 9.—The royal steamer Para, from Colon, reports rebel activity in the neighborhood of Panama and Colon. She also reports that fighting has taken place at Bocas del Toro. The government of the latter place, failing to repulse the liberals, the rebels have given notice of their intention to attack Colon within a fortnight. The government is continually moving troops to meet the rebel advances. Trade continues almost paralyzed.

THE BIG STEEL STRIKE.

Executive Board of the Amalgamated Association Urge Shaffer to End the Struggle.

Pittsburg, Sept. 9.—While the members of the executive board of the Amalgamated association did not say so, it was intimated by those in close touch with them, that they had plainly told President Shaffer that a settlement of the strike was imperative, and that he had better put himself into communication with President Schwab and have a plain understanding at once. In other words, the executive board of the Amalgamated association were pushing the leader for a settlement and to end the battle. It was said also in a semi-official way that possibly President Shaffer was communicating with President Schwab personally Sunday. It was believed that he had either gone to Mr. Schwab's summer home in Loretto, or else was meeting him in New York. Leaders are making strenuous efforts to hold the men in line with the hope that some means of a settlement will come in a few days at the farthest. If it fails, the men, it is believed, will break away and return to work as individuals. That would be worse than the terms that have thus far been offered by the corporation.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

Bill Will Be Introduced in the Congress Making An Attempt on the President's Life Treason.

Cumberland, Sept. 9.—In discussing the attempted assassination of President McKinley, Congressman George A. Pearre, of Maryland, said:

"I will offer a bill in the next congress of the United States amending the constitution so as to make an unsuccessful attempt on the life of a president of the nation treason and the penalty death. The man who strikes at the nation's head is a public enemy, and should be treated as such."

Another Record Broken.

New York, Sept. 9.—C. S. Titus, formerly of New Orleans, now the senior sculler of the Union Boat club, of New York city, Sunday rowed a mile on the Harlem river in 5 minutes 8 2-5 seconds, breaking the American tide-water record. The former record was held by John Rumohr, of New York, his time being 5 minutes and 27 seconds.

May Postpone the Court of Inquiry.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 9.—A rumor is current that in view of the attack upon the president and the presence here of the chief officials of the country, the Schley court of inquiry will be postponed. No official information on the subject is obtainable as yet.

THE PRESIDENT'S DAY.

A Reception Was Held Under the Dome of the Government Building—Nearly Two Thousand Invitations Had Been Sent Out.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 5.—President McKinley, in whose honor Thursday, September 5, has been set aside on the Pan-American exposition calendar, entered Buffalo Wednesday night through the portals of the Rainbow city. A few of the party left the presidential train at the Central station, but the president and Mrs. McKinley, the Misses Barber and Mrs. Sarah Duncan, the president's nieces, and the members of the reception committee were taken at once to the north gate of the exposition grounds. As the train flashed past the front a salute of 21 guns boomed forth from Fort Porter.

An immense crowd had assembled at the railroad terminus at the exposition grounds to await the arrival of the president.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 6.—President's day at the Pan-American exposition ran its course under very auspicious conditions and was attended with every circumstance in keeping with its high import. President McKinley, with Mrs. McKinley at his side and surrounded by eminent persons of high official rank in the service of this and foreign countries, faced a vast throng of people in the esplanade at noon Thursday, and delivered an address that brought forth the thunderous applause of the multitude. Never before has such a crowd gathered within the exposition grounds. The president's words were listened to attentively by the audience.

The president's progress through the exposition grounds to the station and thence to the various buildings and exhibits of Canada and the South American republics was one continuous ovation.

In the Porto Rico and Ecuador buildings the presidential party was received by the commissioners of the respective countries.

At the Argentine exhibit in the agricultural building the president was presented with a large bouquet of American Beauty roses, and he with Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and the commissioners of the twin American countries and Canada posed for a group photograph.

The presidential party arrived at the New York state building at 1 o'clock, where he rested for half an hour.

At 1:30 the chief executive's 200 guests, including the diplomatic corps, a member of the cabinet, judges, officers and other prominent men, sat down to an informal luncheon. The floral decorations of the building were superb. President McKinley sat in the center of the main table.

Leaving the New York state building at 3:20 the president and his escort of police and cavalry crossed the esplanade to the government building, where he was received by the federal troops.

The president held a reception under the dome of the main building. Nearly 2,000 invitations had been sent out, and the president was busy shaking hands for 20 minutes.

An incident that brought a ripple of applause occurred while President McKinley was making the rounds through the main government building. He had passed one of the navy exhibits when suddenly he noticed Capt. Hobson standing at "attention." Halting, he turned, and, walking briskly over to the hero of the Merrimac, grasped him cordially by the hand and chatted with him for a few minutes.

At the conclusion of the reception the president and the members of his party again entered their carriages and were taken to the home of Mr. Milburne, in Delaware avenue.

The president visited the grounds again Thursday evening to witness the fireworks, returning to the house at 9 o'clock.

Lieut. Peary Finds Sverdrup.

Gothenburg, Sept. 5.—News has been received here that Peary has found Sverdrup, the Swedish explorer who left for the north pole three years ago, on the western coast of Greenland. It is believed that Sverdrup, who sailed in the Fram, the ship that carried Nansen so far north, was unprepared to go around Greenland. The report has caused a great deal of anxiety here among those who hoped that Sverdrup would find Andree somewhere on the coast of Greenland.

"What?"

SHOT THE PRESIDENT

Mr. McKinley Seriously Wounded by an Anarchist Named Leon Czolgosz, But May Recover.

TWO BULLETS FIRED INTO HIS BODY.

One Shot Took Effect in Right Breast, the Other in the Abdomen, Causing a Painful Wound.

The Assassin Was Immediately Arrested by Detectives and Locked Up and Has Made a Written Confession.

The Next Few Hours Will Decide William McKinley's Fate—He is Holding His Own, But Crisis is Yet to Be Passed.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 9.—6 a. m.—The president passed a somewhat restless night but sleeping fairly well. His general condition is unchanged. Pulse, 120; temperature, 101; respiration, 28.

Buffalo, N. Y. Sept. 7.—President McKinley was shot and seriously wounded by a would-be assassin while holding a reception in the Temple of Music, at the Pan-American exposition, a few minutes after 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. Two shot took effect in the right breast, the other in the abdomen. The first is not of a serious nature and the bullet has been extracted. The latter pierced the abdominal wall and has not been located.

At 10:40 p. m. the following bulletin by the attending physicians was the only indication of the condition of the president's wounds:

"The president is rallying and is resting comfortably. At 10:30 p. m. temperature 100.4 degrees; pulse 124; respiration 24.

Signed by P. M. Rixey, M. D. Mann, R. Parke, H. Mynter, Herman G. Ridlon. Countersigned by George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the president.

The president, closely guarded by United States secret service detectives, was fully exposed to such an attack as occurred. He stood at the edge of the raised dais upon which stands the great pipe organ at the east end of the magnificent structure. Throngs of people crowded in at the various entrances, to gaze upon their president and to clasp his hand. The president was in a cheerful mood, and was smiling to the full his hearty evidences of good will which every where met his gaze.

It was shortly after 4 p. m. when one of the thugs who surround the person of the presidential party, a medium-sized man of ordinary appearance and plainly dressed in black, approached as if to greet the president. Both Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn noticed that the man's hand was swathed in a large white handkerchief. He worked his way amid the stream of people up to the edge of the dais until he was within two feet of the president. President McKinley smiled, bowed and nodded to him, with that spirit of geniality the American people so well know, when suddenly the sharp crack of a revolver rang loud and clear above the hum of voices.

There was an instant of utmost consternation. The president stood stock still, a look of hesitancy, almost of bewilderment on his face. Then he retreated a step, while a pallor began to steal over his features. The multitude, only partially aware that something serious had happened, paused in surprise, while necks were craned and all eyes turned as one to the rostrum.

The president retained the full exercise of his faculties until placed on the operating table and subjected to an anaesthetic. Upon the first examination it was ascertained that one bullet had taken effect in the right breast, just below the nipple, causing a comparatively harmless wound.

The other took effect in the abdomen about four inches below the left nipple, four inches to the left of the navel and about on a level with it.

Upon arrival at the exposition hospital the second bullet was probed for. The walls of the abdomen were ouched, but the ball was not located. The incision was hastily closed, and after a hasty consultation it was decided to at once move the patient to the house of President Milburn. This was done, the automobile ambulance being used for the purpose. Arriving at the Milburn residence, the task of probing for the bullet which had lodged in the abdomen was begun by Dr. Roswell Parke.

When the news of the crime was telephoned to the home of President Milburn, where Mrs. McKinley was resting, immediate steps were taken to spare her the shock of a premature announcement of the occurrence and the true condition of the president should be preserved. Guards were stationed and no one was permitted to approach the house.

When it was definitely decided that president from the exposition hospital to the Milburn residence the news was broken to Mrs. McKinley as carefully as possible. She bore the shock heroically well and displayed the utmost fortitude.

While the wounded president was being borne from the exposition to the Milburn residence the wildest excitement prevailed. Thousands of frantic lookers with bared heads far different spectacle was being witnessed along the route of his assailant's hurried transfer to the scene of his crime to police headquarters. The trip was made so quickly that the prisoner was safely within the wide portals of the central station and the doors closed before any one was aware of his presence. Even before the attempted assassination having in the meanwhile been spread broadcast by the newspapers of the city, it appeared from mouth to mouth. The bulletins began to appear on the bonfire rising Newspaper after paper, and when the announcement was made that the prisoner had been taken to police headquarters, only a few blocks distant from the newspaper section, the crowds surged down toward the terrace, eager for a glimpse of the prisoner.

Then came a commotion. With the leap of a tiger, a man suddenly sprang forward, as with one impulse, and sprang toward the would-be assassin. Two of them were United States secret service men, who were on the lookout, and whose duty it was to guard against just such a calamity as had twice befallen the president and the nation. The third was a bystander, a Negro, who had only an instant previously grasped the hand of the president. As one man, the trio hurled themselves upon the president's assailant. In a twinkling the latter was borne to the ground, his weapon was wrested from his grasp, and strong arms pinioned him down.

The crowds that a moment before had stood mute and motionless, in the deepest ignorance of the enormity of the thing, now, with a single impulse, surged forward, while a hoarse cry welled up from a thousand throats, and a thousand men charged forward to lay hands upon the perpetrator of the crime.

The crowd surged forward regardless of consequences. Some of those nearest the doors fled from the building in fear of a stampede, while hundreds of others from the outside struggled frantically forward in the effort to get into the crowded building and solve the mystery. Inside on the slightly raised dais was enacted within those few moments a tragedy, so dramatic in character, so thrilling in its intensity that few human beings will ever be able to give a succinct account of what really transpired. President McKinley, after the first shock of the assassin's shot, retreated a step, then, as the detectives leaped upon his assailant, he turned, walked steadily to a chair, and seated himself, at the same time removing his hat and bowing his head in his hands.

In an instant Secretary Cortelyou and President Milburn were at his side. His waistcoat was hurriedly opened, the president meanwhile admonishing those about him to remain calm and telling them not to be alarmed.

"But you are wounded," cried his secretary; "let me examine you?"

"No, I think not," answered the president, "I am not badly hurt, I assure you."

Nevertheless his outer garments were hastily unbuttoned and when a trickling stream of crimson was seen to wind its way down his breast, spreading its stain over the white surface of the linen, their worst fears were confirmed.

The president's assailant in the meantime had been hustled to the rear of the building by exposition guards where he was held while the building was cleared and later he was turned over to Superintendent Bull, of the Buffalo police department, who took the prisoner in his 12 police station and afterwards to police headquarters. As soon as the crowd in the Temple of Music had been dispersed sufficiently the president was removed in the automobile ambulance and taken to the exposition hospital where an examination was made. The best medical skill was summoned and within a brief period a number of Buffalo's best known practitioners were at the patient's side.

At police headquarters they were met by a strong cordon of police, which was drawn up across the pavement on Pearl street, and admittance was denied to all but officials authorized to take part in the examination of the prisoner. In a few minutes the crowd had grown from tens to hundreds and these in turn quickly swelled to thousands, until the streets were completely blocked with a mass of humanity. It was at this juncture that some one raised the cry of "Lynch him."

Like a flash the cry was taken up and the whole crowd was ignited by the single match, thus applied, re-echoed the cry, "Lynch him," "Hang him!" Closer the crowd surged and fiercer and more strong became as new arrivals swelled each moment the swaying multitude. The situation was becoming critical, when suddenly the big doors were flung open and a squad of reserves advanced with solid front, drove the crowd back from the curb, then across the street, and gradually succeeded in dispersing them from about the entrance to the station.

By this time there were probably 50,000 people assembled in the vicinity of Pearl, Seneca, Erie streets and the Terrace. The crowd was in no great mood to encourage a rope to run the entire street in front of police headquarters, and at a late hour Friday night the police were still patrolling the streets in the neighborhood in squads of three or four. Inside the station house were assembled Dist. Atty Penny, Superintendent of Police Bull, Capt. Reagan, of the First precinct, and other officials. The prisoner at first proved quite communicative, so much so in fact that little dependence could be placed on what he said. He first gave his name as Fred Neiman, said his home was in Detroit, and that he had been in Buffalo about a week. He said he had been boarding at a place in Broadway. Later this place was located as John Nowak's saloon, a Raines Law

PRESIDENT WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

[illegible] Sept. 8.—The X-Ray machine arrived shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday and was at once taken to the house. Charles Barney, the famous New York surgeon, came overnight to the residence. Bowditch, of Boston, and Mr. Mc[illegible] had met him at the station.

The president, who was free from pain for the first few hours after the shooting, has suffered considerably since, and when unconscious or semi-conscious moans in an agony. When completely conscious, however, he bravely gives no sign of suffering. [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. McKinley are intimate friends of the president and Mrs. McKinley, reached Buffalo Sunday morning from Washington. [illegible] Mrs. Rand [illegible] Mrs. McKinley's comfort [illegible]

[illegible] Dr. McBurney, Roswell Stanbridge, Dr. Park, of Buffalo, and Dr. Mynter, of Washington, [illegible] Dr. Rixey, of Washington, [illegible] there. It is explained that Dr. McBurney's importance in the case is due to the fact that his knowledge does not in any way reflect upon the attending physicians, it was simply decided to get the best talent in the country in medicine and surgery should be present in order that in the event of a change for the worse in the president's wound there could be no criticism and his family and friends would have nothing with which to reproach themselves.

Dr. McBurney is considered one of the leading surgeons of the country, and his reputation is world-wide. His counsel is desired, although the president's advisers have the utmost confidence in Dr. Park, who also enjoys the highest reputation as a surgeon. Indeed, he is considered by far the ablest surgeon in this part of the state.

Dr. McBurney, after a thorough examination of the president, reported that he had not found a single unfavorable symptom, there not being the slightest indication of peritonitis. This opinion of the famous physician carries much weight.

Either directly or through the prime minister every government in Europe has expressed its sympathy. Not only did King Edward and Emperor William send telegrams to their own country, but King of Portugal, King Oscar, of Sweden, the sultan of Turkey, President Loubet, of France, and the king of Italy have sent personal messages. These monarchs have not hesitated to dethrone a president, and

THE INSTITUTE.

Supt. Voshell had selected Prof. J. W. Withers as instructor. On Monday afternoon the Institute was called to order by County Supt. Voshell. Below the names of the teachers, who attended during the week, are given together with the respective schools in which they will teach:

N. D. Bristow, Union; Kate Craig, Hamilton; Edda McElroy, Grange Hall; Carrie Myers, Assistant, Verona; Mary E. Walton, Petersburg; Lillian Corbin, Clore's; Alice Coffman, ——; Bettie Dolph, Ryle; Lizzie Roberts, Beaver Lick, Ella Norman, Mt. Zion; Marietta Riley, Pleasant Ridge; Kate Baker, B. B. Lick; Carrie Clore, Bullittsville; Cora Quick, Locust Grove; Everett G. Jones, Garrison; C. M. Summers, Limaburg; Laura Wolfe, ——; Anna Wolfe, ——; Bessie Van Ness, East Bend; Fannie Cleek, Richwood; Flora Yonell, Rucker's; Lizzie Parker, Terrill; M. J. Brough, Craven; Leola McWethy, McVille; Mary Rouse, ——; Lizzie Rogers, Maple Hill; J. R. Parker, ——; Anna Schwartz, Union; A. H. Snyder, Willoughby; D. Irvin Tanner, Hebron; Birdie N. Rouse, Beech Grove; Lucy D. Clayton, Taylorsport; Katrine Clayton, Pleasant Valley; Wm. Gaines, Bullittsville; Harriet Bedinger, Walton; B. W. Nelson, Petersburg; Effie Lermond, Burlington; W. E. Waller, ——; Margarett Marble, ——; A. M. Yeeley, Pt. Pleasant; W. K. Souther, Francisville; Herbert Grant, Woolper; Carl Grant, Bellevue; Marie L. Korn, Florence; J. H. Newman, Constance; Omer Henry, Sand Hill; Mary Gaines, Berkshire.

The first subject treated by Prof Withers was Psychology. He said it is a science and not a philosophy. The proper way to study it, is to study the inward workings of our own minds and then by comparison study the minds of others. The teacher should see that the pupil has the same ideas that he has. When talking to children say what you mean. Prof. Withers observed that the secret of school management is the secret of class management. Physiological Psychology:—Study the child—it may be the child is nearsighted, it so this fact must be suitably recognized.

Reading.—Miss Nannie Bristow does not prefer her pupils being taught to read at home, as often is the case many very bad habits are formed, which the teacher is powerless to prevent. This idea was forcibly illustrated by Supt. Voshell, who gave his experience. Miss Laura Wolfe favored a combination of the word sentence methods in teaching reading to primary pupils. Prof. Withers did not think it necessary to have a chart to teach primary reading. He showed how this can be as well done by the use of printed and written words on the board. It was emphasized that reading is not second to any other common school study.

Arithmetic.—Prof. Withers said, have logical thinking and logical expression, be systematic, teach the underlying principles, which are only about 20, and let short cuts take care of themselves. Let your language be neat, careful, concise and correct. Punctuate correctly; form correct habits in person. Methods were illustrated on the board.

Child Study.—Be familiar with your pupils, cultivate their confidence; aim to cultivate all of the powers of the child. Let the stimulus that excites the child's intellectual efforts come from within, let there be no fear, but let perfect freedom abound.

Grammar.—Technical grammar has of late been relegated to the rear, but it deserves a foremost place. It is a fact to be lamented that teachers know too little about this subject. They should be able to pass intelligent decisions on the disputed points. The old way of parsing does not call forth the reasoning powers. Technical grammar is a science and practical grammar is an art. The only divisions properly belonging to grammar are etymology and analysis—modifiers, words used as different parts of speech, voice and agglutinanated verbs were treated.

Geography.—Build a picture of things through imagination by the aid of things that are familiar. Teach the simplest continent in its outline, as a beginning, then take up the next simplest and so on. Then study drainage, soil, (Kentucky has the richest soil,) study soil products, exports, find out the reason for the directions of the railroads; draw maps locating the different kinds of soil; also study animals, then locate the coal areas and iron ore deposits. After which study geography more minutely.

History.—Elder Rogers said, a good way to begin instruction in history is to make use of story telling as did Socrates and Plato. Tell the story of Daniel Boone as introductory to the study of the history of Kentucky. Teach the history of the civil war by studying some southern author and then make use of some northern author. Teach cause and effect, study the effect first; study history by comparison—illustration. The 110 million Anglo Saxons own half the wealth of the world; 20 of the 24 great achievements of the 19th century belong to this race. Prof. Withers said, study Biography, study ideas and these will mold the character of the pupils. The conventional method is a good one.

Civil Government.—Instructor Withers emphasized the importance of teaching patriotism as a means of safety to our country against the threatening dangers of foreign influence. Teach the sacredness of the ballot, and the sanctity of the law. Rev. L. Johnson gave his views as to the use of the ballot. The work of the Institute proper was completed by seven o'clock. The afternoon was devoted to graduating exercises the program of which was as follows:

Salutatory—Ephriam Norman; Recitation—"An Order for a Picture,"—Grace Bullock; Recitation—Lady Clare—Sadie Crisler; Recitation—Legend of Bregenz—Jennie C Smith; Instrumental Music—Virginia Blyth; Essay—Trucks in the Body—Stella Carpenter; Recitation — Samialphon — Lucy Kirkpatrick; Oration—The Rights of Citizenship—Elmer Myers; Recitation—The Legend of St. Fuda—Mabel Vest; Recitation — Faith and Duty — Sadie Beemer; Oration—Surmounting Difficulties—Clara McCoy; Valedictory—Nannie Chambers; Address to Graduates—Hon. Joel C. Clore; Presentation of Diplomas—Supt. L. H. Voshell.

We, the Committee on Resolutions, report as follows:

1. That we think Walton the most suitable and accessable place in which to hold the Institute next year.

2 That we, the teachers of Boone county, hereby, express our appreciation of the cordial reception given to us by the people of Walton.

3. That we exteud thanks to the ladies who have kindly helped in the music, and to the John Church Co. for the use of their most excellent Harvard piano.

4. That we greatly appreciate the delicious treat of fruit, bestowed on the Institute by Rev. L. Johnson, and as proof of our gratitude, we suggest that he remember us in the the same way next year.

The attempted assassination of the Chief Executive of our government, cast a gloom of sadness over this community, if expressions are an indication. According to my humble judgment, history fails to record a more treacherous, dastardly and atrocious crime.

It was our happy privilege to spend a part of last week with the good people of Walton, while attending the teachers institute. We had the pleasure of meeting many old acquaintances, viz: Prof. Newton, L. Johnson, Jas. Rogers and others, all of whom took part in giving us quite an intellectual feast. Bro. Rogers, who is a walking encyclopedia of history, gave us a fine talk on that very important subject. Had it not been that our equilibrium of mind was somewhat disturbed in our endeavors to reach home, it would have been a very pleasant week. We were reminded of a remark a brother made to us while in Walton, that he regarded Belleview the most difficult place in Kentucky to reach. However it seems about as far from B. to W. as from W. to B.

WALTON.—The Teachers' Institute was held here in the Opera House last week, and was an immense success tho the two first days would have been rather tedious had it not been for the ludefatigable exertions of Superintendent Voshell and Prof. Withers, the conductor of the Institute, who is the ablest man, so our teachers say, that has ever conducted a meetiug in Boone county. This is the second one that he has held in it. Tho all the gardens in the country were parched and so dried up that vegetables were scarce, the folks were able to get them from the city and thus keep up the reputation of the town for setting good tables. Anyhow the teachers were well satisfied and they are the ones who settled the bill and whose money pays the expenses of the Institute.

There is another topic that is being discussed with much animation by all classes of our citizens—that of The Free Graded School. One meeting has been held at which some names were presented as persons suitable to be voted for as trustees for the same. This move did not awaken any convulsive throb of approval in the breasts of the people, on the contrary many persons condemned the attempt to foist a board on the voters they did not want, and it died unmourned by all save those promoting the scheme. Another meeting was called but not one person put in an appearance. It seems now that our citizens are going to vote for whom they please as trustees at the election next Monday, and this is in strict accord with the proper feeling that actuates men who are in favor of the right methods of doing things.

After much trouble it has been definitely ascertained that the following gentlemen will serve if elected (the main difficulty has been to get those who would serve.): W. W. Metcalfe, R. M. Jones, Leslie Vallandingham, Dr. A. Jones, H. L. Eskew, T. F Curley, Wm. Ranster, Enoch West. Others no doubt, will be mentioned as the election day approaches. Some of the above mentioned are in favor of taking the school right along and are confident that a way will be found to continue it if the vote is in favor of the tax.

Josh Westhafer, of Loogootee, Ind., is a poor man, but he says he would not be without Chamberlain's Pain Balm if it cost $5 a bottle, for it saved him from being a cripple. No external application is equal to this liniment for stiff and swollen joints, contracted muscles, stiff neck, sprains and rheumatic and muscular pains. It has also cured numerous cases of partial paralysis. It is for sale by all druggists.

Stood Off Death.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henriette, Tex., one fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Arlie Adams moved his family to Dayton, Ky., last Thursday. We were sorry to see them leave, as Arlie and his wife were good and useful citizens. We hope that success will attend them in their new home, and commend them to their neighbors.

C. H. Acra, of Bellevue, made this office his annual melon treat, last Monday. Charlie knows that printers, like other people, appreciate and never forget a kindness bestowed by a friend. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." That quotation is correct we believe.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck had the pavement in front of their residence taken up and relaid, which prompted the members of the M. E. Church to have the pavement in front of edifice treated likewise, and as a result the pavament along the west side of the block is now in good condition.

Hon. J. W. Kennedy, M. E. Hance, W. W. Grimsley, N. S Bristow and O. C. The bridge if erected will be partly in Gallatin and partly in Boone county.

The Secretary of the Boone County Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company requests all those who desire to be candidates for the offices to be filled by said company at its annual election on the first Monday in October, 1901, to hand their names in at the RECORDER'S office on or before Sept. 25, 1901, so their names can be printed on the ballots.

Last Friday Misses Alma Carpenter and Cathaline Baldon were going to James Clore's, and when descending the hill to the creek south of town, the coupling of their buggy broke, letting the rear part of the buggy bed drop to the ground. The horse a very gentle animal, became frightened and began running. The young ladies managed to get out of the buggy and escaped with only a few slight bruises. The buggy was pretty badly torn to pieces.

Mr. Edward Gaines, who lives in the Petersburg neighborhood, is not only one of the cleverest men in the county, but has no superior when it comes to dispensing genuine hospitality, and last Thursday the writer and Attorney Sidney Gaines were entertained in a royal manner by him and his son, Stephen. At noon a most excellent dinner, prepared by Mrs. Stephens Gaines, was enjoyed by Mesdames William and Edward Stott, of Petersburg, and the two Burlington representatives. In due time thereafter the peach orchard, where there was abundance of delicious fruit, was visited, and when we left there we felt as though we would never want another peach. Not satisfied with filling us Mr. Gaines loaded our buggy with peaches until it looked like a fruit stand and then asked if we could not take some more. Mr. Gaines has a picture gallery into which he delights to conduct his friends. The most prominent pictures are those of himself, Messrs. R. Y. Randall, a Mr. Snyder, of Lawrenceburg, some time since deceased, and J. Frank Grant, of Baltimore. This quartette was particular friends, and when Mr. G. is threateued with an attack of the blues, he repairs to his picture gallery and takes a look at Messrs. Randall and Grant, when pleasant incidents of the past come rapidly to mind, and his drooping spirits are revived. Mr. Gaines has been very busy operating a patent fruit dryer since peaches began to ripen, and his stock of dried fruit will be exceedingly large this winter, if "Old Virginul" has failed in a corn crop.

The numerous friends of M. T. Garnett, who has been county clerk or deputy for nearly a quarter of a century will be sorry to hear that he will sever his connection with that office tomorrow. Mr Garnett has made a faithful official, and the action he will take tomorrow will be because of a determination to take a rest after so long a period of close application to business. His service with County Clerk Adams has been most pleasant, and his superior is sorry to see him go. We have not learned who the new deputy will be.

Walter Crigler's horse got loose with the buggy here in Burlington, last Saturday night, and made, successfully, all the turns in the road between Burlington and home, a distance of two miles; but when near the gate leading into the pasture where the horse is kept, it attempted to pass between the fence and a telephone pole, and stripped itself loose from the buggy. Very little damage resulted except to the harness.

The Roberts annual reunion was held at the old homestead down on Middle creek last Saturday. About 40 persons were present and partook of an excellent dinner. John O. Roberts, of this neighborhood, was the oldest one of the same present.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at nights. HURTS CHARACTER.

Folly of Allowing Forebodings of Evil to Influence Action.

Dr. Talmage in His Sermon Declares the Life of Every Man, Woman and Child to Be Closely Under Divine Care.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows the folly of allowing forebodings to influence us and how expectation of evil weakens and destroys. Text, Matthew 6:34: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

The life of every man, woman and child is as closely under Divine care as though such person were the only man, woman or child. There are no accidents. As there is a law of storms in the natural world, so there is a law of trouble, a law of disaster, a law of misfortune; but the majority of the troubles of life are imaginary, or the cost of those anticipated never come. At any rate, there is no cause of complaint against God. See how much He has done to make you happy, His sunshine filling the earth with glory, making rainbow for the storm and halo for the mountain, greenness for the moss, saffron for the cloud and crystal for the billow and procession of bannered flame through the opening gates of the morning, chaffinches to sing, rivers to glitter, seas to chant and springs to blossom, and overpowering all other sounds with its song and overarching all other splendor with its triumph, covering up all other beauty with its garlands and outflashing all thrones with its dominion—deliverance for a lost world through the Great Redeemer.

I discourse of the sin of borrowing trouble.

First, such a habit of mind and heart is wrong, because it puts one into a despondency that ill fits him for duty. I planted two rosebushes in my garden; the one thrived beautifully, the other perished. I found the dead one on the shady side of the house. Our dispositions, like our plants, need sunshine. Expectancy of repulse is the cause of many secular and religious failures. Fear of slander and abuse has often invited all the long-beaked vultures of scorn and backbiting. Many of the misfortunes of life, like hyenas, flee if you courageously meet them.

How poorly prepared for religious duty is a man who sits down under the gloom of expected misfortune! If he prays, he says: "I do not think I shall be answered." If he gives, he says: "I expect they will steal the money." Helen Chalmers told me that her father, Thomas Chalmers, in the darkest hour of the history of the Free church of Scotland and when the woes of the land seemed to weigh upon his heart, said to his children: "Come, let us go out and play ball or fly kite," and the only difficulty in the play was that the children could not keep up with their father. The McCheynes and the Summerfields of the church who did the most good toiled in the sunlight. Away with the horrors! They distill poison; they dig graves, and if they could climb so high they would drown the rejoicings of Heaven with sobs and wailing.

You will have nothing but misfortune in the future if you sedulously watch for it. How shall a man catch the right kind of fish if he arranges his line and hook and bait to catch lizards and water serpents? Hunt for bats and hawks, and bats and hawks you will find. Hunt for robin redbreasts, and you will find robin redbreasts. One night an eagle and an owl got into fierce battle. The eagle, unused to the night, was no match for the owl, which is most at home in the darkness, and the king of the air fell helpless. But the morning rose, and with it rose the eagle, and the owls and the nighthawks and the bats came a second time to the combat. Now, the eagle in the sunlight, with a stroke of his talons and a great cry, cleared the air, and his enemies, with torn feathers and splashed with blood, tumbled into the thickets. Ye are the children of light. In the night of despondency you will have no chance against your enemies that flock up from beneath; but, trusting in God and standing in the sunshine of the promises, you shall "renew your youth like the eagle."

Again, the habit of borrowing trouble is wrong because it has a tendency to make us overlook present blessing. To slake man's thirst the rock is cleft and cool waters leap into his brimming cup. To feed his hunger the fields bow down with bending wheat, and the cattle come from the clover pastures to give him milk, and the orchards yellow and ripen, casting their juicy fruits into his lap. Alas, that amid such exuberance of blessing man should growl as though he were a soldier on half rations or a sailor on short allowance; that a man should stand neck deep in harvests looking forward to famine; that one should feel the strong pulses of health marching with regular tread through all the avenus of life and yet tremble at the expected assault of sickness; that a man should sit in his pleasant home, fearful that ruthless want will some day rattle the broken window sash with tempest and sweep the coals from the hearth and pour supper into the bread tray; that a man fed by Him who owns all the harvests should expect to starve; that one whom God loves and surrounds with benediction and attends with angelic escort and hovers over with more than motherly fondness should be looking for a heritage of tears! Has God been hard with thee that thou shouldst be foreboding? Has He stinted thy board? Has He covered thee with rags? Has He spread traps for thy feet, and gailed thy cup, and rasped thy soul, and wrecked thee with storm, and thundered upon thee with a life full of calamity?

If your father or brother come into your bank where gold and silver are lying about, you do not watch them, for you know they are honest, but if an entire stranger come by the safe you keep your eye on him, for you do not know his designs. So some men treat God, not as a father, but a stranger, and act suspiciously toward Him. It is high time you began to thank God for present blessing. Thank Him for your children, happy, buoyant and bounding. Praise Him for your home, with its fountain of song and laughter. Adore Him for morning light and evening shadow. Praise Him for fresh, cool water bubbling from the rock, leaping in the cascade, soaring in the mist, falling in the shower, dashing against the rock and clapping its hands in the tempest. Love Him for the grass that cushions the earth and the clouds that curtain the sky and the foliage that waves in the forest. Thank Him for a Bible to read and a Saviour to deliver.

Many Christians think it a bad sign to be jubilant, and their work of self-examination is a hewing down of their brighter experiences. Like a boy with a new jackknife, hacking everything he comes across, so their self-examination is a religious cutting to pieces of the greenest things they can lay their hands on. They imagine they are doing God's service when they are going about borrowing trouble, and borrowing it at 30 per cent., which is always a sure precursor of bankruptcy.

Again, the habit of borrowing trouble is wrong because the present is sufficiently taxed with trial. God sees that we all need a certain amount of trouble, and so he apportions it for all the days and years of our life. Also for the policy of gathering it all up for one day or year! Cruel thing to put upon the back of one camel all the cargo intended for the entire caravan. I never look at my memorandum book to see what engagements and duties are far ahead. Let every week bear its own burdens. The shadows of to-day are thick enough. Why implore the presence of other shadows? The cup is already distasteful. Why hallow to disasters far distant to come and wring out more gall in the bitterness? Are we such champions that, having won the belt in former encounters, we can go forth to challenge all the future?

Here are business men just able to manage affairs as they now are. They can pay their rent and meet their notes and manage affairs as they now are, but how if a panic should come and my investments should fail? Go tomorrow and write on your daybook or on your ledger, on your money safe: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Do not worry about notes that are far from due. Do not pile up on your counting desk the financial anxieties of the next 20 years. The God who has taken care of your worldly occupation, guarding your store from the torch of the incendiary and the key of the burglar, will be as faithful in 1910 as in 1901. God's hand is mightier than the machinations of stock gamblers or the plots of political demagogues or the right arm of revolution, and the darkness will fly and the storm fall dead at his feet.

So there are persons in feeble health, and they are worried about the future. They make out very well now, but they are bothering themselves about future pleurisies and rheumatisms and neuralgias and fevers. Their eyesight is feeble, and they are worried unless they entirely lose it. Their hearing is indistinct, and they are alarmed lest they become entirely deaf. They feel chilly to-day and are expecting an attack of typhoid. They have been troubled for weeks with some perplexing malady and dread becoming lifelong invalids. Take care of your health now and trust God for the future. Be not guilty of the blasphemy of asking Him to take care of you while you sleep with your windows tight down or eat chicken salad at 11 o'clock at night or sit down on a cake of ice to cool off. Be prudent, and then be confident. Some of the sickest people have been the most useful. It was so with Payson, who died deaths daily; and Robert Hall, who used to stop in the midst of his sermon and lie down on the pulpit sofa to rest and then go on again. Theodore Frelinghuysen had a great horror of dying till the time came and then went peacefully. Take care of the present, and let the future look out for itself. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Again, the habit of borrowing misfortune is wrong because it unfits us for it when it actually does come. We cannot always have smooth sailing. Life's path will sometimes tumble among declivities and mount a steep and be thorn pierced. Judas will kiss our cheek and then sell us for 30 pieces of silver. Human scorn will try to crucify us between two thieves. We will hear the iron gate of the sepulcher creak and grind as it shuts in our kindred. But we cannot get ready for these things by forbodings. They who fight imaginary foes will come out of breath into conflict with the armed disasters of the future. Their ammunition will have been wasted long before they come under the guns of real misfortune. Boys in attempting to jump a wall sometimes go so far back in order to get impetus that when they come up they are exhausted, and these long races in order to get spring enough to vault trouble bring us up at last to the dreadful reality with our strength gone.

Finally, the habit of borrowing trouble is wrong because it is unbelief. God has promised to take care of us. The Bible blooms with assurances. Your hunger will be fed; your sickness will be alleviated; your sorrows will be healed. God will sandal your feet and smooth your path, and along by frowning crag and opening grave sound the voices of victory and good cheer. The summer clouds that seem thunder charged really carry in their bosom harvests of wheat and shocks of corn and vineyards purpling for the winepress. The wrathful wave will kiss the feet of the great Storm Walker. Our great Joshua will command, and above your soul the sun of prosperity will stand still. Bleak and wave struck Patmos shall have apocalyptic vision, and you shall hear the cry of elders and the sweep of wings and trumpets of salvation and the voice of halleluiah unto God forever.

Your way may wind along dangerous bridle paths and amid wolf's howl and the scream of the vulture, but the way still winds upward till angels guard it, and trees of life overarch it, and thrones line it, and crystalline fountains leap on it, and the pathway ends at gates that are pearl and streets that are gold and temples that are always open and hills that quake with perpetual song and a city mingling forever Sabbath and jubilee and triumph and coronation.

'Tis not the song for me.
To weeping it will turn ere long,
For this is Heaven's decree.

But there is a song the ransomed sing
To Jesus, their exalted King,
With joyful heart and tongue.
Oh, that's the song for me!

Courage, my brother! The father father does not give to his son at school enough money to last him several years, but, as the bills for tuition and board and clothing and books come in, pays them. So God will not give you grace all at once for the future, but will meet all your exigencies as they come. Through earnest prayer trust Him. People ascribe the success of a certain line of steamers to business skill and know not the fact that when that line of steamers started the wife of the proprietor passed the whole of each day when a steamer started in prayer to God for its safety and the success of the line. Put everything in God's hands and leave it there. Large interest money to pay will soon eat up a farm, a store, an estate, and the interest on borrowed troubles will swamp anybody. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

HOW MEN MAKE LOVE.

Some Do It in a Grandiloquent Manner and Fail to Make an Impression.

All sorts of men in all kinds of conditions have made love to me. While I won't say that I loved them all in return, they—that is those—who sent me fruits and flowers and bonbons, not diamonds and gems, succeeded best with me. Stage women don't want big things; it is the trifles that touch their hearts, says Marie Dressler, in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Handsome men have never succeeded with me. They are generally too overbearing and make you feel as if they did you a favor by making love to you. The little gentlemanly things a man does win a woman's heart.

I like a man who takes his hat off in my presence and the cigar out of his mouth the moment I come near him, who rises from the table and remains standing while I am being seated.

I like the man who divines when I feel a draft and gets up to shut the window even if it is in a garden.

The man who wants to win my heart mustn't do these things only for a few weeks, while I am getting interested in him, but keep right on doing them.

The straightest way to a woman's heart is by small and gentlemanly courtesies. It never fails. The man who showers diamonds and costly presents upon a woman is usually very ostentatious about it. The fellow who comes along with a bunch of flowers or a bonbon box makes you feel as if you did him an honor to accept his present. He'll win where the other will get the cold shoulder.

Love-making is an art which women understand much better than men.—Marie Dressler, in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fighting Yellow Fever.

If the ship enters the mouth of the Mississippi with a clean bill of health and no sickness on board she is allowed to proceed to quarantine. There the quarantine officer and his assistant physician go aboard. The reports of the master and physician are received first. Then the crew is mustered, the roll is called, and, as each man's name is reached, he steps out of line and extends his arm to the physician, who feels his pulse, and if the slightest abnormality is detected indicative of fever the clinical thermometer is used at once to get the degree of fever.—Burt Mayo, in Leslie's Monthly.

Burial Stopped by Bees.

While the body of a child was being lowered into a grave at Salem, Ind., a swarm of bees attacked the mourners and drove them away. It was only after dark that the sexton and his attendants were able to return to complete the burial, the bees remaining at the grave until the gloom of night caused them to depart.

Slow Train.

"We call our little southern branch railway the C. O. P.—"

"What's that for?"

"Get out and push."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

How It May Be Practiced in the Purchase of Supplies for the Kitchen.

In Woman's Home Companion Mrs. Mary Graham gives the following useful hints:

"For a good-sized family flour is the largest item in the line of dry groceries, and should be bought by the barrel. The mistress of a household who studies economy will rarely go to the baker's. Rolls for breakfast occasionally, and once in awhile a loaf of bread for toast or as a change from that made at home, should be the exceptions. The cost of a barrel of flour is seldom below five dollars, and often much in advance. Never keep a barrel of flour in a place that is at all hot or damp. In buying Indian meal, Graham flour and cereals only small quantities are needed—say from seven to ten pounds. They should be kept in covered earthen jars and in a dry place.

"Sugar is not enough cheaper when purchased in large quantities to make any material difference, but it is a convenience to have from ten to twenty pounds always on hand. Good coffee can be bought by the sack as low as 17 cents a pound. This is in the bean and green; but getting it in this way saves about one-half, and it is very little trouble to brown two pounds at a time. Put the coffee in an iron spider with just a little butter, and stir it often until of the right color. It should always be ground the last thing before using.

"Tea can be bought for much less by the box, and two kinds are a saving where there are servants, as they are most lavish users of tea, and as a rule like the cheaper grades quite as well as the better. In fact, they are likely to prefer very inexpensive tea, for the reason that boiling is the favorite kitchen method of preparation, and extreme strength and blackness a quality much desired.

"Starch is much cheaper bought in bulk. Soap should be bought by the box, and well dried before being used; green soap is wasteful. For floors and coarse towels soft soap should be made from the refuse fat by the addition of potash, then boiling. In buying soap care must be taken that it is of the right quality. Any good grocer will help in the selection; a light yellow soap is usually the best choice, while delicacy of flavor is the quality sought for by the person of superior taste."

THE JOB SUITS HIM.

He Made Sure Everything Was to His Liking Before He Took It.

"I don't know where the boys of this country are drifting to," sighed Jones, according to the Detroit Free Press, "I lost my office boy the other day, and was forced to advertise for a new one. I soon had a motley collection in my office, and I told my bookkeeper to let them in one by one so I could interview them. The first boy that entered walked in wearing his hat and with his hands in his pockets. Looking me over coolly, he asked:

"'Whadjer pay?'

"'Three dollars a week,' said I, amazed at his impudence.

"'Hours?'

"'Nine to five,' said I, politely.

"'Hour off for noon?'

"'Yes.'

"'Two weeks' vacation?'

"'Yes.'

"'With full pay?'

"'Yes,' said I, entering into the humor of the thing.

"'Chance to rise?'

"'Yes.'

"'Wife ever come here fussing around?'

"'No.'

"'Who's boss when you're away?'

"'The bookkeeper.'

"'Cranky?'

"'No.'

"'Typewriter red-headed?'

"'Blonde.'

"'Sassy?'

"'Angel.'

"'Got a Willie boy?'

"'Two of them.'

"'Can they be worked?'

"'To a finish.'

"'All right,' said he, throwing his hat on the floor, 'I'll take the job!'

"He is there still, and I haven't the nerve to discharge him. At present he allows me to occupy my private office, but I expect to be ordered out at any moment."

Preserving Plums.

To preserve green gages allow to every pound of fruit one pound of fine granulated sugar and one gill of cold water; boil the sugar and water together for about ten minutes, skimming carefully; divide the green gages and take out the stones, putting the fruit into the syrup, and let it simmer until tender; take it off the fire, pour into some large earthen dish, and let stand until the next day. In the meantime take the kernels from the stones, blanch them, and when the preserve is returned to the kettle the next day add these kernels; set over the fire, and boil for ten minutes, skimming carefully. At the end of that time pack the fruit in glass jars, pour the juice over it, cool and seal.—Sallie Joy White, in Woman's Home Companion.

German Almond Rings.

One-half pound each of blanched almonds, pulverized sugar and puff paste, whites of six eggs. Knead the paste very thin and cut with a biscuit cutter. From the center of each cut a smaller one, leaving the outside ring three-fourths of an inch wide. Beat the eggs until stiff, stir in sugar, with dish in boiling water, until meringue is quite thick; add almonds, thinly sliced and cool. Frost the rings with mixture, and bake in an oven of proper temperature for cake.—Boston Budget.

EXTRACTING HONEY.

Extracting honey from the combs is one of the pleasant features connected with bee keeping, but is not done in the open air, as the picture would indicate. I produce my extracted honey at the out-apiaries. Large hives are used, holding 20 of such frames as in my hand. Sometimes they are all in one body and sometimes in two bodies, with a queen excluder between. I use three styles of hives, but only one style of frame, so there is no difficulty in changing frames. I visit my out apiaries occasionally to see if the bees have room enough to continue storing honey.

The honey is all left on the hives until the latter part of September. By this time the bees have thoroughly ripened it and it has become so rich and thick that it takes a good right arm to swing it out of the combs. When the combs are taken from the hives they are carried to the honey house and there left until evening. After the bees have stopped flying I drive to the out-yard and haul home the honey. Before beginning to extract I take the uncapping knife and hone until the edges are keen. This will prevent tearing the combs when shaving off the cappings. The knife is occasionally dipped into a pail of hot water which expedites the work also.

Two frames of nearly equal weight are selected each time, so as to balance nicely in the extractor. The crank is turned rapidly for a minute or so and the honey whipped out of the combs. It is then drawn off at the honey gate into an agate pail with a sieve over it to catch the bits of capping which frequently get into the extractor. The honey is then poured into five-gallon cans for the wholesale trade and into some Mason jars and tumblers for retailing. Before extracting begins the combs are held up to the light and graded. The white honey is extracted first, next the amber and lastly the dark. The uncapping can is in two parts; the top section telescopes into the bottom section. The top section has a sieve bottom, which catches the cappings as they fall into the can. The honey drains into the lower section and nothing is lost or wasted. The cappings after draining for a few days are rendered into the most beautiful light yellow wax. The empty combs are set out into the home apiary and cleaned up by the bees, then stored away until the next spring, when they are hauled to the out-yards and used there.—F. G. Herman, in Orange Judd Farmer.

CAUSED BY PARASITE.

Habit of Feather Eating in Hens Said to Be Due to a Pernicious Little Insect.

The New York experiment station published a bulletin on "feather eating" among fowls. The report makes a number of observations on this habit, suggesting that it is the result of a lack of nitrogenous matter in the feed, and citing experiments where fresh cut bone, lean meat, etc., were fed. "The vice," the report says, "is very uncommon among fowls that have exercise and a variety of feed, and it is most economical to prevent its appearance by careful feeding; but as the spread is rapid even under a ration which does not ordinarily seem to encourage its development, the vice should be stamped out by the death or removal of the first offender."

The editor of Farm and Dairy, New South Wales, calls attention to the fact of the failure to mention the true cause of "feather eating." "It is now a well-known fact," says the editor, "that feather eating is due to a minute parasite (sarcoptis laeria), which feeds at the roots of the feathers, thus irritating the birds and causing them to pluck out their own feathers. Where feathers are pulled out by other birds, it is due to the presence of lice, for which they are searching."

The prevention and remedy, says the editor, are simple, as the mite disease is contagious through contact. Isolation of the affected bird is the first step, especially if it be a cock. The mite yields readily to treatment of one part of creosote to 20 parts of lard or vaselhie, well rubbed into the affected parts.

Chicken cholera, also filth and lice, is abroad in the land again. Do not harbor such a villain.

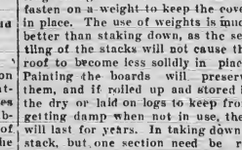
REARING AND BUYING.

Greatest Profits Result When a Farmer Can Produce Both Grain and Feeding Stock.



Whether it is better to rear feeding stock that is required on the farm or depend on the western ranges for this class of stock is a subject of more or less discussion among those following the business of feeding cattle. The majority of our feeders favor the plan of rearing their own feeding stock, but under some conditions this means more expense than if they had been secured from the ranges. Hon. John Cownie, in speaking of the fattening of cattle before the Iowa state farmers' institute, advanced the following ideas, taken from the Iowa year-book of agriculture, regarding this important question, says Iowa Homestead: I am aware that it is difficult to secure well-bred feeders, of the right age and size for feeding, at a price that insures profit on the finished animal, but if they cannot be bought they can be raised, and then of the profit there is no question. By using high-grade cows of any of the leading beef breeds and pure-bred bulls of individual merit, excellent calves can be secured. And if these calves are fed liberally and judiciously from their birth until they are 30 or 36 months old, they will be ready for market, and command the highest price. To insure profit these cattle should never know what it is to be either hungry, thirsty or cold, from birth to sale, and having tried all the methods here outlined, in the production of beef, I most unhesitatingly give the preference to the feeders raised by myself. It has often been said that a farmer who has the corn can well afford to buy the cattle to consume it, and also that the farmer who has the cattle, but not the grain, should secure the latter and market the cattle in a finished condition. With good judgment and business ability, profit may be made at times by following either of these methods, but the farmer who has both cattle and grain of his own raising, cannot fail to make profit in combining the two in a finished product. After an experience extending over an average lifetime, in fattening cattle, I am frank to confess that my greatest profit resulted when I produced both grain and cattle.

ALFALFA STACK COVER.

One That Is Said to Be Equal to Storing the Hay in a Barn or Ordinary Mow.

Alfalfa hay will not turn the rain, no matter how well topped out a stack may be. Where alfalfa hay is raised extensively it is necessary to cover the stacks in some way, or to top them out with some kind of hay or grass that will shed the rain. We recently saw a stack cover used on an alfalfa farm which the owner said was equal in keeping the hay to storing in a barn or mow.

The covers are made of ten-inch boards in sections six, eight, ten or twelve feet long, as suits as the purpose and convenience. The boards are laid, beginning at the top of the stack, so that the upper overlaps the one just below, and all are held in place by being stapled to pieces of No. 12 smooth wire, one wire within a few inches of the ends of the boards and as many between as may be thought necessary. With the shorter sections the end wires are sufficient. These wires go on the outside of the boards and are left long enough at the four corners to fasten on a weight to keep the cover in place. The use of weights is much better than staking down, as the setting of the stacks will not cause the roof to become less solidly in place. Painting the boards will preserve them, and if rolled up and stored in the dry or laid on logs to keep from getting damp when not in use, they will last for years. In taking down a stack, but one section need be removed at a time, thus exposing but a small portion of the stack. In getting the stack ready for putting on the cover, do not top out with a high center, but put on only a well-rounded top.—J. L. Irwin, in Ohio Farmer.

TIMELY STOCK NOTES.

Whenever an animal is fed and no gain procured, it is kept at a double loss.

Early maturity is hardly possible if the animals are stunted while forming bone and muscle.

"A grade sire is bound to breed your herd down, not up. He may show some ancestral merits, but he has no power to transmit them. The improvement has ended with himself.

Straw which has been cut is better for bedding stock stabled, for the reason that it is a better absorbent of liquid manures, and that it rots more rapidly when put in the field, and is therefore more available.

If you keep dates of breeding you will give better attention to the animal. If you have only grades, but are grading up, the pedigree becomes important with every cross. This is one of the little easy things too often neglected. Such records become invaluable after a time.

For lice on cattle, take a good sized tin box, punch holes through the cover and partially fill with powdered sulphur. Sprinkle the whole length of the animal's back, from head to tail, and in about two weeks if any lice remain go over again lightly. Don't let cattle out if it storms.—Barnum's Midland Farmer.

A GLOWING REPORT.

An Indiana Man Compares Western Canada with the United States—What Mr. Frank Fisher, a Prominent Dunkard, Has to Say After a Trip Through Canada.

The Department of the Interior at Ottawa has just received from Mr. E. T. Holmes, the Agent of the Government stationed at Indianapolis, Indiana, the following letter, which requires no comment. It is only necessary to state that Mr. F. Fisher, the writer of the letter, is one of the most prominent of the Dunkards and a man upon whose word the utmost reliance can be placed. His home is at Mexico, Indiana, and he will be pleased to substantiate verbally or in any other way all that he says in his letter.

To my many friends:

I am pleased to make a report to you of the pleasant visit my wife and I had in Western Canada.

We visited the territories of Alberta, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and found them far surpassing our imagination, but little did I expect to find such rich, loamy soil, so much of it, and so uniform in its level prairie lay. I do think the soil of Canada as a rule equals if not excels the finest prairie farm lands of Indiana. These lands are immense in their richness, and when once the sod is rotted and pulverized, it is as pliable and as easily cultivated as Indiana sandy soil.

Western Canada, from my point of view, offers as fine opportunities for mixed farming as any place in my knowledge. The long, sunshiny days, together with the rich soil, produce very fine wheat, oats, barley, flax and other cereal products. There is scarcely any attempt to raise corn, except early varieties for table use. The season is too short to depend upon maturing field corn. From the standpoint of getting this land ready for the plow, I must say that I never saw such a vast extent, practically all ready, so all that one has to do is to hitch up the plow and go to work. This is not the case with all the Canadian land, however; some of it has quite a bit of timber, much of it may be called brush land, and some of it has lovely forest groves, dotted here and there, thereby covering a hundred and sixty acres.

I have no doubt but that this country excels as a grazing or ranching country, because they have such rich grass, having an abundance of rain to keep it fresh. They also have plenty of water streams, and as a rule water may be reached at a depth of from 20 to 40 feet. From this you see there can be plenty of hay mown for winter feeding, and I have had reliable farmers to tell me that their stock will feed on hay alone, and be ready for market in the spring. Upon inquiring about the expense of raising a steer, a farmer replied that he did not consider it would cost any more than $4.00 or $6.00 to develop a three-year-old steer.

I truly think Canada offers a fine opening for a young man or a man who is renting land in Indiana. One hundred and sixtyacres of good black land will cost you only $10.00 at the time you enter it, and by plowing and cultivating five acres each year for three years, gives you one hundred and sixty acres of good land for $10.00. This land can be bought from the Railroad Companies, private corporations or the Government for $3.00 to $4.00 per acre.

From a financial standpoint, I believe that for a series of years (five), a young man can make $10.00 in Canada, whereas he would only make $1.00 here, and I feel sure that I spent more money to get my eighty acre farm in White County, Indiana, cultivated, than it would cost me to cultivate eight hundred acres in Canada. This may seem a strong view to take of the matter, but when you take into consideration the clearing, ditching, fencing and the expensive breaking in of the stumps, and then compare the expense to that of land needing only the breaking, you will conclude that it is not such a wild or exaggerated statement as you might at first think.

I enjoyed the balmy, breezy atmosphere, which was bracing and refreshing, and the cool nights which made it so pleasant for sleep.

On making inquiries regarding the winters in this country I learned that the people never suffer from the cold, as the weather is dry and invigorating, and in a great many places, farmers and herders allow their stock to run outside the year round.

One great advantage to the settlers in Western Canada is the free creameries established by the Government, and run exclusively in the interest of the farmer.

I visited Thomas Daley, a farmer near Edmonton, Alberta, who showed me oats he had raised, a sheaf of which took the first prize at the Paris Exposition last year. This sheaf yielded 110 bushels to the acre, and $89.

Yours truly,
F. FISHER.

MARK HANNA'S FINE HAND.

Work of the Republican Boss When He Went West to Boom McKinley.

Just before the last national election Mark Hanna visited Nebraska for the avowed purpose of beating Mr. Bryan in his own state. The extraordinary prosperity that suddenly followed his visit and the number of political strikers of all parties that exhibited bank rolls was noted at the time. There is no doubt that the strumpet of corruption stalked in naked horror through the land, and the democrats claimed that the middle-of-the-road populists were some of the strumpets. The evidence that at least they were in the market and were willing to accept offices at the hands of Hanna has now come to light, for the Commoner says: "In the last campaign the republican papers denounced democrats and populists for cooperating against the common enemy. Both parties were accused of sacrificing principle to 'get office.' The subject is mentioned at this time because D. Clem Deaver, a Nebraska politician who had charge of the middle-of-the-road populist campaign in the west, has recently received at the hands of President McKinley a substantial reward for opposing fusion. A republican by the name of Dickson severely criticised Mr. Deavers appointment on the ground that Mr. Deaver was not a republican. In reply, Mr. Deaver gave this explanation of his appointment:

"'I have no desire personally to answer the strictures of Mr. Dickson, but as a matter of record I wish to say that my application for appointment to this office was indorsed by Gov. Dietrich and every other republican state officer, also by R. B. Schneider, republican national committeeman, and the leaders of every faction of the republican party in this state.

"'Further, upon the promotion of Gov. Dietrich to the senate, he took up my case and enlisted the support of Senator Millard, who had never met me prior to the time of his election, March 28.

"'In view of the fact,' continued Mr. Deaver, 'that the party leaders were a unit in supporting my application, Senator Millard's assent was cheerfully given. I have about perfected my bond and expect to assume the duties of office August 1.'

"During the last presidential campaign Mr. Deaver went up and down the country urging the populists to have nothing to do with the democrats, and the republican newspapers spoke of Mr. Deaver as a populist who 'stood by his principles.' But now all the republican leaders ask for and secure a valuable appointment for him. This proves, if indeed proof was necessary, that there was secret fusion between the republicans and the middle-of-the-road populists. In 1896 the republicans and and gold democrats denounced fusion between democrats and populists, and yet when the election was over prominent democrats like Bynum and Irish applied for and received appointments from the administration, showing that there was a secret understanding between the republicans and those who were in charge of the Palmer and Buckner movement.

"The cry of 'down with fusion' does not come with good grace from populists and gold democrats who have been affiliating with republicans. With even poorer grace does the cry come from republicans who have made use of the two extremes, gold democrats on the one hand and middle-of-the-road populists on the other.

"Honest cooperation between the reform forces is natural and necessary, and such cooperation will be advocated by those who are earnest in their efforts to overthrow republican policies. Secret and dishonest cooperation will still be indulged in by those who denounce fair and open methods."

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——Pacification is a sure thing in the Philippines according to Gen. MacArthur, but he insists that it will be necessary to keep a large army there to keep the peace.

——The New York custom house is under the political manipulation of Boss Platt, by the grace of the president; the silk fraud would indicate that it is a seething mass of corruption.

——The high protective tariff breeds frauds and smuggling and the enormous robbery of the government by the silk importations in New York are doubtless but one of a hundred if the whole business was investigated.

——The tinplate trust is one of our youngest infant industries protected from all competition from abroad and is a monopoly at home. This baby trust managed, however, to squeeze from the American people last year about $40,000,000 of profits and this was accomplished by selling sheet iron covered with a composition of lead, which the trust called tin. Have you noticed since the trust was formed that there is very little real tin on the market?

——The Iron Trade Review attempts to prove that we cannot manufacture iron and steel as cheaply as other countries by showing that our exports of these two products are smaller than those of Great Britain. The fact that the steel trust is selling and making contracts to sell steel in Europe would make it clear to any but a trust controlled organ that there must be a profit in the transactions or the trust would not seek them, and even if sold at cost and added freight it would show that the cost here is less than in the country the trust exports to.

PHILIPPINE SLAVES.

According to Official Report There Are Thousands of Natives in Bondage.

Not long ago the Manila government sent us the news that one of the dattes of the sultan of Sulu has abolished slavery. This was an evident effort of the censor to lead us to believe the whole institution as it exists in our new possessions was being extinguished. The official report of Col. Pettit and Maj. O. P. Sweet, who are the commanders of the United States troops in the islands where slavery and polygamy exists, tell a different tale. The first-named officer says: "Under our orders I believe all Philippine slaves and captives have been turned over to us, and further slavery, either by conquest or traffic between islands, has been prohibited. The abolishment of slavery can be attempted in one of two ways—by war or by purchase. The latter would be futile. I cannot imagine a more desolate people than the Moro slaves would be if set free. Their freedom would be of short duration. War could be had for the asking. It is for the United States government to decide if it wants it. The Moros have plenty of arms and ammunition and a country passable only by its waterways."

Maj. Sweet says: "The question of slavery, although not recognized by the United States, is still a fact, and is a constant source of trouble on account of slaves escaping from one master to another, or their being stolen. Whenever a question relating to slavery comes before me, I simply make the owners prove they are slaves beyond doubt, in which case I have nothing to do with them; but in case I can pick a flaw in their title, I give the alleged slaves freedom papers. Thousands of Moros are held as slaves who are by right free people."

Thousands of freemen slaves under the stars and stripes, and the Taft commission and the home government doing nothing to free them. "If they are slaves without doubt I have nothing to do with them," says this officer. Sixty thousand troops hunting down Filipinos, and not a man or a gun used to even attempt to suppress this trade in these unfortunate and miserable people.

Congress has given President McKinley full power in the Philippines, increased the regular army to 100,000 men, appropriated all the money asked for, and yet he has made no move to suppress this blot on our civilization! In his tour through the south and west his every hour theme was full of rapture and exultation that the flag waved over freedom and prosperity. How free and prosperous are these slaves? But they can daily gaze upon the flag. The republican party has made President McKinley as great an autocrat in the Philippines as the czar of Russia is in his dominions, and Russia with all her barbarous customs has none of this.

Yet the American people, with their eyes open but blinded by partisanship or the pelf promised and distributed by the republican machine, voted for imperialism, of which this slavery in the Philippines is one of the attributes.

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

There Is a Big Difference in Trusts and Ours Suffer by the Comparison.

It is a most striking circumstance that the trusts should have reached their highest development and most gigantic proportion in the virgin field of American, the very country in which we would naturally expect them to appear last. Under normal conditions there are better opportunities for competition than there are anywhere else in the world, and the great masses of American capital are of recent accumulation.

According to the report of Prof. Jenks, made to the industrial commission, the trusts in foreign countries are quite different from our combines. There they are combinations of separate concerns for the maintenance of prices and the restriction of production, and they usually fall through some of them breaking the agreement and selling for less than the prices agreed upon. Such violations of the agreements are bad for the combinations, but good for the consumers. When, however, the different concerns have been welded into one and are all under one management, it is clear that the prices can be held in a grip of iron, subject only to certain economic laws which no trust can entirely control. There can be no rivalries or working at cross purposes when the whole combination is under one management.

Prof. Jenks shows that the object of thus unifying the management is to control the output and limit production, when deemed necessary, by closing the least profitable factories. What this means to both consumer and the factory hands requires no explanation beyond the simple statement of higher prices for the consumer and fewer men employed in the mills. The fundamental idea with the trusts is that the dividends of stockholders must be kept at the top notch, no matter what becomes of anybody else.

——Wakeman, the head of the appraisers of customs in New York, is also the secretary of the American Protective Tariff league, and the rotten state of affairs in his department as exposed by the silk frauds would seem to require that his services be dispensed with.

——Neely and Rathbone have not yet been released but the department of justice and the war department have the arrangements all made so that they can be when the times are propitious. The blame will be laid on the Cuban law and [illegible]

BISHOP GRANT, OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Bishop A. Grant, of Indianapolis, Ind., writes the following letter:

Indianapolis, Indiana.
3349 N. Pennsylvania Street.
Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—"I have been using Peruna for catarrh and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who wants a good medicine."—A. Grant.

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop Grant.

Writes His Recommendation for the Famous Catarrh Remedy, Pe-ru-na.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true to-day of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low station that none hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The following letters from pastors who use Peruna speak for themselves:

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"My little boy had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Rev. A. S. Vaughn, Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I had been prostrated by congestive chills and was almost dead; as soon as able to be about, I commenced the use of Peruna. I took five bottles; my strength returned rapidly and I am now enjoying my usual health."—Rev. A. S. Vaughn.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

The Wind.

Wind is only air in motion, and is divided into three classes—constant, periodical and varied. All wind is caused directly or indirectly, by changes of temperature. Should the temperature of two adjacent regions become unequal from any cause, the warmer air being lighter, will ascend and flow over the other, while the colder or heavier will flow in below to supply its place, then the difference in the temperature of the two regions gives rise to two currents of arr—one blowing from the colder to the warmer along the surface of the earth and the other from the warmer to the colder in the upper strata of the atmosphere.

When the surface heat is a whole zone, as in the case of the tropics, a surface wind will set in from both sides toward the tropical zone, and uniting will ascend, and then separating, flow as upper currents in opposite directions. Hence, a surface current will flow from the higher latitudes to the lower, or equator, and an upper towards the higher, or poles, then, if the earth were at rest a north wind would prevail in the northern half, and a south wind in the southern. But, these directions are modified by the rotation of the earth on its axis from west to east. In virtue of this rotation, objects on the earth's surface at the equator are carried eastward at a rate of 17m per minute, but, as we advance toward either pole, this velocity gradually will recede, at 60° is diminished to 8½ miles and finally at the poles is nothing. A wind therefore, blowing along the earth's surface to the equator, is continually arriving at places which have a greater velocity than itself, hence the wind will lag behind, that is, come up against places toward which it blows, or become an east wind, and as the wind north of the equator is under the influence of two forces—one drawing it south and the other west—it will be the law of the composition of forces, flow in an intermediate direction, that is from north east to southwest, and a wind from the south advancing towards the equator being acted upon by the same forces, will in its turn be caused to deflect its course and pass from southeast to northwest. From the great service these winds render to navigation they have been called the trade winds. It is only in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans that these winds have their full scope.

But the atmosphere was not still when we gave the diernal motion to the earth. There was as we have already seen a breeze blowing from the N. & S. poles toward the equator. We have now generated two currents—a north and an east wind. But these cannot blow in the same placeat the same time and the result will be a wind compounded of the two. In the northern hemisphere a northeast, and in the southern a southeast wind, These are the two trades enclosed by the three calm belts, north and south of and at the equator. Why it is that the trade winds do not extend all the distance from the poles to the equator, but take their riseat or about the 30° of latitude, north and south, has not been settled to the entire satisfaction of scientists.

The theory would seem to demand that they spring up at the poles, and blow continuously toward the equator,in which case we would have but two systems of wind covering the whole surface of the earth. But this nonconformity of the winds of the extra tropical regions to our theory, does not destroy it, but, brings into the meterological problem other, and beautiful features. Having put the winds in motion, it is our business to go with them and see what circuits they travel. The quantity of atmosphere brought into the equatorial regions by the northeast and southeast trade winds cannot remain piled up there as it were, but the equilibrium must be restored, by some manner of means. How to restore that equilibrium is the question. It cannot go back on the surface in the tropics, for within them there is a constant surface current toward the equator. "Whence cometh the wind, and whither goeth it?" It comes from heat, and as the sun is the father of heat, he is the father of the winds. This will solve it since hereby is produced two counter upper currents, which set out from the equator toward the poles, traveling one north to the 30° of latitude, and the other south to the same distance, where they again descend and become surface winds until they again reach the poles, around which they are supposed to gyrate, ascend, and again become upper currents until they reach the 30° of latitude, when they again descend and become surface currents, or trade winds, and pass on to the equator. There is another, and still more beautiful problem connected with the e winds, which is their crossing at the equator, and that which came down from the north having business at the south pole, pole,and hastening onward to transact it, and, vice versa. One would naturally suppose that the two winds meeting at the equator would commingle, and that when they ascended to from the upper currents, the northern particle would as likely turn back to the north as to cross the equator and proceed southward. How they are to without losing their identity and becoming intermingled is another problem to be solved. What law of nature is it that renders them separate and distinct? and thereby prevents their fusing and becoming one? Is it because the two currents as they gyrated around their respective poles have received a repulsive polarity? Whatever may be the reason, they do cross, which fact cannot be denied. Otherwise, how could the great atmospheric machine perform its office of distributing rain over the earth in due proportions? When we come to remember the fact that there is from a fourth to a third more land than water in the northern hemisphere, and from a fourth to a third more water than land in the southern, the consequence is that the northern requires a greater amount of rain as that proportion ponderates in favor of the northern, and as these mysterious trade winds are the water carriers, they, as they sweep down from the north to the 30° of latitude are dry winds, and then sweeping over the tropical seas take up, in the shape of vapor, the water which they are to in due time cast down to fertilize the fields. The quantity they take up is in proportion to the evaporating surface they pass over. Upon an examination of these winds upon their arrival at the equator, we shall find that the northern ones contain far less an amount of moisture, and are therefore more heated, and rise over, or above those from the southern, more heavily laden which pass northward from the equator to the 30° of latitude by which time they have been wrung dry, and in their turn become heated and consequently heated where they in turn rise to give place to the upper strata and give place to others more cool, and thus we see the where are born the trades, which man has so nuchly accommodated himself to. Another strange but indi-putable fact forces itself upon us in proof of all this. We in the northern hemisphere when we turn our faces toward the sun at his rising see him moving as it were from left to right and the winds partaking of the opposite motion, let us change to the southern and take the same position and we find the sun advancing from the right to left, while the winds are again given an opposite action, or against the sun on each position. Nor does this strange phenomena cease with winds, but extends to many running or climbing plants, they making their movements around their supports in opposition to the afore-aid motions or against the sun.

Periodical winds are those which blow from certain points at stated intervals, for instance, sea breeze, land breeze. On the coast, within the tropics, a breeze sets in from the sea in the morning, increases to the noon, and decreases to the night, when a contrary breeze springs up from the land, blows strongly seaward during the night, dies away toward the morning and gives place to the sea breeze of the day. It is within the tropics where the sea breezes are the most marked and constant, because there the sun's heat is greatest, and atmospheric pressure is practically uniform, except in those rare instances where it is disturbed by hurricanes. Quite analogous to the land and sea breezes are the monsoons, which are only the north trades drawn out of their course in summer by the heated regions of southern Asia, the southwest monsoon being only a vast sea breeze blowing on southern Asia and continuing several months of the year.

Variable winds are those which depends on purely local or temporary causes, such as nature of the ground; the physical configuration of the surface; the vicinity of the sea or lakes: and the passags of storms. Within the tropics all except the last of these is borne down, or all but borne down by the great atmospheric currents which prevail there in all their force. But in higher latitudes this is not the case; these, therefore are the regions where variable winds prevail.

The most noted of these winds are the simoon, sirocco, solan and harmattan. The bora is a cold tempestuous wind, blowing from the Alps down on the Adriatic, and the gregale, is a peculiarly cold, parching and unhealthy wind, which at certain seasons descends on Malta from Druce. The puna winds prevail for four months in the year in the high, barren table lands of Pern, and are part of the southeast trade winds, which, having crossed the Andes, are drained of their moisture, and thus become the most dry and parching winds occurring anywhere on the globe It is a prevalent notion that east winds in this country are damp. True some are—but only those which prevail in the front of storms, they being simply an indraught of the air toward the low barometer which is advancing from the west at the time. All of these damp easterly winds soon shift round to some westerly point. But, the genuine east wind which is the dread of the nervous and invalids, does not shift to the west, and is especially intolerably dry and cold. Lord Bacon remarked that the wind most frequently veers with the sun's motion. or passes round the compass in the direction of N., N. E., E., S. E., S. W., W., & N. W., to W. Dove of Berlin first propounded the "Law of the Rotation of the winds," and proved that the whole system of atmospheric currents—constant, periodical, and variable winds—obey the influence of the earth's rotation." ***

Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was of a party that inetnded making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Lacyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and risers good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.
TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. Pleasure Wagon for $67.
In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.
You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would look the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse,and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain,or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No care, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.
I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 60, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.
There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12 On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man whogets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1901. NO. 48.

CAN it be that Admiral Sampson has a sly fever.

ADMIRAL HOWISON has certainly looped the loops in great shape.

THIS country has made considerable history in the last two weeks.

IT is said that President McKinley carried from $100,000 to $200,000 life insurance.

AN anarchist is an enemy to free intitutions, and there is place in this country for him.

SOME think President McKinley would have fared better with few doctors at his bed side.

THERE are nearly 50,000 more women than men in Ohio. You see, most Ohio men are away somewhere holding office.

The implement trust is preparing to plow deeper into the pockets of the people and harrow up the feelings of its customers.—Commoner.

THE offerings on the Cincinnati tobacco market, last week, were not as heavy as they were the previous week, but prices remained about the same.

SHAFFER has refused all offers to settle the strike on fairly reasonable terms; now it is only a question until it is settled without him on no terms at all.

THE ship subsidy gang is fighting among themselves, each side charging the other with all sorts of crimes. No doubt both know what they are talking about.

BOTH parties will soon send out orders in the next campaign to swat the trusts—but the Republicans will confine their efforts to swatting them with verbiage.

MR. ROOSEVELT was very unexpectedly placed in the presidential chair, and the circumstances that installed him were painful to him and the country alike.

THE State Democratic committees refused to hear anything in regard to Col. Davezac's contest of Bob Jameson's nomination for county clerk, over in Kenton. Now will you be good, Alec?

IT is worth mentioning that the only member of Congress who said anything unpleasant about McKinley's injury was a Republican and not a Democrat:—Mr. Wellington, of Maryland, so please you.

MONEY is piling up in the Treasury at a great rate and would do so even if Congress had repealed all the war taxes. What it would do if we should return to economical expenditures is incalculable.

WHAT justice is there in an arrangement that admits Nevada to full state rights and keeps out New Mexico, with six times the population, intelligence and wealth? For this the Republicans are responsible.

THIS country will have to take some steps to check the increase of anarchists within her borders, and to dispose of those already here. Now let some statesman who is equal to the requirements of the occasion come to the front.

SEVERAL persons in different parts of the county, who have expressed themselves as not sorry because of President McKinley's fate, have met rough treatment, and it was right they should. Any person who sanctions assassination is no better than the assassin.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has announced that he will not depart from but will carry out McKinley's policy. While there is considerable speculation as to cabinet changes, it is not believed that that body will get a general shaking up 'til after Congress meets next December.

SOME of the papers in this judicial district are carrying Judge Lassing's announcement as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for circuit judge. They have not heard of the action of the district committee it is presumed. Judge Lassing is the regular Democratic nominee for judge, brethren.

FRIDAY is the last day in which the county election commissioners can appoint officers of election for the ensuing year.

ROOSEVELT is the youngest president this country ever had—42. Cleveland was the youngest man ever elected to the presidency.

CZOLGOSZ was indicted Monday for the assassination of President McKinley. He is to be arraigned today. It is a pity that he cannot be tried, convicted, sentenced and electrocuted before his victim is buried.

IT has cost this country dearly—the life of its most prominent citizen—to learn that a very dangerous organization has been suffered to acquire a strong footing here. An organization the extermination of which will require vigorous measures perhaps.

SOMEBODY suggests that all anarchists be deported to a guarded island and allowed to work out their scheme of non-government there. They would probably find their experience a striking illustration of the evils they are so anxious to bring about.

RODNEY HAGGARD, of Winchester, aged 57, soldier legislator and jurist, ended his life by shooting himself through the head in the yard of his home Saturday morning. His wife missed him, and on making a search found him lying in the yard in his blood. By his side lay the weapon of death, a 38 Hammerless revolver. He had placed the muzzle of the pistol within his mouth and fired the fatal shot, which came out the top of his head near the back.

A CERTAIN county in Virginia, along the eastern shore, has made a heavy crop of potatoes the past summer and there was sold out of it this year 550,000 barrels of Irish potatoes at a profit of $1,000,000, which means that every man, woman and child in the county would be entitled to receive, if the money were distributed prorata, something more than $75 from one crop alone. Potatoes of both kinds are the chief product in that section.

IT seems that killing frosts are not much to be feared this month, the records showing that they seldom come till near the end of the month, if at all. According to the weather bureau reports it appears that there have been but three killing frosts in September during the past 12 years, and these were late in the month, namely, on the 30th in 1895 and 1899, and on the 21st in 1894. In 1898 and 1900 we had no frosts at all during the month.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY died at Buffalo, N. Y., last Saturday morning at 2:15 o'clock. His remains will be consigned to their last resting place, at Canton Ohio, to-morrow. At the bier of the martyred President all political differences disappear, and the nation weeps because of his untimely taking off. The country had been made to believe that the President would recover from his wounds, and when the report came that a sudden change for the worse had taken place and that his recovery was impossible, the shock was nearly equal to that caused by the first announcement of the deed of the assassin.

THE London Board of Agriculture has assured the English farmers there is no danger of a spread of the potato bug, known as the Colorado beetle, several specimens of which were discovered recently in a potato field near Tilbury docks on the Thames. Since the presence of the bug was reported the board has caused the ground to be quarantined and all plant and animal life upon it was destroyed. The environs were searched for other specimens and a notice was issued to the public calling attention to the law which provides that any person may be fined $10 who does not immediately notify the police of the discovery of the bug. If this country could rid itself of the English sparrows as easily as England appears to stamp out our potato bug it would be highly pleasing to the entire country.

NICE fall weather, this.

Crop and Stock.

In Clark county, Thos. C. Robinson sold to W. M. Robb, two fine Shorthorn heifers for $600.

W. C. Terhune, of Mercer county, bought 100 mule colts at Lancaster and Springfield at an average of $27 per head.

The Texas Millers' Association reports a shrinkage in the wheat crop of that State from 12,000,000, 000 to 5,000,000 bushels.

At Harrodsburg, Monday, there was a fair supply of cattle, but sales were dull. About 100 mules on the market, mostly sucklings; prices ranging from $25 to $60.

Black Tobia, a family horse of Wm. Coffins, in Milton, was killed last week, aged thirty-four years eight months and four days. Probably this was the oldest horse in Kentucky.—Eminence Constitutionalist.

Reports from various parts of Graves county indicate that the farmers will make the best crop in years. Something like a three-fourths corn crop will be made, which is double what was made last year; good pastures of rye, etc.

A company in Texas owning a million acres of forest land allows no tree of less than a foot in diameter to be cut and requires the smaller trees to be carefully protected. If this sensible plan had been adopted a century ago in the north our pine forests would still be producing large quantities of marketable lumber with no prospect of extinction.

After January 1 the shipper who has but one load of cattle or hogs for the market will be unable to get a return pass. The railroads have decided to abolish this custom, which has been in vogue for years, and make it necessary to have at least two cars to obtain a return pass. If the shipper has five cars he may get two return passes, and for eleven cars three return passes. Not more than three passes will be issued, no matter how many cars shipped.

The farmer who sells enough butter and eggs from the farm to pay running expenses is to be congratulated. There are a great many who fail to do this and these are the ones who believe it cannot be done. I have in mind those who not only pay all the living expenses of the family out of the farm produce money, but a large share of the clothing is bought with it. Let those who are doubtful about this business find out how it is done and then "Go and do likewise."

Corn fodder is no less valuable than it has been in any year in the past. Many farmers may be lulled into the belief that it is not needed, who may have occasion to regret their neglect to cut up a lot of it. There are so many ways it can be saved. The binder is the best solution of the business if there is enough of it to justify the expenditure of a corn binder. A good man and a corn knife will put up a great deal of it in a day if he can be obtained. Corn fodder may be the means of preventing a sacrifice of the live stock. If it does not do this it means that some hay can be sold at a very profitable figure. There ought not to be so much stover go to waste this year. There will not in some localities.

A Shocking Calamity.

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. There is considerable speculation as to the purchasers of the Kentucky Midland Railroad, and as to what they will do with the road. W. D. Sullivan, of Mayfield, tells this queer tale on one of his neighbors: A man went to another man's house one night, harnessed up his mules and took them to another neighbor's where he found a wagon, hitched the mules to it, went back to Mr. Sullivan's, stole twelve sacks of wheat of two bushels each, loaded them in the wagon and drove away to a distance of four miles, when his conscience began smiting him, with the result that he turned around, drove back and restored the wheat to its place in the granary, the wagon and mules to their respective domiciles, and went home a happier if not a richer man; and he was feeling so good over the victory of his baser determination that he went and told Mr. Sullivan all about it.

"I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Lacyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

The Tobacco Crop in Kentucky.

The following special tobacco bulletin for Kentucky has been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Very few persons realize the magnitude of the tobacco industry in Kentucky. Carefully collected statistics show the average annual value of the tobacco crop in Kentucky to be about $13,000,000, and about one third of the value of the entire crop of the whole country.

In view of these facts it was thought best to make a special effort to give the public the most definite information possible on the present condition of the crop. Special reports were called for from the regular crop correspondents, numbering more than 300. In addition to this, about 200 letters asking for special reports were sent out to the assessors, Sheriffs and selected postmasters in the largest tobacco producing counties. In this manner full information was secured from portions of the State.

The cool weather during May and June was very unfavorable, and, at the time of setting, the young plants were small and in some localities scarce; this resulted in a smaller acreage than usual. Cut worms and grasshoppers attacked it, doing considerable damage in some sections. During the last week of June and in the first week of July in the burley districts in the north central portion of the State a good start was made, but the dark tobacco in the western portion began to suffer for rain. The drouth became more intense and was not generally broken until the second week in August. In a few of the northern counties, from Trimble to Mason, comprising quite a portion of what is known as the "old burley" district, very little rain fell after the 20th.

Since the drouth was broken the improvement has been remarkable. In the dark tobacco districts of the western portion of the State the reports show very satisfactory conditions. In most counties the acreage is somewhat below the average, but a few counties report an acreage fully as large as usual. In yield and quality the dark tobacco appears to be fully up to the average, as a whole. The reports from some counties state that in pounds per acre and in quality the outlook is the best for years. Cutting of early fields will begin this week, but many fields are late and will be in possible danger of frost before they can be housed.

In the burley tobacco districts, covering the Blue Grass Region and north central counties, the conditions are not quite so favorable. Probably not much more than three fourths of the usual acreage was set. The drouth continued longer than in the western portion of the State, but great improvement has taken place during the past two weeks, and with favorable conditions during the remainder of the season there will be a yield of nearly three fourths of an average crop of good quality in the Blue Grass counties, or what is generally known as the "new burley district." In the "old burley district," lying to the north of the Blue Grass counties, the outlook is not so good, and probably not more than half a crop will be housed, and of only fair quality. The burley tobacco is nearly all late and early frosts would lower the above estimates very decidedly.

A Night of Terror.

Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. F. SHAMROCK IN A SQUALL.

The Wind Blew at the Rate of 54 Miles an Hour--The Vessel Had a Narrow Escape.

New York, Sept. 13.—In all of her ten trial spins in these waters and in the 16 or more on the Clyde the Shamrock II. and her crew never had a more exciting experience than they had during ten minutes Thursday afternoon when the yacht was caught in a fierce squall that blew at the rate of 54 miles an hour. The squall came so suddenly that the men had no time to shorten sail except to take in the forestaysail, so that the yacht had to take it with the whole mainsail, jib and a working gaff topsail set.

The water, as far as the eye could reach, was feather white, and the wind fairly screamed through her shrouds as she gathered sternway. Capt. Sycamore never lost his head, but shifted his helm, and then, as the yacht began to gather headway, she felt the full force of the wind.

Down she went until her rail was out of sight, but the water was boiling up around her hatches. The tall mast was leaning at an angle of between 35 and 45 degrees, and there was not a man who watched her but expected to see the mast go by the board. Gradually she righted and forged ahead, but a new danger threatened.

The yacht was now out of the channel and heading directly for the east point of that dangerous shoal known as Flynn's Knoll, where there is only 15 feet of water and she draws about 21.

By good management the vessel cleared the shoal and was soon out in deep water again. For five minutes longer the strain on the mast and gear was something terrific, but the Shamrock II. later was made fast at her mooring.

HOWISON REJECTED.

The Admiral Disqualified as a Member of the Board of Inquiry.

The Navy Department Will Designate Another Officer to Succeed Him—Intense Interest in the Proceedings.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Within three hours from the time of convening the Schley court of inquiry Thursday it was announced that Rr. Adm. Howison was disqualified from serving as a member of the court and was excused from further duty. This brought proceedings to an abrupt termination and caused a temporary adjournment of the court in order to permit the navy department to designate an officer to succeed Adm. Howison.

It had been expected that little official business would be accomplished on the opening day, and the prompt decision as to Adm. Howison came somewhat as a surprise.

Intense interest appeared to be taken by the public in the proceedings, and though it was known that only a very limited number of persons would be admitted to the court room, and these by card, a large crowd was assembled at the Washington navy yard, where the court is sitting, to witness the coming and going of the prominent naval officers who were to take part in the proceedings.

The first skirmish was opened by Adm. Schley rising from his sent and speaking in a strong voice, calmly and deliberately, challenging Adm. Howison's eligibility as a member of the court. Three witnesses were brought forward in support of this challenge, namely, Mr. Francis S. Frost, Mr. William E. Spon and Mr. Foster Nicholls. They gave very positive testimony as to the expressions they had heard Adm. Howison make favorable to Adm. Sampson and unfacornbie to Adm. Schley. Mr. Frost testified to a statement Adm. Howison had made to him at Boston while the witness was seeking news as a reporter. Mr. Spon to remarks made while he and the admiral were journeying back to this country from Europe on a trans-Atlantic steamer, and Mr. Nicholls' conversation occurred during a business call at Adm. Howison's private residence at Yonkers, N. Y.

Before submitting the challenge to the determination of the court Mr. Rayner cross-examined Adm. Howison very minutely as to his personal sentiments towards Adm. Sampson and Adm. Schley, and developed that Adm. Howison had expressed certain definite convictions as to Adm. Sampson's retention of authority and responsibility, even while he was absent temporarily from the fleet at Santiago. The challenge was then submitted to the court, which, under the circumstances, was narrowed to Adm. Dewey and Rr. Adm. Bonham to pass upon. After hardly more than 15 minutes apent in retirement to the consultation room of the court, Adm. Dewey briefly announced that the court sustained the challenge, and that Adm. Howison would be excused from further attendance.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Rr. Adm. Ramsey has been appointed as a member of the Schley court of inquiry in place of Rr. Adm. Howison, who was disqualified.

Adm. Ramsey is the immediate predecessor of Adm. Crowningshield as chief of the navigation bureau of the navy department. He was appointed from Pennsylvania to the naval academy as midshipman in 1850, and his record in the civil war is full of engagements with the enemy on the lower Mississippi and Yazoo rivers and around Fort Fisher and Richmond on the Atlantic coast. He is 66 years old. It is impossible now to predict as to his acceptability to Adm. Schley as a member of the court. The admiral did not care to commit himself Friday afternoon, but referred all inquirers to his counsel, and as the latter are absent from Washington, their views can not be obtained here.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Adm. Dewey has recalled the notice sent out by him for the meeting Monday of the Schley court of inquiry. It was intended Saturday that the members should assemble Monday and adjourn immediately after adopting resolutions of condolence, but after consideration Adm. Dewey decided that the proprietics would be best met by withdrawing the call. The court will be assembled as soon as seems proper after the interment of the late president at Canton. It may resume its sessions Friday or Saturday of next week.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 12.—The surviving veterans of the greatest war in all the annals of history, the Grand Army of the Republic, have again responded to the bugle call and Wednesday fell into line as they were wont to do in the dark days of the civil war.

It is estimated that nearly half a million people were spectators of the magnificent pageant. The column was over eight miles in length, and was splendidly handled, the column moving steadily and with scarcely a halt or break until the entire line had passed the reviewing stand.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 13.—The first day of the national convention of the Grand Army of the Republic was taken up with the reading of the reports by the commander-in-chief, adjutant general, chaplain and the various committees.

Commander-in-Chief Rassieur, in a spirited address, severely arraigned Pension Governor Evans upon his administration of the affairs of the pension bureau. His complaint embraced alleged unfairness and dereliction of duty in office. Senator Hawley announced his intention of fighting any attack made upon Commissioner Evans. He expressed the fullest confidence in the commissioner to rectify any existing evils in time and counseled moderation in the case.

The Woman's Relief corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army, held the first session of their annual convention Thursday. The address of the national president and the adoption of the reports of other national officers and of the various committees consumed the first day's session.

The National Mexican War Veterans' association, at its session Thursday, received telegrams from Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. U. S. Grant, Adm. Dewey and others.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 14.—The convention of the 35th annual encampment of the Grand Army came to a close amid the silence and gloom of impending death.

News of the grave condition of the president cast a shadow over the proceedings and it was consequently decided to proceed with the election of officers and to refer all other important business of the session to the incoming council of administration.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, withdrew his name as a candidate for commander-in-chief before the nominations were made.

Comrade Ayers, of Delaware, moved the nomination of Gen. Thos. J. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, Gen. Gobin seconding.

Gov. Van Sant, of Minnesota, placed Judge Ell Torrance in nomination. The Torrance vote stood 476 to Stewart's 236, when Gen. Wagner moved that the vote be made unanimous in favor of Torrance. The motion was carried.

SUMMER MANNERS.

The Warm Season Tends to Lessen Sense of Obligation and Need of Formality.

Our summer manners often differ essentially from our winter manners. The tendency is to lessen obligations, to dispense with formalities. Within limits such a tendency is not to be reprobated. But liberty should not be permitted to degenerate into license. Because a man, for example, may substitute a straw hat and a serge suit for a topper and a frock coat, it does not follow that he may walk about coatless or sit in his shirt sleeves. And if social "functions" are more casual it does not mean that those engaging in them are released from the bonds of courtesy, says the Providence Journal.

The summer hotel has had a deleterious effect upon manners. There was a time when its influence was far greater than it is now. Fewer persons dwelling in cities had summer houses, where they could live in the privacy to which they were accustomed during the winter. The tendency was all toward a gregarious life in some huge caravansary, where promiscuous intercourse was almost unavoidable. Hence arose many distressing episodes. People made acquaintances in summer whom they did not wish to acknowledge in winter. Young persons broke through the laws of etiquette. Girls accustomed to careful chaperonage flirted recklessly with strange youths, and sometimes found themselves unpleasantly compromised in consequence. There were those who defended this condition of affairs on the ground that it was "democratic." But democracy is a word of various meaning; it does not imply the social equality of incongruous elements. Hotel life is now a single feature only of the holiday season. Perhaps, too, hotel etiquette is stricter than it used to be; if so, there is ground for satisfaction. It is far easier to make a show of good manners under a formal regime than under an informal one; the loosening of the rigid bonds gives natural impulse a chance, and it is then that men and women show what they are. It requires tact and discretion to be friendly without being familiar, to be courteous without encouraging impertinence. The principle remains the same in summer as in winter manners. It is a mistake to suppose that absence from home or from accustomed acquaintances will excuse rudeness or vulgarity. The young woman who is content to be the "summer girl" of the comic paper loses something of her womanhood in the process; the young man who is guilty of brassy impertinence becomes something less than a gentleman. It would be unreasonable to import too many formalities into our warm weather pursuits, or to be so fearful of ourselves that we cannot be pleasant with well-bred persons even though they are strangers; but the danger, as a rule, is quite the other way.

Stature of Eskimos.

The old tradition that the Eskimos are a people of small stature is without foundation. On the contrary, in Labrador, Baffinland and all around Hudson bay the height of the men is probably above rather than below the average of the human race, but as a rule the women, although very strong, are considerably shorter than the men. They are brave, industrious, provident and communicative, in all of which characteristics they contrast with the northern tribe of Indians.—Cleveland Leader.

Like a Woman.

"I have decided to be a hospital nurse," said Amy. "I saw it stated that 75 per cent. of unmarried men fall in love and propose marriage to the women that nurse them through severe illness."

"I saw that statement, too," added Mabel; "but my recollection is that it said pretty nurses."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

BIG RAILROAD IMPROVEMENT.

A unique excursion was recently arranged by the Union Pacific Railroad company. About sixty newspaper men, representing the leading journals of the country, were invited to take a trip on the Wyoming division, "The Overland Route," for the purpose of viewing the stupendous engineering achievements recently made on that line.

The train was made up of two private cars, three Pullman palace sleepers, a dining car, drawn by one of the new compound engines, with an observation car—constructed on the same plan as a trolley car—ahead of the engine.

One hundred and fifty-eight and fourtenths miles of new track laid, reducing the mileage between Omaha and Ogden by 30.47 miles, and reducing gradients which varied from 45.4 to 97.88 feet to the mile to a maximum of 43.3 feet, and curves from 6 to 4 degrees, while a great deal of bad curvature has been eliminated entirely.

A mountain removed and lost into a chasm; huge holes bored hundreds of feet through solid granite, an underground river encountered and overcome; an army of men, with all sorts of mechanical aids, engaged in the work for nearly a year; the great Union Pacific track between Omaha and Ogden made shorter, heavy grades eliminated, and the business of the great Overland route flowing through a new channel, without the slightest interruption.

Millions of money have been spent to reduce the grades and shorten the distance. The reduction is the result of straightening unnecessary curves, and the construction of several cutoffs between Buford and Bear river, Utah.

The curvature saved is about one-half, the grading about the same, while the angles are reduced nearly two-thirds. The superiority of these changes is apparent to the practical railroad engineer. It is also apparent to the operating department in the reduction in operating expenses, and to the traveler in the increased speed the trains can make.

The new line runs due west from Buford, avoiding the high hills and eighty-foot grade from Cheyenne, and piercing through cuts and the big tunnel, crosses the Black Hills at a grade of less than one-half (43.3 feet) over mountain altitudes.

From a constructive standpoint the line is remarkable for the amount of material required in the construction of immense embankments and the building of large tunnels through solid rock. The construction of the new line between Buford and Laramie alone has involved the excavation of 500,000 cubic yards of material, one-third of which (exclusive of the tunnel excavation) has been solid rock, of something over 100,000 cubic yards per mile.

Too much credit for this work cannot be given to Horace G. Burt, president of the Union Pacific railroad, and his assistants.

The excursion was replete with many interesting incidents, and the splendid hospitality of the Union Pacific officials was a revelation. The newspaper men evinced their appreciation in many ways, particularly in a resolution of thanks to the Union Pacific officials, General Passenger Agent Lomax, and Messrs. Darlow, Park and Griffin.

"I hope," said the young man who was spending a few days at the seashore, "that our engagement will not prove to be a mere summer subterfuge."

The Literary Maiden.

Milburn House, Sept. 14.—From authoritative officials the following details of the last scenes in and about the death chamber were secured:

Before 9 o'clock it was clear to those at the president's bedside that he was sinking and preparations were made for the last sad offices and farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily, but with little effect, in keeping back the progress and a dozen times the president came out of a period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. But in this period of lucidity, which was of short duration, occurred a series of events of profoundly touching character.

Those who had strained and tear-stained faces members of the cabinet were grouped in anxious waiting. They knew the end was near and that the time had come when they must see him for the last time on earth. This was about 9 o'clock. One by one they ascended the stairway—Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox. Secretary Wilson also was there, but he held back, not wishing to see the president in the last agony. There was only a momentary stay of the cabinet officers at the threshold of the death chamber. Then they withdrew, the tears streaming down their faces and the words of intense grief choking in their throats.

After they left the sick room the physicians rallied him to consciousness and the president asked almost immediately that his wife be brought to him. The doctors fell back into the shadows of the room as Mrs. McKinley came through the doorway. The strong face of the dying man lighted up with a faint smile as their hands were clasped. She sat beside him and held his hand.

His last conscious hour on earth was spent with the wife, to whom he devoted a life time of care. His last words were an humble submission to the will of the God in whom he believed. He was reconciled to the stroke which on 6th of September sped a bullet had condemned him, and fared death in the same spirit of calm resignation and poise which marked his long and honorable career.

The powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her, and she sat at his side and held his hand. He was sober and he and made her comfortable. Through the heartrending scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

The president, in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:30, chanted the words of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible consciousness words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at the bedside, were: "Good-by, all good-bye. It is God's will; His will be done."

Then his mind began to wander, and soon he completely lost consciousness. His life was prolonged for hours by the administration of oxygen, and the president vainly expressed a desire to be allowed to die. About 8 o'clock administration of oxygen ceased and the pulse grew fainter and fainter. He was sinking gradually, like a child, into the eternal slumber. By 2 o'clock the pulse could no longer be felt in his extremities, and they grew cold. Below stairs the grief-stricken gath-ring waited sadly for the end.

Those in the house at this time were Secretary Hitchcock, Wilson and Root, Senators Fairbanks, Hanna, Dingley, Faller Day, Col. Herrib, Abner McKinley, the president's brother, and his wife; Dr. and Mrs. Rixey, the president's niece and her husband; Mrs. Barber and Mrs. Duncan, the president's sisters; Mrs. Mary Parker, Mrs. McWilliams, Mrs. McKinley's nurses, the physicians, including Dr. McBurney, who arrived after 9 o'clock; John G. Milburn, John N. Scatcherd, Harry Thomas, all of this city; Secretary Cortelyou and a number of others. Rev. C. F. Wilson, a Methodist minister, of Tonawanda, N. Y., who was the president's pastor for three years at Canton.

At this midnight hour the Milburn house was the center of a scene as animated as though it were midday, although a solemn hush hung over the great crowd of watchers. The entire lower part of the house was ablaze with light, and the many attendants, friends and relatives could be seen within, moving about and occasionally coming in groups to the front doorway for a breath of air. In the upper front chambers the lights were dim, and on the north side, where the chamber of death is located, there were little lights, some burning brightly and then turned down.

Despite the fact that the vitality continued to ebb as midnight approached no efforts were spared to keep the spark of life glowing. Dr. Janeway, of New York city, arrived at the depot at 11:40 o'clock. George Urban was waiting for him, and they drove at a breakneck pace to the Milburn house. He was shown to the president's room at once, and began an examination of the almost inanimate form.

Secretary of the Navy Long arrived at the Milburn house at 12:00 o'clock. This was his first visit to the city, and he had the extreme satisfaction of seeing the president alive, even though he was not conscious of his visitor's presence. Secretary Long was visibly affected.

Shortly after midnight the president's breathing was hardly perceptible. His pulse had practically ceased and the extremities were cold. It was recognized that nothing remained but the last struggle, and some of the friends of the family who had remained through the day began to leave the house, not caring to be present at the final scene.

The members of the family, with the exception of the bereaved wife, were at the death bed. Mrs. McKinley was in an adjoining room. Dr. Rixey was the only physician present.

The actual death probably occurred about 2 o'clock, it being understood that Dr. Rixey delayed the announcement momentarily to assure himself.

The announcement of the news to those waiting below was postponed until the members of the family had withdrawn. Through Secretary Cortelyou the waiting newspaper men received the notification. In a little there was the scene of excitement on the broad avenue, but there was no semblance of disorder.

Vice President Roosevelt had been notified early in the day of the critical state of affairs. There was no longer a doubt that in the approaching death of the president a complete change in the executive administration of the government would ensue.

Milburn house, Buffalo, Sept. 16.—Long before any one set up the services over the remains of the late President McKinley, the vicinity of the Milburn house was astir with preparations. At nine o'clock long platoons of police officers, mounted and on foot, arrived at the ground and were disposed of around along the streets approaching the house. Maj. Gen. John R. Brooke, department commander of the army, who was personally in command of all the forces participating in the escort, arrived at 10 o'clock. He was in full dress uniform, with service sword at his side. Around his left arm was wound a heavy band of crepe.

At 10:30 o'clock the military and naval detachments took temporary station on West Ferry street immediately around the corner from the Milburn house. The national guard of the state of New York was represented by picked companies from the 54th and 74th regiments, under command of Capt. Blandford. Then the trapping of the military arm of the service gave way to those of the United States navy as 50 men from the United States gunboat Michigan, under command of Lieut. L. P. Milnir, swung into position along side their military brothers in arms. After them came the blue jackets with open throated shirts, their loose black neck scarfs in sailor knots, with yellow leggins and sailor hats. The entire military and naval force formed in company on West Ferry street, and there awaited the time for the services to begin.

Meantime the members of the cabinet, officials high in the government service, and near friends of the martyred president, began to fill the walks leading up to the entrance of the Milburn residence. They came separately and in groups, some walking, while those in carriages were admitted within the roped enclosure up to the curb.

Two and two, a long line of men of dignified bearing marched up to see the house, the foreign commissioners sent to the exposition, and after them the state commissioners. While the foreigner was a colonel of the Mexican army in his full uniform of black with scarlet stripes and rendered gold braided cap.

It was just eight minutes before the opening of the service when a covered hearse drawn by four black horses, bringing President Roosevelt and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, at whose home he is a guest. As the president passed within the house, and the services were about to begin, the long line of soldiers and sailors swung in columns of fours into formation around the house and immediately thereafter the battalion of marines, standing in front of the house and the lawns had been cleared of the crowds that had swept avenue was now deserted, save on the right, motionless ranks across from the house.

The service had already begun when there was a clatter of hoofs down the avenue and four coal black horses came into view drawing the hearse which was to bear the casket of the dead president. It was a hearse of the latest pattern, all plumes or any trappings to relieve the funereal black. The horses, too, were not plumed or caparisoned, and all four of them were black from nose to tip of tail.

Within the house of death was woe unspeakable. In the drawing room to the left of the hall, where the president Roosevelt entered, the dead chieftain lay, stretched upon his bier—his head was to the right as one looks in. The face was white with the stress of the Christian forbearance with which he had met his martyrdom. Only the influence of the drug was written testimony to the patient suffering he had endured. He was dressed as he always was in life. The black frock coat was buttoned across the breast where the last bullet of the assassin had struck. The black string tie below the standing collar showed the little triangle of white shirt front. Upon it looked as millions of his countrymen have seen him, save for one thing. The little badge of the Loyal Legion, the only decoration he ever wore, which was always in the left lapel of his coat, was missing. And those who remarked it, spoke of it only after the body was taken to the city hall, the little badge which he prized through life was pinned again where it always had been.

The body lay in a black casket on a black bearskin rug. Over the lower limbs were thrown the starry emblazoned flag and across a bullet had condemned him, and fared death in the same spirit of calmness and poise which marked his long and honorable career.

The powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her, and she sat at his side and held his hand. He was shown to the president's room at once, and began an examination of the almost inanimate form.

Secretary of the Navy Long arrived at the Milburn house at 12:00 o'clock. This was his first visit to the city, and he had the extreme satisfaction of seeing the president alive, even though he was not conscious of his visitor's presence. Secretary Long was visibly affected.

Shortly after midnight the president's breathing was hardly perceptible. His pulse had practically ceased and the extremities were cold. It was recognized that nothing remained but the last struggle, and some of the friends of the family who had remained through the day began to leave the house, not caring to be present at the final scene.

The members of the family, with the exception of the bereaved wife, were at the death bed. Mrs. McKinley was in an adjoining room. Dr. Rixey was the only physician present.

The actual death probably occurred about 2 o'clock, it being understood that Dr. Rixey delayed the announcement momentarily to assure himself.

The announcement of the news to those waiting below was postponed until the members of the family had withdrawn. Through Secretary Cortelyou the waiting newspaper men received the notification. In a little there was the scene of excitement on the broad avenue, but there was no semblance of disorder.

Vice President Roosevelt had been notified early in the day of the critical state of affairs. There was no longer a doubt that in the approaching death of the president a complete change in the executive administration of the government would ensue.

Milburn house, Buffalo, Sept. 16.—Long before any one set up the services over the remains of the late President McKinley, the vicinity of the Milburn house was astir with preparations. At nine o'clock long platoons of police officers, mounted and on foot, arrived at the ground and were disposed of around along the streets approaching the house. Maj. Gen. John R. Brooke, department commander of the army, who was personally in command of all the forces participating in the escort, arrived at 10 o'clock. He was in full dress uniform, with service sword at his side. Around his left arm was wound a heavy band of crepe.

At 10:30 o'clock the military and naval detachments took temporary station on West Ferry street immediately around the corner from the Milburn house. The national guard of the state of New York was represented by picked companies from the 54th and 74th regiments, under command of Capt. Blandford. Then the trapping of the military arm of the service gave way to those of the United States navy as 50 men from the United States gunboat Michigan, under command of Lieut. L. P. Milnir, swung into position along side their military brothers in arms. After them came the blue jackets with open throated shirts, their loose black neck scarfs in sailor knots, with yellow leggins and sailor hats. The entire military and naval force formed in company on West Ferry street, and there awaited the time for the services to begin.

Meantime the members of the cabinet, officials high in the government service, and near friends of the martyred president, began to fill the walks leading up to the entrance of the Milburn residence. They came separately and in groups, some walking, while those in carriages were admitted within the roped enclosure up to the curb.

Two and two, a long line of men of dignified bearing marched up to see the house, the foreign commissioners sent to the exposition, and after them the state commissioners. While the foreigner was a colonel of the Mexican army in his full uniform of black with scarlet stripes and rendered gold braided cap.

It was just eight minutes before the opening of the service when a covered hearse drawn by four black horses, bringing President Roosevelt and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, at whose home he is a guest. As the president passed within the house, and the services were about to begin, the long line of soldiers and sailors swung in columns of fours into formation around the house and immediately thereafter the battalion of marines, standing in front of the house and the lawns had been cleared of the crowds that had swept avenue was now deserted, save on the right, motionless ranks across from the house.

The service had already begun when there was a clatter of hoofs down the avenue and four coal black horses came into view drawing the hearse which was to bear the casket of the dead president. It was a hearse of the latest pattern, all plumes or any trappings to relieve the funereal black. The horses, too, were not plumed or caparisoned, and all four of them were black from nose to tip of tail.

Within the house of death was woe unspeakable. In the drawing room to the left of the hall, where the president Roosevelt entered, the dead chieftain lay, stretched upon his bier—his head was to the right as one looks in. The face was white with the stress of the Christian forbearance with which he had met his martyrdom. Only the influence of the drug was written testimony to the patient suffering he had endured. He was dressed as he always was in life. The black frock coat was buttoned across the breast where the last bullet of the assassin had struck. The black string tie below the standing collar showed the little triangle of white shirt front. It looked as millions of his countrymen have seen him, save for one thing. The little badge of the Loyal Legion, the only decoration he ever wore, which was always in the left lapel of his coat, was missing. And those who remarked it, spoke of it only after the body was taken to the city hall, the little badge which he prized through life was pinned again where it always had been.

The body lay in a black casket on a black bearskin rug. Over the lower limbs were thrown the starry emblazoned flag and across a bullet had condemned him, and fared death in the same spirit of calmness and poise which marked his long and honorable career.

The powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her, and she sat at his side and held his hand. He was sober and he and made her comfortable. Through the heartrending scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

The president, in his last period of consciousness, which ended about 7:30, chanted the words of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and his last audible consciousness words, as taken down by Dr. Mann at the bedside, were: "Good-by, all good-bye. It is God's will; His will be done."

Then his mind began to wander, and soon he completely lost consciousness. His life was prolonged for hours by the administration of oxygen, and the president vainly expressed a desire to be allowed to die. About 8 o'clock administration of oxygen ceased and the pulse grew fainter and fainter. He was sinking gradually, like a child, into the eternal slumber. By 2 o'clock the pulse could no longer be felt in his extremities, and they grew cold. Below stairs the grief-stricken gath-ring waited sadly for the end.

Those in the house at this time were Secretary Hitchcock, Wilson and Root, Senators Fairbanks, Hanna, Dingley, Faller Day, Col. Herrib, Abner McKinley, the president's brother, and his wife; Dr. and Mrs. Rixey, the president's niece and her husband; Mrs. Barber and Mrs. Duncan, the president's sisters; Mrs. Mary Parker, Mrs. McWilliams, Mrs. McKinley's nurses, the physicians, including Dr. McBurney, who arrived after 9 o'clock; John G. Milburn, John N. Scatcherd, Harry Thomas, all of this city; Secretary Cortelyou and a number of others. Rev. C. F. Wilson, a Methodist minister, of Tonawanda, N. Y., who was the president's pastor for three years at Canton.

At this midnight hour the Milburn house was the center of a scene as animated as though it were midday, although a solemn hush hung over the great crowd of watchers. The entire lower part of the house was ablaze with light, and the many attendants, friends and relatives could be seen within, moving about and occasionally coming in groups to the front doorway for a breath of air. In the upper front chambers the lights were dim, and on the north side, where the chamber of death is located, there were little lights, some burning brightly and then turned down.

Despite the fact that the vitality continued to ebb as midnight approached no efforts were spared to keep the spark of life glowing. Dr. Janeway, of New York city, arrived at the depot at 11:40 o'clock. George Urban was waiting for him, and they drove at a breakneck pace to the Milburn house. He was shown to the president's room at once, and began an examination of the almost inanimate form.

Secretary of the Navy Long arrived at the Milburn house at 12:00 o'clock. This was his first visit to the city, and he had the extreme satisfaction of seeing the president alive, even though he was not conscious of his visitor's presence. Secretary Long was visibly affected.

Shortly after midnight the president's breathing was hardly perceptible. His pulse had practically ceased and the extremities were cold. It was recognized that nothing remained but the last struggle, and some of the friends of the family who had remained through the day began peace and quiet which Thy presence only can afford. We thank Thee that Thou answerest the sobbing sigh of the heart, even when it has run out of the night of grief shall live again. We praise Thee for Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Saviour and our elder brother; that He came to bring life and immortality to light,' and because He lives we shall live also. We thank Thee that death is victory, that 'to die is gain.' Have mercy upon us in this distress. In Thy Providence we believe in Thee—we trust Thee—our God of Love. 'The same yesterday, to-day and forever.' We thank Thee for the unsullied life of Thy servant, our martyred president, whom Thou hast taken to his coronation, and we pray for the final triumph of all the divine principles of pure character and free government for which he stood while he lived and which were baptized by his blood in his death.

"Hear our prayer for blessings of consolation upon all those who were associated with him in the administration of the affairs of the government, especially Thy vonchsafe Thy presence to Thy servant, who has been suddenly called to assume the holy responsibility of our chief magistrate.

"O, God, bless our dear nation, and guide the ship of state through stormy seas; help Thy people to be brave to fight the battles of the Lord and wise to solve all the problems of freedom.

"Graciously hear us for comforting blessings to rest upon the family circle of our departed friend. Tenderly sustain Thine hand upon whom the blow of this sorrow most heavily falls. Accompany her, O, God, as Thou hast promised, through this dark valley and shadow, and may she fear no evil, because Thou art with her.

"All these things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, who has taught us when we pray, to say, our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for Thine is the Kingdom, and the Power, and the Glory forever. Amen.

"May the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God the Father and communion of the holy spirit, be with us all, ever more. Amen."

All present joined in the Lord's prayer as the minister repeated it. President Roosevelt's voice being audible at the back of the room. The service concluded with a simple benediction. The funeral director was about to step forward to place the cover on the casket when suddenly there was a movement behind Gov. Odell. Senator Hanna, who had risen, saw that the last opportunity to look into the countenance of his dead friend had come. Pressing forward in an instant he was at the side of the casket and, bending over and looking down for it. Almost two minutes passed and then he turned away and the coffin was closed.

A police officer walked with a hand at the bridle on each side of the hearse walked a detachment of soldiers and sailors, four followed men from the army and marine corps on the right and as many more on the left, immediately back of the hearse marched a score of G. A. R. veterans, who had been assigned to this post of honor.

As the escort of soldiers swung slowly into Delaware avenue a few drops of rain fell. In two minutes it was raining hard. The long line of troops took their positions at Delaware avenue. The casket was lifted from the hearse to the shoulders of the sailors and marines and was borne into Buffalo's official home. Outside there was not a man, so far as could be seen, who did not stand, defying the elements, with hat removed, respecting his dead president. Inside, with steps impressively slow and measured, the bearers made their way to the catafalque. A moment later and the body of President McKinley was at rest.

At 12:25 o'clock exactly, the police were informed that the body could be viewed by the people. A minute later and the first of the long line came through the doors. Solemn, unged, in silence they moved past the bier to view the face of the president. Old men and weak women and strong men and children, leaders of men and laborers—all these classes were represented in the throng that filed past. During the first hour the people passed the catafalque at the rate of 115 to the minute. They seemed, as the afternoon wore on, to come more rapidly. Outside the lines were amazing in their dimensions. The long line passed out Franklin street.

The crowds grew larger until those in charge found it necessary to extend the hours. Owing to the presence of so many waiting thousands it was decided to leave the city hall open until midnight. Then for hours longer the streets were dense with people and a constant stream flowed up the steps of the broad entrance into the hall and passed the bier. When the doors were closed at midnight it was estimated that 80,000 people had viewed the remains, but thousands of disappointed ones were still in the streets.

The body laid in the city hall until Monday morning. It was then taken to the station by a military escort, and at 8:30 the funeral train, consisting of seven cars, started for Washington. Mrs. McKinley, the president, the cabinet and relatives and friends of the dead president accompanied the remains. Mrs. McKinley bore up bravely during the services at the Milburn residence, and Dr. Rixey, her physician, thinks she will be able to support her trying part in the state funeral at Washington.

IN WASHINGTON.

President McKinley's Remains Will Lie in State in the Rotunda of the Capitol Tuesday.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The official announcement was received at the white house at 2:25 a. m., and is as follows:

"Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1901.—Col. B. S. Montgomery, Executive Mansion, Washington: The president died at a quarter past 2 o'clock this morning.

"GEORGE B. CORTELYOU."

The secretary, as the premier of the cabinet, will wire this notification.

But the balance of the notification to the ambassadors and ministers in foreign lands.

There were no details in the messages—nothing but brief announcement—and they were identical in language, except in the names of persons addressed. The ambassadors and ministers were expected to communicate the information in turn to the United States consular officers within the limits of their posts.

In the cases of Australia and Canada, where the United States government is not represented in a diplomatic capacity, messages were sent out to the United States consul generals, who were to repeat them to the consuls. The message was signed by Secretary Hay. Mr. Babcock, his private secretary, having taken it from the state department to the White House for that purpose.

This was all that the department of state could do Friday night. As soon as possible it will issue a proclamation announcing the sorrowful event to the United States and to the world at large, and direct the closing of the executive departments and navy yards and army posts as a mark of mourning.

But this proclamation requires the signature President Roosevelt, and that must be countersigned also by Secretary Hay, formalities which may consume some time, as the president is away by distance of these officials unless it be arranged by telegraph, so that the proclamation may be delayed a day or two. The clerks on duty at once notified all their chiefs of the death.

The white house flag will be half-masted, but a comparatively recent act of congress forbids the display of national standards with emblems of mourning.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Secretary Hay Sunday issued to the public the following announcement concerning the funeral of President McKinley:

Department of State, Washington, Sept. 15.—The remains of the late president of the United States, after lying in state in the city hall of Buffalo during the afternoon of Sunday, September 15, will be removed to Washington by special train on Monday, September 16, leaving Buffalo at 8:30 a. m., and reaching Washington at 4 p. m. The remains will then be carried under the escort of a squadron of United States cavalry to the executive mansion, where they will remain until 9 o'clock in the morning of Tuesday, September 17. They will then be carried to the capitol, accompanied by a military and civic escort. The remains will lie there in state. Religious services will be held in the rotunda of the capitol on Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon. Tuesday evening the remains, under military escort, will be transferred to a funeral car and carried to Canton, O., arriving there on Wednesday, where arrangements for the final sepulture will be committed to the charge of the citizens of Canton, under the direction of a committee to be selected by the mayor of that city.

No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond the tolling of bells. Signed, John Hay, Secretary of State.

The heads of the various departments and their principal assistants were busy Sunday making arrangements for the proper execution of the details of the funeral programme as fell to them respectively. Secretary Hay came to his desk early in the morning and remained throughout the day. Though it was Sunday, telegrams of condolence were still coming to the department of state from all parts of the world.

In the war department, Acting Secretary Sanger was in consultation with Gen. Gillespie, Col. Ward and Gen. Barry, arranging for the transportation to Washington of the troops to participate in the funeral proceedings, making details for guard duty and other matters.

Gen. Randolph, chief of artillery, who is to represent the army at the capital, arranged with Sergeant-at-Arms Russell that they should co-operate in the management of the funeral ceremonies at the capital. Four privates will be on hand watch day and night, one at each corner of the catafalque, as long as the remains of the late President Mckinley lie in the capitol building. A suitable guard will be stationed at the entrance and will keep the people in alignment after they are admitted to the capitol to view the remains next Tuesday.

Acting Secretary Hackett ordered that a detail should be made up, consisting of two officers and twenty-four men, as privates in the marine corps for duty at the capitol next Tuesday to supplement the army representation.

Maj. Gen. Brooke will be in general charge of military arrangements here. Gen. Francis S. Guenther will be in command of the military contingent in the procession. Col. Sanford Kellner, coming in to Gen. Miles, has been detailed to command the infantry and look specially after her comfort, while Col. Henry Whitney, of Gen. Miles' staff, is designated to perform a similar service for President Roosevelt.

At the capitol, Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell directed the preparation of the rotunda for the funeral service. The space in even this vast structure is entirely insufficient to meet the demand for admission of more than a fraction of the persons who think they should be admitted to the services next Tuesday. The public will be excluded, as the accommodation will not suffice for the officials who must be present. The diplomatic corps alone will occupy about 200 places if all the invitations sent out are accepted, and in addition there will be the United States senate, the United States supreme court, the house of representatives and a large number of officials, army and navy and military. Every army and navy officer in Washington having rank entitling him to attend the funeral service, they alone would consume a large portion of this seating space. The general public will have an opportunity to review the remains of the late president while the body lies in state before the funeral service.

The sergeant-at-arms has had the catafalque, which supported the remains of Lincoln, Garfield and other statesmen, brought out of the crypt in which it reposed so long, and has turned it over to William Lees' Sons, funeral directors, who will have the undertaking in charge. The catafalque is to be entirely covered with new black cloth.

Manila, Sept. 15.—The officers and the soldiers of the division of the Philippines beg the department to place an appropriate floral design on the bier of the president of the United States as a token of a great sorrow. Also their deepest sympathy to Mrs. McKinley. Signed, Chaffee.

In answer to this appeal the war department arranged with a local florist to supply a handsome floral shield with the 8th army corps badge in the center.

Gen. Barry, assistant adjutant general, who has been placed in charge of affairs at the white house during the time the remains are in Washington, has completed his programme. He has directed the commanding officer at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, to dispatch 12 non-commissioned officers to Washington in charge of a commissioned officer to act as pall bearers. They are to arrive in Washington Monday in time to handle the remains when they reach the station. They are to remove the casket from the train and place it in the hearse and will walk six on a side, next the hearse, to the white house. It also will be their duty to place the casket upon the stand in the east room and to perform like offices at the capitol, the railway station and at Canton.

Gen. Barry has arranged to have six ebony columns placed in the white house to support the casket.

From the time the remains reach the white house the guard will be maintained until the body is removed to the capitol Tuesday morning. A soldier and a sailor or a marine will stand at the head of the coffin and two more at the foot, while on their side will stand a member of the G. A. R. and a member of the Loyal Legion. Provision will be made for relieving these watches at proper intervals.

To provide for the proper arrangement in the line of procession of the diplomatic body and of senators, representatives and other persons who may gather at the white house to join in the procession to the capitol, Gen. Barry has selected a special staff headed by Lieut. Col. M. A. Miller, of the engineers; Capt. C. B. Wheeler and W. W. Gibson, of the 4th artillery; Maj. J. M. Marshall, and Capt. M. M. Patrick, of the engineers.

Thus far the only naval orders issued for participation in the parade have been the marine band, detachment of marines from the Washington barracks, and 50 seamen from the Illinois at Newport, but the balance of the naval contingent will be ordered by Acting Secretary Hackett from Rr. Adm. Higginson, the commandant at Hampton Roads. The hearse used in the parade will be drawn by six black steeds draped with black netting and a groom in black will be carrying a high hat will ride beside each horse. The casket, it is probable, will not be opened at all while in the white house.

The Union Veterans Legion, in addition to the G. A. R. and the Loyal Legion, all three of which will be represented as a member, also will occupy a post of honor immediately in front of the hearse in the parade.

The special guard of honor, composed of the general officers of the army and officers of high rank in the navy will not march in the parade of Tuesday. The troops ordered here by the war department will report for duty at the white house Tuesday morning. Company A, army engineer corps, from Fort Totten, N. Y., arrived at midnight.

Acceptances of the invitation to participate in the parade Wednesday were today. Gov. John F. Hill, of Maine, wired Acting Secretary Sanger that he would come with his staff and suite and Gov. Yates, of Illinois, telegraphed to know which his military staff should assemble here. The mayor of Savannah,

Today our hearts are sad over the death of our president, and we ladies of Kentucky extend to Mrs. McKinley our deepest sympathy in her great bereavement, sweetly assuring her that the Savior was the President's best friend, and as death brought him nearer to God, he felt that sweet submission to God's will, proving how essential and precious is the Christian religion to all. He who murdered our President was the Judas of America, one who justly deserves death—one whose life should pay the penalty of such a crime God knows best how to avenge his own. We can no longer call this a free country if we permit so vile and lawless a people as Anarchists to remain here. We trust that this country will soon be cleared of them.

Malchus went after him like a hungry bass goes for a fat minnow; and a short time afterwards meeting him again, he said the farmer told him if I said so it was all right.

Just east of the Christian church and adjoining the town, Herbert Glinu has raised a good crop of corn on an inferior piece of ground. Walking thru it the other day to note the condition of the fruit on an early persimmon tree, I was struck with the extraordinary cleanness of its cultivation. Not a weed or blade of grass could be seen, only here and there and that quite rarely, a darling dewberry bush had shown itself after the last plowing. A better condition for seeding could not be seen anywhere. Herbert's characteristic is to do thoroly any work he undertakes.

Last Friday morning Mrs. J. W. Hawkins left home to go to church. About the same time the fast line came along and stopped. As it was not on its schedule to stop here, it attracted the attention of William Moxley, the mail carrier, and he noted that three well dressed young men were ejected from the train, who made their way up into town, and started out High street. Going over the bridge they noticed that no one was about the residence of Mr. Hawkins, and they entered the premises, going to the rear of the house and finding the back door unlocked, went into the kitchen and helped themselves bountifully to the viands prepared for dinner. It so happened that Mr. R. J. Hance, the town marshal, was going home at the time, and observing that the screen of the back window had been taken out and the others inside and front were closed, he thought it needed looking into, and he proceeded to the rear of the house. A man at the pump, who had, no doubt, seen him coming, was in the act of drinking when Hance came upon him. Brushing by him the fellow came out, and went out High street until he came to Judge Botts', which he scanned, then entered the yard and tried the front door, and this was witnessed by "yours truly," who had just come out of the house on his way to the postoffice, and deeming the fellow's actions as suspicious, as he had gone up the side way, I went to the house just as Mrs. Botts came to the front door. Telling her a man had gone into the yard, she went immediately back and the fellow came out and went out High street, and was joined by one of the others, who seemed to come from the rear alley back of where Mr. Hawkins lives. Afterwards three of them came back, and without crossing the bridge, took to the railroad.

This neighborhood was greatly shocked when the news reached here that President McKinley was dead. Everybody thought he was on the road to recovery.

The family who does not put up enough fruit to last them until fruit grows again, will have no one to blame but themselves. There have been thousands of bushels of peaches gone to waste in the county and there are still thousands of bushels free for every body.

A SCHOOL DAY.

Polly's gone to school to-day;
That is why the house is still—
Carried smiles and chatter gay
To the schoolhouse on the hill.
Everything is prim and neat;
No need now to scold or frown;
Yet I long for little hands
Scattering playthings up and down.

Noah's ark is stranded safe
High upon a sand hill's crest,
And the animals are all
Taking a much-needed rest;
In their places sit the dolls,
On each face a painted smile
As they wonder why "Mamma"
Leaves them such a long, long while.

Mother Goose is on the shelf,
Johnny Warner and Bopeep;
The china dog upon the rug
Has long since fallen fast asleep.
Slow the sun creeps down the west;
Slow the coming of the night;
What a pity baby girls
Need must learn to read and write!

When my darling comes from school
With her little stock of lore
Shall I chide her childish ways
As I've often done before?
In the stillness I have conned
O'er and o'er love's golden rule;
Dreamed of life in love's eclipse;
Thus I, too, have been to school.

TWICE A WINNER

By LELIA KENNEDY HUTCHINS

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

CHAPTER I.

"IT'S the last throw, Jean; why have a paltry 20 from the wreck?"

"Better pocket it, Paul, old man; may want an absinthe before morning."

"Aut absinthe, aut nihil," was the sinister retort. "I'll take the chance." He touched the note to his lips in token of farewell, and placed it on the red. The red lost.

The flashing lamp of the Deschanel club has been a fatal lode-star to many a youth whom the common gambling den could not scathe. To scores of the young aristocracy of New Orleans it has been the starting point to a certain goal.

Sunlight, through the glass of a richly studded rotunda, traces delicate patterns upon deep-piled rugs. Tapestries and hangings, the envy of eastern princes, deaden all sounds. Carefully shaded lamps soften outlines and remove the traces which one man hates to see in the face of another. From the walls gems of recent salons tempt the gambler an instant from his play. The exquisite in art is a brief sedative to ragged nerves. Music from a hidden orchestra lessens the tension, unseen, always felt, wherever there is play. Attendants, silent, impassive, alert, glide from room to room, where nothing risque, much less, disgraceful, ever happens. From dome to carpet nothing offends the sense of the most acute of the Latin-Gallic race. And yet, by reason of its name, the discretion of its habitues and the cleverness of its management, this fool's paradise, known to every police precinct of New Orleans, has thus far eluded the vigilance of the law. The plan of the place sprang full-grown from a woman's brain. By no means its least attraction lies in the constant presence of this woman with an imperturbable past. When the club opened a rumor winged abroad that Mme. Deschanel was the widow of Gen. Felix Deschanel, who fell in the campaign of Maximillan in Mexico. Of bounties and plunder, it was whispered that this brilliant general had reaped a golden harvest, with which his widow had founded the Deschanel club. What men knew was that Mme. Deschanel, president, secretary and hostess, ruled her small domain with perfect justice and exquisite tact. More would have been unnecessary, if not superfluous.

Paul de Lignac and Jean Baronne turned from the roulette table, where de Lignac had courted disaster by forcing his luck to the limit.

"Where now, Jean?"

Baronne sent a side glance to his friend, whom his mind flashed a decision not to leave before the morrow.

"Where?" he repeated, glancing carelessly at the clock.

"There's a well-browned capon awaiting your verdict at my quarters and a glass of red Burgundy is the best lens I know for studying a situation."

"A thousand thanks, Jean—but—hang it all, I don't want to see anybody!"

"See anybody!" exclaimed Baronne. "Have you forsaken your final senses? Do you think a bachelor keeps a body of female relatives stowed away in his apartments? My valet is there, but the stream of our combined woes at the flood would not weaken the barrier of his reserve."

"The Levee is more to my mood."

"Too crowded for a patrician."

"Or a few drops of prussic in a cordial."

"Something quite original in melodrama. Ha! ha!" Baronne forced a laugh which did him credit.

"You've turned egotist, my dear fellow. Do you fancy that you are the first man in this little Paris to lose a year's income between lunch and dinner? Besides, is the fire more tempting than the frying-pan?"

To De Lignac's inquiring look, he added: "This may be the Inferno, my friend. I presume upon poetic license to suggest that you might find an even worse place."

"The weariest and most loathed worldly life . . . . . is a paradise to what we fear of death!' Shakespeare's coat was buttoned when he said that."

"Your levity graces you, Jean. It is thin enough to let your good heart shine through. But have a look at figures—no 'poetic license' about them. Not a cent in my pockets. The indulgence of family and generosity of friends alike, strained to the snapping point. Eight months to the next allowance."

His metallic voice bit off the sentences.

"May I point a problem to tax ever your clever brain?"

"A plague on problems! I have solved worse. But, for the moment why look beyond a good dinner? No problem there, surely. Come."

After a moment's resistance to the hand upon his shoulder, the two men left the club and crossed Lafayette square.

CHAPTER II.

At half after seven, the bell on the secretary's desk at the club jingled. Mme. Deschanel raised the telephone receiver.

A voice said: "De L. came home with me to-night, after losing everything this afternoon. His mood was so black that I dared not leave him. I urged him to rest before dinner. When he seemed to be asleep, I left the room for a moment. He has shot himself. What is to be done?"

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Mme Deschanel, is that you, Baronne?"

"Yes."

"I'll be there in ten minutes."

Scandal, exposure, ruin chased through her brain as Mme. Deschanel threw herself into the first of the long line of hansoms stretching away from the door. She gasped an address, promising triple fare for haste.

Ten minutes later Baronne, in person, admitted her to his apartments. Without a word they entered a bedchamber. The large room was dimly lighted. A single candle burned on the mantel. The furtive glance of the excited woman, as by instinct, sought the canopied bed on the opposite side of the room.

There lay De Lignac, deadly white. He was still fully dressed. An outstretched arm hung over the side of the bed. Beneath it, on the floor, lay the revolver, just as it had fallen from his hand. The single glance read the situation.

"Horrible!" "Horrible!" muttered Mme. Deschanel. The pent panic sought outlet. "A white-livered fool like him should stay at home with his mother! Coward! Execrable—why—if one word of this escapes, my place is ruined. The pleasure of hundreds sacrificed to a child!"

She turned fiercely upon Baronne. "How much did he lose?"

"His annual allowance," answered Baronne. A slight tremor touched his voice. "And some hundreds, borrowed from friends who chanced to be at the club this afternoon."

"H'm! as bad as that?" said Mme Deschanel in a quieter tone.

"It's a nasty mess at best."

A sudden idea reached her.

"Does anyone else know of this?"

"No; my valet, the only person in the place, happened to be in the wine cellar at the moment."

"Good! Very good!" The furrows in the woman's brow smoothed perceptibly. The cool, keen gambler succeeded to the hysterical bundle of emotions.

"Now, then," she said, curtly, "I rely upon you, Baronne, as a man of honor and a gentleman, not to betray the secret. Shortly after I leave, you will follow and not return until to-morrow, when you will discover him."

A cloud shadowed her brow as she detected a possible flaw in her plan.

"Your valet—does he enter this room?"

"Never, without summons," came the laconic reply.

"To-morrow, you will discover the sad affair. You understand?"

"Yes, but—"

"I'll put these notes in his pocket."

Mme. Deschanel shivered slightly as she tucked a roll of bank notes into the waistcoat pocket of the dead man. The devil even dares not cross the chalk line drawn by Death. Then she hurried from the room.

"There," she added, at the door, "want of money could not possibly have been the motive of the suicide."

A quiet, self-complacent smile relieved the haggard look of her face. The thought that she had saved the house of Deschanel cheered her more leisurely drive back to the club.

CHAPTER III.

At midnight the life of the Deschanel club is at its height. Men, flushed with champagne, lounge indifferently upon divans, sit doggedly at one table or stride feverishly from room to room, trying a hand at baccarat, roulette or other games.

The pale drink makes many kinds of men. But one thought rules them. Whether by indifference, persistence or vacillation, the genius of the hour and place must be served.

Wheedled, if possible, bullied, if necessary, now the one, again the other tactic wins from Fortune, fleeting favor for her devotees.

Shortly after midnight the outer door opened and swung to. A young man, carefully dressed and with the appearance of having dined leisurely and well, entered. He approached the roulette table and carelessly tossed a hundred dollar bill on the red. The red won.

Mme. Deschanel, standing near, chatting with a group of animated men, lifted her eyes to the victorious player. In her most courteous and imperturbable manner she said:

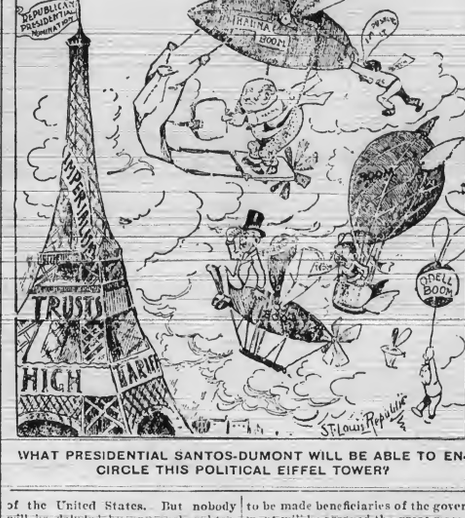
English Railway Map.



A remarkable contrast to the map of precious stones which lately astonished Paris is the railway map on tiles put at York station by an English company. It is made of white tiles, the lines being marked in black and burnt sienna. It is about six feet square, and each tile is eight inches square. The company intends to have similar maps at all important stations on its system.

DISAPPEARED MYSTERIOUSLY

The politicians who are running the republican party are having piled up against them a good deal of evidence that they are not only the greatest treasury looters that the United States has ever been cursed with, but that they are also guilty of pillaging the government archives to accomplish their ends. Evidence of this was lately published, and the Washington Times says: "It was developed yesterday that all of the secret correspondence of the signal corps of the army relating to the Spanish war has mysteriously disappeared from the files of the war department. Among the missing documents is a dispatch from Col. Allen to Gen. Greely announcing the presence of the Spanish fleet in Santiago harbor. This message, it is said, was immediately communicated to Sampson, who allowed 11 days to elapse before taking any steps to meet the situation. As the original of this communication and the official indorsements which may have been made upon it are very necessary for Admiral Schley's counsel to see, perhaps public need not be surprised to know that it has been put out of the way.

"The excuse is offered at the department that possibly Gen. Greely, chief of the signal corps, deliberately may have destroyed the records, with a view of concealing the names of persons used in the secret service of the United States. But nobody will be deluded by any such subterfuge. If Gen. Greely had done a thing of that kind it would be a matter of public record, and his reasons and authority for the act would be spread upon the files of the department. He is conveniently in the Philippines and will not return until November 1, so there are several weeks during which the onus may be laid upon his shoulders problematically. All the same, the American people will conclude that the signal service records have been stolen for a purpose, as many public records have been stolen or falsified for various but always infamous purposes during the past few years.

"One would think that the Sampson scandal had become too hot for even the administration to bear, and that it would do something in the line of an attempt to convince the country that it is no longer an active party to the conspiracy against the victor of Santiago. It would better make the effort before it is too late, because every day now adds to the proof that a plot has been hatching ever since August, 1898, to rob Admiral Schley of his laurels and transfer them to Sampson, the man of the Matanzas mule."

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——After reading the Pennsylvania democratic platform, Boss Quay probably wired every one of his 80,000 repeaters to be on hand early in November for emergent business.—Albany Argus.

——The dense ignorance of Mr. McKinley's attorneys general on the trust question is one of the most marvelous natural phenomena of modern times. As an eighth wonder of the world it can be distanced, if at all, only by the strange and peculiar fortune of President McKinley and Senator Hanna in learning their names and addresses and inducing them to accept the position of enforcer of the anti-trust laws.—Omaha World-Herald.

——There has been a very pronounced division among republicans upon the action to be taken toward the tariff during the next session of congress. The Babcock element seems determined to remove the tariff from trust-protected goods. The Hanna crowd is equally determined that there shall be no tampering with the Dingley measure. These two cliques are indulging in a furious tub-slinging contest. The democrats are as one in favor of tariff reform.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

DANGEROUS AND VICIOUS.

The Hanna-Frye Ship Subsidy Bill Right in Line with Robber Trusts.

Wherever you find an honest newspaper, free from the control of the monopolists, it is opposed to the Hanna-Frye ship subsidy bill. The Philadelphia North American says of it: "In spite of his failure to persuade or to bully the senate into passing his ship subsidy bill last winter, Senator Frye has summoned some of his friends to meet him in Boston the latter part of this month for the purpose of laying plans for a fresh assault on the United States treasury.

"If the republicans of the last congress had been in favor of the policy of paying $9,000,000 a year to half a score of ship owners, the Frye bill would have been a law before now. As a matter of fact, Senator Frye lost ground the more he labored. He was never able even to bring his bill to a vote, and there was open satisfaction among some of the republican senators at his discomfiture. The bill was so vicious in principle and so dangerous in tendency, opening the way, as it did, for a succession of special bounty schemes that party leaders, while courageously silent in debate, felt thankful that they had been saved from a serious political blunder.

"Discussion of the provisions of the Frye bill has thoroughly informed the public of its real purpose. A renewal of the attempt to push it through congress will be a dangerous experiment. Against this active influence of the clique of favored individuals who hope to be made beneficiaries of the government will be arrayed the great mass of honest public opinion which resents the singling out of a small number of profitable concerns for special regard at the expense of all the taxpayers. Senator Frye is doing the republican party a great disservice by endeavoring to foist upon it in the guise of general legislation a bill drawn in the interests of a bare handful of prosperous ship owners."

SOME BRYAN TRUTHS.

Texts for National Life Which Should Be Pondered by the Republicans.

William J. Bryan, in his late speech at Galesburg, Ill., told some plain truths, as he always does, that should be pondered by all his fellow citizens when he said: "Nations should be judged as we judge men. Thomas Jefferson said the same thing. Franklin elucidated the same truth when he said a nation is only a great gang. We must apply to nations the same principles as to the individual. I believe it to be right for men to be ambitious to be great and influential. There are two ways. One can try to make his neighbor think as he does. A quarrel may result. So much time will be spent in coercion that there is no good done. There is a better way—and that is to live so well, to do so well that the neighbor cannot find anything better to do. I am going to show how, as a nation we should apply this principle. I am going to give you a text for our national life. It is this: 'Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.' I know of no other way to exterminate evil. Then 'Let your light so shine.' I know of no other plan for overcoming save with good, letting your light shine. There is no philosophy outside of the Bible that will take its place. It is proper for man to be great. But how shall he be great? You republicans cannot get around the Bible. In the contention in the Bible as to who was to be chief, the answer was that he who was to be chief of all must be the servant of all. Service is the measure of greatness."

——Mark Hanna has been sowing in the republican spots of the south not dragons' teeth, but bank notes, confidently expecting them to rise up in men armed with credentials to the next republican national convention. Such votes have nominated candidates for president, but Mark ought to remember that later on they are not represented in the electoral college the right way.—Chicago Chronicle.

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

BOONE'S COMPANION.

Henry Richardson Sykes, Aged 112 Years, Passed Away at Dayton, Ky.

Newport, Ky., Sept. 12.—In the death of Henry Richmond Sykes, which occurred at Dayton, Ky., Wednesday, there passed away not only the oldest citizen of Kentucky, but probably of a dozen other states. Born in 1779 his life has been almost co-extensive with that of the United States government. He has been the cotemporary of all the great men, from Washington, Franklin, Adams, Jefferson down, to the present day. He was born near Hull, Eng. While a young lad he came to this country with his parents.

He led a sailor's life for a number of years, and upon the breaking out of the war of 1812 enlisted with the United States navy and was assigned to duty with Commodore Perry's fleet. He was with the latter at the time of his famous victory on Lake Erie, and was commended for his bravery. After the war he settled in Pennsylvania and later emigrated to the mountains of Kentucky.

He was with Daniel Boone in many of his famous encounters with the Indians, and many are the thrilling stories which he was wont to tell of the great pioneer and huntsman.

After he had become too decrepit to engage in hard manual labor he assumed the role of a rug-picker and was a familiar figure about the streets of Dayton up to within two or three years since.

JIM KELLEY KILLED.

He Was a Notorious Mountaineer Moonshiner—Shot By Charley Ison, a Mere Boy.

Mayking, Ky., Sept. 11.—Jim Kelley, the notorious mountain moonshiner, kuklux and outlaw, of Elkhorn creek, who participated in the big moonshiners' battle at Elkhorn, last January, and who killed Possessman Simeon Combs, of Knott county, was shot and killed by Charley Ison, a young man barely 20. For months Kelley had been going to the home of William Ison, a respected farmer, and abusing the family. Late Monday evening he went again, and Charley Ison, who had made preparations for him, warned him not to enter his home. Kelley refused to desist and opened fire.

About ten shots were exchanged. At length a steel ball from Ison's gun proved a fatal shot, and Kelley fell, gasping, and died ten minutes later. A number of rewards had been offered for his arrest.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13.—The tobacco market Thursday showed a slightly better tone than on Wednesday. Prices on some types were decidedly off. Little good leaf was up. Colory low grades were improved. Crop reports indicate improvement soon. In all 651 hhds. were offered, of which 501 hhds. were burley and 30 hhds. dark. Original inspection 333 hhds., reviews 98 hhds., rejections Wednesday 187 hhds.

Optioned by Britons.

Paducah, Ky., Sept. 13.—An English syndicate is reported to have obtained for $580,000 an option on the Texas lands of the Wisdom heirs. They are Mrs. George C. Wallace and Mrs. W. K. Cave, of Paducah, and Mrs. Charles Bronston, of Lexington. The land was purchased by Benjamin Wisdom, the millionaire Paducah banker, for $1.50 an acre. Several oil strikes have been made in it.

To Form State Associations.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 11.—President R. A. Jenkins, of Kentucky university, Prof. J. C. Willis, of the Lexington Bible college, and Dean T. D. Evans, of the medical branch at Louisville, held a conference here Tuesday, at which plans were perfected for organizing the 8,000 alumni of the institution into state associations.

Hanged in Effigy.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 11.—Czolgosz, the would-be assassin, was hanged in effigy here by a crowd of young boys and stoned and hooted by them. The figure was strung from a telephone post and every passerby, young or old, stopped to throw a stone before proceeding. The police made no effort to stop the fun.

Kentucky Pensioners.

Washington, Sept. 13.—The following Kentucky people were pensioned recently: Original Widows, etc.—Ella Liking, Henderson, $8; Burrilla J. Mitchell, Elener, $12; special accrued August 29, Margaret Witten, Wine Sap, $12; Mary Sweatt, Drakesboro, $8; Hester A. Sweeney, Crooks, $8.

L. & N. Earnings.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13.—The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co.'s comparative statement of estimated gross earnings for the first week in September shows a total of $589,040, an increase over the same week last year of $71,660.

Death Sentence Commuted.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 13.—Gov. Beckham commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence of Holly Strutton, who was to have been hanged at Lawrenceburg Friday for the murder of Newton Searcy.

FALL MEETING.

A Proposition Submitted for the Douglass Track at Louisville, Ky.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 12.—Mr. James J. Doughss, the owner of the Louisville trotting track, returned from a trip east Thursday.

He said he could not tell whether there would be a fall meeting at the track or not. He had been asked to state under what conditions he was willing to lease his track, and had made a definite proposition, but no answer had as yet been received. Mr. Doughss inclines to the opinion that the deal will go through, and in turf circles here it is understood that if fall races should be arranged they would be continued indefinitely, thereby turning it into a winter meeting.

OVER A GAME OF CRAPS.

A Terrible Tragedy Marks the Opening Day of the County Fair at London, Ky.

London, Ky., Sept. 12.—Opening day of the Laurel county fair was characterized by one of the bloodiest fights in the county's history, and the result is that Ed Jones, a well-known young man of this county, is dead, and Ab Early, of Corbin, is fatally wounded. Four men, Ed Jones, William Underwood, Ab Early and a man from Rockcastle county, were engaged in a crap game.

A dispute arose between Early and the Rockcastle man. Jones interceded to prevent trouble. Pistols were drawn and about a dozen shots were exchanged.

RUSH TO GET IN.

Thousands of Shares of the New Orleans Street Railway Line Are Owned in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13.—Twenty-three thousand shares of the common stock of the 13-street railway lines in New Orleans, La., the purchase and consolidation of which under one head is contemplated by Philadelphians, are owned in this city. These shares represent one-half of the total. Since the announcement of the deal being on in New Orleans a great rush has been made here to get in the local pool of 15,000 shares at $35 per share. The pool is limited and no further entries can be had.

A UNIQUE SUIT.

Continuously the Telephone Bell Rang and the Hegan Mantel Co. Sued Telephone Co.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 12.—A unique suit was filed Wednesday against the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Co. by the Hegan Mantel Co. Plaintiff claims that it had a "two-line" telephone in its place of business, being assured that a service free from defects would be rendered. It asserts that the telephone bell has been ringing continuously when there was no call for 601—the plaintiff's number—and that the annoyance and loss of time is worth $1,000, in which sum judgment is prayed.

Both Duellists Dead.

Richmond, Ky., Sept. 11.—At Niller's Creek, Estill county, Lee Scott, who operates a pile driver, and a white laborer named Tuett on L. & A. extension, quarreled and shot each other to death. Neither lived long enough to make a statement. Ther ewas only one witness to the tragedy, a man named McIntosh, who has been arrested and is in jail at Irvine.

HE ENTERS A DENIAL.

Sermon Regarding the Diminishing of Sunday Audiences.

Most encouraging to all Christian workers is this discourse of Dr. Talmage while denying the accuracy of statistics which represent Sunday audiences as diminishing. Text, Hebrews 10:25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together."

Startling statements have been made in many of the pulpits and in some of the religious newspapers. It is heard over and over again that church attendance in America is in decadence. I deny the statements by presenting some hard facts. No one will dispute the fact that there are more churches in America than ever before, one denomination averaging two new churches every day of the year. The law of demand and supply is as inexorable in the kingdom of God as it is in the world. More churches supplied argues more church privileges demanded. More banks, more bankers; more factories, more manufacturers; more ships, more importers; more churches, more attendants.

In all our cities within a few years churches have been built large enough to swallow up two or three of the old-time churches. I cannot understand with what kind of arithmetic and slate pencil a man calculates when he comes to the conclusion that church attendance in America is in decadence. Take the aggregate of the number of people who enter the house of God now and compare it with the aggregate of the people who entered the house of God 25 years ago, and the present attendance is four to one. The facts are most exhilarating instead of being depressing. That man who presents the opposite statistics must have been most unfortunate in his church acquaintance.

You are not to argue adversely because here and there a church is depleted. Churches have their day. Sometimes merchandise will entirely occupy a neighborhood and crowd out the churches and families ordinarily attendant upon them. Sometimes a church perishes through interneeine strife. But there are no facts to overthrow the statement that I have made in regard to the increasing attendance upon the house of God. Now, I am ready to admit, as every intelligent man will admit, that there are churches which have been depleted, and it is high time that a sermon be preached for the benefit of young men who are just entering the Gospel ministry and for the warning of prosperous churches as to what are the causes of decline in any case. If merchandise crowd out a church, that cannot be helped, but under all other circumstances decadence in church attendance is the fault either of the church or of the pastor.

Churches are often cleared of their audiences by the attempt to transplant the modes of the past into the present. The modes and methods of 50 years ago are no more appropriate for to-day than the modes and methods of to-day will be appropriate for 50 years hence. Dr. Kirk, Dr. McElroy, Dr. Mason, Dr. De Witt, Dr. Vermilyea and hundreds of other men just as good as they were never locked audiences, because they were abreast of the time in which they lived. People will not be interested in what we say unless we understand the spirit of the day in which we live. All the woe-begonish statistics are given by those who are trying in our time to work with the worn-out machinery of the past times. Such men might just as well throw the furnaces out of our church basements and substitute the foot stoves which our grandmothers used to carry with them to meeting, and throw out our organs and our cornets and take the old-fashioned tuning fork, striking it on the knee and then lifting it to the ear to catch the pitch of the hymn, and might as well throw out our modern pulpit forms and modern pulpits and substitute the wineglass pulpit up which the minister used to climb to the dizzy height of Mont Blanc solitariness and then go in out of sight and shut the door after him. When you can get the great masses of the people to take passage from Albany to Buffalo in stage coach or canal boat in preference to the lightning express train which does it in four hours, then you can get the great masses of the people to go to a church half a century behind the time.

The trouble begins away back in the theological seminaries. It is a shame that larger provision is not made for ministers of religion, for the sick and the aged and the infirm who have worn themselves out in the service of God. We have naval asylums and soldiers' asylums for men who fought on land and sea for our country when these men have become aged or crippled, and it is a shame that larger provision is not made for the good soldiers of Jesus Christ who have worn themselves out in battling for the Lord. But lack of provision in that respect makes a tendency to turn our theological seminaries into hospitals for sick and aged and infirm ministers. When a man begins to go down, they give him the title of D. D. by way of resuscitation. If that fails, then the tendency is to elect him to a professorship in some theological seminary. There are grand exceptions to the rule, but it is often the case that the professorate in a theological seminary is occupied by some minister of the Gospel who, not being able to preach, is set to teach others how to preach. In more cases than one the poorest speaker in the faculty is the professor of elocution. We want more wide-awake, more able-bodied, able-minded men, more enthusiastic men in our theological seminaries and in the professorates—men like Addison Alexander, who could during the week teach young men the theory of preaching and then on Sunday go into the pulpit and with the thunder and lightning of Christian eloquence show them how. What would you think of a faculty of unsuccessful merchants to train young merchants or a faculty of unsuccessful lawyers to train young lawyers? It is often the case that theological seminaries cut a man and clip him and square him and mold him and bore him and twist him until all the individual is gone out of him and he is only a poor copy of a man who was elected to a professorate because he could not preach. We want less deadwood in the theological seminaries and more flaming evangels.

At a meeting of the general assembly of the Presoyterian church of the United States a clergyman accustomed on the Sabbath to preach to an audience of 200 or 300 people, in an audience room that could hold 1,500, was appointed to preach a sermon on how to reach the masses. I am told the incongruity was too much for the risibilities of many of the clergy in the audience. Now, a young man coming out from such bedwarfing influences, how can he enter into the wants and the woes and the sympathies of the people who want on the Lord's day a practical Gospel that will help them all the week and help them forever?

Young ministers are told they must preach Christ and Him crucified. Yes, but not as an abstraction. Many a minister has preached Christ and Him crucified in such a way that he preached an audience of 500 down to 200, and from 200 to 100, and from 100 to 50, and from 50 to 20, and on down until there was little left save the sexton, who was paid to stay until the service was over and lock up. There is a great deal of cant about Christ and Him crucified. It is not Christ and Him crucified as an abstraction, but as an Omnipotent sympathy applied to all the wants and woes of our immortal nature—a Christ who will help us in every domestic, social, financial, political, national struggle—a Christ for the parlor, a Christ for the nursery, a Christ for the kitchen, a Christ for the barn, a Christ for the street, a Christ for the store, a Christ for the banking house, a Christ for the factory, a Christ for the congressional assembly, a Christ for the courtroom, a Christ for every trial and every emergency and ever perturbation.

It is often the case that the difficulty begins clear back in the home circle with misapprehension as to the which child ought to be consecrated to the ministry. John is a keen, bright boy. He is good at a bargain. When he trades at school, he always gets the best of it. Make him a merchant. He will soon gather a fortune and go right up to take his place among the commercial princes. George has great cerebral development. Phrenologically, language is large. Make him a lawyer. He will argue his way to the front, and he will take his place among the Mansfields and the Storys. Henry has a large girth at the chest and is military in his step and bearing. Send him to West Point. We shall see him yet a brigadier general. William is fond of sketching ships, and he knows as much about a vessel as an old sailor. Make him a shipbuilder. The vessel that he builds will successfully wrestle with the Caribbean whirlwind. Aleck is not very well. He has never had very good digestion. Since that last malarial attack his spleen is enlarged. He has a morbid way of looking at things. He will sit for hours looking at one figure in the carpet. His manners are so mild, so soft, so gentle, so affectionate, so Heavenly, and he cries easily. Make him a minister. Now, my friends, that is a great mistake. If you want to consecrate one of your sons to the Gospel ministry, take the one widest awake, the brawniest, the most brilliant, the most irresistible, the most potent. A tremendous work is ours before a profession whose one object is to lift the nations toward God and prepare them for Heaven.

Ah, my friends, churches will be largely attended just in proportion as we ministers can meet their wants, meet their sufferings, meet their bereavements and meet their sympathies. If there be a church with small help, small audience, medium help, medium audience; large help, large audience. If there be a family in a city and three depots of bread and one depot has 100 loaves and another 500 loaves and another depot 10,000 loaves, the depot that has 100 loaves will have applicants, the depot that has 500 loaves will have far more applicants, the depot that has 10,000 loaves will have throngs, throngs, throngs.

Oh, my brethren in the Christian ministry, we must somehow get our shoulders under the burden of the people on the Lord's day and give them a good stout lift, and we can do it. We have it all our own way. It is a great pity if with the floor clear and no interruption, we cannot during the course of an hour get our hymn or our prayer or our sermon under such momentum we can by the help of God, lift the people, body, mind and soul, clear out of their sins, temptations and troubles.

We must make our churches magnets to draw the people thereunto, so that a man will feel uneasy if he does not go to church, saying: "I wish I had gone this morning. I wonder if I can't dress yet and get there in time. It is 11 o'clock; now they are singing. It is half past 11; now they are preaching. I wonder when the folks will be home to tell us what was said, what has been going on." When the impression is confirmed that our churches, by architecture, by music, by sociability and by sermon, shall be made the most attractive place on earth, then we will want twice as many churches as we have now, twice as large, and then they will not half accommodate the people.

I say to the young men who are entering the ministry, we must put on more force, more energy and into our religious services more vivacity if we want the people to come. You look into a church court of any denomination of Christians. First you will find the men of large common sense and earnest look. The education of their minds, the piety of their hearts, the holiness of their lives, qualify them for their work. Then you will find in every church court of every denomination a gropy of men who utterly amaze you with the fact that such semi-imbecility can get any pulpits to preach in! Those are the men who give forlorn statistics about church decadence. Frogs never croak in running waters; always in stagnunt. But I say to all Christian workers, to all Sunday school teachers, to all evangelists, to all ministers of the Gospel, if we want our Sunday schools and our prayer meetings and our churches to gather the people we must freshen up.

Why should we go away to get an illustration of the vicarious suffering of Jesus Christ when at Bloomfield, N. J., two little children were walking on the rail track and a train was coming; but they were on a bridge of trestlework, and the little girl took her brother and let him down through the trestlework as gently as she could toward the water, very carefully and lovingly and cautiously, so that he might not be hurt in the fall and might be picked up by those who were standing near by; while doing that the train struck her, and hardly enough of her body was left to gather into a funeral casket? What was that? Vicarious suffering. Like Christ. Pang for others. Woe for others. Suffering for others. Death for others. What is the use of our going away off to find an illustration in past ages when in Michigan a mail carrier on horseback, riding on, pursued by those flames which had swept over a hundred miles, saw an old man by the roadside, dismounted, helped the old man on the horse, saying: "Now, whip up and get away?" The old man got away, but the mail carrier perished. Just like Christ dismounting from the glories of Heaven to put us on the way of deliverance, then falling back in the flames of sacrifice for others. Pang for others. Woe for others. Death for others. Vicarious suffering. What is the use of our going away off in ancient history to find an illustration of the fact that it is dangerous to defy God when in the Adirondacks I saw a flash of lightning and bolt so vivid I said: "That struck something very near?" A few hours afterward we found that two farmers that Monday morning had been seated under a tree, the one boasting how that the day before—on the Lord's day—he had got his hay in and so cheated the Lord out of that part of the time anyhow, and both of them laughing over the achievement by which they had wronged the Lord of His holy day, when the lightning struck one dead instantly, and the other had been two weeks in bed when we left the Adirondacks and has become an invalid, I suppose, for life. He did not make as much out of the Lord as he thought he did. Was it any less an illustration for my soul because I met the clergyman on his way home from the funeral, and he told me of the facts and said the body of the man who had been destroyed was black with the electricity?

O Christian workers, we have got to freshen up. What is the use of our going back in the Christian classics to find an illustration of the victorious Christian deathbed when my personal friend, Alfred Cookman, a few years ago went away in as imperial grandeur as did Edward Payson? Is it any less an illustration to me and to you because I met him a few weeks before in front of Trinity church, Broadway, and I said: "Cookman, you look as if you were working too hard?" Where in all the classics is there such a story as that of Cookman when, in his last moment, he cried: "I am sweeping through the gates washed in the blood of the Lamb?"

Oh, fellow Christian workers, what is the use of our being stale and obsolete and neglect when all around us are these evidences of God's grace, God's deliverance, God's mercy and God's wisdom? We have got to freshen up in our sermons, freshen up in our songs, freshen up in our zeal, freshen up in our consecration, and if we do it, my brethren and sisters, we will no more have to coax people to come to church than if you throw corn on the ground you have to coax pigeons to come and eat it, no more than you would have to coax a tired horse to eat oats you throw in his manger. Yes, we must freshen up in our Sunday schools and in our prayer meetings and in our pulpits.

It is high time that the church of God stopped writing apologies for the church. Let the men who are on the outside, who despise religion, write the apologies. If any people do not want the church, they need not have it. It is a free country. If any man does not want the Gospel, he need not have it. It is a free country. But you go out, O people of God, and give the Gospel to the millions of America who do want it! It is high time to stop skirmishing and bring on a general engagement. I want to live to see the Armageddon, all the armies of Heaven and hell in battle array, for I know our conqueror on the white horse will gain the day. Let the church of God be devoted to nothing else, but go right on to this conquest.

Horace Never Did.

The class in Latin was reading from Horace's odes some of those old pastorals that lead the metropolitan pupil to believe there is only one pleasure in turning the soil, tending sheep and milking cows in winter. The lesson that day included a poem of the peasant, his good wife, their cozy home and an observation on the duties of the day. The poem had spoken of congealed streams, indicating a winter night, and then led the peasant to his stable, where he engaged in milking. The translation of a line was: "How sweet to press the distended udder of the kine." "What do you think of the construction of that line, Mr. Blank?" asked the instructor of a country youth. "Well, I am very certain Horace never milked a cow on a winter's night or he would have left that out or put it in his satires."—Troy Times.

Australian Mail's Record Trip.

The most important mail that has left Australia in years for London recently made a record-breaking trip. The mail consisted of 347 sacks and contained many documents for the British parliament. At Sidney it was put on board the steamer Ventura, a steamship sailing under the American flag and built only last year for the Oceanic Steamship company at the Cramps shipyard in Philadelphia. The trip across the Pacific occupied just 21 days, the former time having been 26 days. From San Francisco the mail was hurried by the fastest fast trains on the Southern Pacific (Ogden line), Union Pacific, and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroads, but arrived in Chicago too late to connect with the Perunal train of the Lake Shore and New York Central, which is a 24-hour train from Chicago to New York. A special train was made up and attached to one of the fastest engines on the Lake Shore line. The regular train was overtaken at Toledo, and the hour and a half lost time was made up. At Buffalo the regular train was made into two sections by the New York Central with the mail cars, including the Australian mail, in the first section. New York was reached three minutes ahead of schedule time. At New York the mail was delivered to the Campania and that vessel left on regular time. Barring accidents or unusual delays it will be delivered in England in several days shorter time than ever before.

Big Forgery of Railroad Tickets.

As a result of the arrest, on August 15, of a ticket broker's concern at St. Louis, charged with swindling a customer, a gigantic railroad ticket counterfeiting scheme was uncovered. After the arrest of the brokers their office was ransacked and an immense number of tickets and passes found. It was almost impossible to place an estimate on the value of the tickets recovered, but it is stated by railroad authorities that $50,000 would be a conservative figure. It is believed that many of the tickets and passes were forged.

At Buffalo a number of ticket scalpers have already been lodged in jail on account of fraudulent tickets, because the forgery of railroad tickets. These instances are numerous the public should take pains to see that their tickets are purchased only at the authorized offices of transportation lines. This avoids all complication and trouble to the passenger and assures him that the railroad tickets purchased are valid and will be honored as printed.—Exchange.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS

Quickly Develops Into Bright's Disease.

(PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH WHEREVER LOCATED.)

John Herziger, son of Alderman Herziger, of Neenah, Wis., and Vice President of the Neenah Young Men's Club, writes in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, the following:

"After suffering for two years with kidney trouble I received relief and a cure from using your wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"For months I was unable to work on account of a severe pain in my back, and when I was able to do anything I was in pain and distressed most of the time.

"Hearing so much of the good results people had obtained through the use of Peruna I determined to give it a trial and it was a lucky day for me when I did so. I am well now and it only took a few bottles of Peruna."—John Herziger, 307 Commercial street, Neenah, Wis.

Two years suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, unable to work on account of the severe pain; could find no relief from medicine; gave Peruna a trial and was promptly cured—such was the experience of John Herziger, of Wisconsin.

This experience has been repeated many times. Not only in Wisconsin but in every state in the Union. It was indeed a lucky day for this young man when his attention was called to Peruna. What would have been the result had he continued suffering on and fooling away precious time with other remedies, no man can tell. But it is almost certain that it would have ended in incurable Bright's disease of the kidneys, which sooner or later would have proved fatal.

Congressman Bankhead's Statement.

Congressman J. H. Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the most influential members of the House of Representatives, in a letter written from Washington, D. C. gives his indorsement to he great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in he following words:

"Your Peruna is one of the best medicines I ever tried, and no family should be without your remarkable remedy. As a tonic and a catarrh cure I know of nothing better."—J. H. Bankhead.

Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina No. 3422 I. O. O. F., 205 High St., Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought that the climate would cure me but found that I was mistaken, but what the climate could not do Peruna could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, bladder and kidney trouble through the use of Peruna and it has a host of friends in this city."—Samuel R. Sprecher.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

MIRACLES OF TODAY

The Wonderful Stories of Two People Saved from Horrible Death

It probably never occurred before that two people horribly afflicted in entirely different ways, and living far apart, were miraculously rescued from the very jaws of death, by the same means, and almost at the same time. The stories of George Herniman, of Buffalo, and Mrs. George W. Sharp, of Washington, Kan., read like the wonders of Divine interference. Let them tell their experience in their own plain, truthful language:

Buffalo, N. Y., June 16—(Special).—I write to tell you how much Cascarets Candy Cathartic have done for me in the past year, and you may send any or all of the people of Western New York to me and use my name as strongly as you wish, for I know that they have saved my life. I had an injury to my spine and the spinal cord was hurt, and of course was paralyzed from the hips down. The doctors could not move my bowels, saying that that they would never move again, and one of the doctors—my own cousin—an army surgeon, said a syringe could not be used on account of the large bone being broken and bad; and they also said that I could not live six months, if that long. Well, thanks to God and your candy cathartic Cascarets, I sit here four years later in my wheel chair and write this to you. I can walk for five minutes on crutches, and say that your Cascarets have saved my life, and, with old Mother Nature's help, are curing me. I have used one 10c. box a week for two and one-half years. But my case is one in 100,000 to recover at all; and I had the best of doctors, too, all saying the same thing—no hope. But we fooled them all this time.
—George W. Herniman, 88 Boyd St., Buffalo, N.Y.

Washington, Kan., June 1—(Special).—I had constipation of the worst nature for years. Medicine had no effect upon my stomach, and my stomach was in such a condition from purgatives that I could not take food. I was taken to a hospital and my bowels were operated upon for constipation. I did not get any better going through that terrible operation. My bowels were dead—no action at all—and the doctors gave me up. I could not eat anything but stale bread and water, literally starving to death. Lost over 100 pounds and was a living skeleton. After trying everything else I gave Cascarets a trial, not thinking they would help me. But they did right away. I commenced to eat and sleep, and from that on I could get out of bed and then got so I could go out riding—something I had not done for over three years. Now I do all my work. My friends just marvel; they say they never saw such a miracle. I tell them Cascarets did it, and they all want them. I weighed 80 pounds when I commenced taking Cascarets and now I weigh 170.
—Mrs. George W. Sharp.

No one should wait until such a terrible affliction comes upon him or her, but use Cascarets always to keep the bowels and internal organs gently and naturally active. All druggists sell Cascarets, the sweet, aromatic, never-griping candy cathartic, 10c., 25c., 50c. a box.

Was With Daniel Boone.

The following is from the daily Enquirer of the 12th inst.

"In the death of Henry Richmond Sykes, which occurred at Dayton, Ky., yesterday, there passed away not only the oldest citizen of Kentucky, but probably of a dozen other states. Born in 1779, his life has been almost coextensive with that of the United States Government. He has been the co-temporary of all the great men, from Washington, Franklin, Adams and Jefferson down, to the present day. He was born near Hull, England. While a young lad he came to this country with his parents.

"He led a sailor's life for a number of years, and upon the breaking out of the war of 1812 enlisted with the United States Navy and was assigned to duty with Commodore Perry's fleet. He was with the latter at the time of his famous victory on Lake Erie, and was commended for his bravery.

"After the war he settled in Pennsylvania and later emigrated to the mountains of Kentucky.

"He was with Daniel Boone in many of his famous encounters with the Indians, and many are the thrilling stories which he was wont to tell of the great pioneer and huntsman.

"Later he removed to Newport, Ky., and while there was employed by Colonel Al Berry, "Dady" Hayman and other well known men. About a half century ago he removed to Dayton Ky., and was employed as general factotum by Colonel Jesse McArthur, Colonel George E. Currie and others. The accompanying portrait was taken at the age of 105 years, and the dog in the picture was Colonel Currie's.

"After he had become too decrepit to engage in hard manural labor he assumed the role of a rag-picker and was a familiar figure about the streets of Dayton up to within two or three years since.

"His death occurred at 1 p. m. yesterday and resulted from strangulation following drinking coffee which was being administered to him by his stepdaughter, Mrs. Rebecca Jefferies."

Since the Sampson-Schley controversy has grown acute again there has been considerable reference to Proctor Knott's "rabbit story" in connection with the cred it for the victory at Santiago. For the benefit of those who do not recall the story as first printed in the News it is here reproduced:

"Ex Gov. Proctor Knott and John Yerkes were discussing the claims of Sampson and Schley to the credit of smashing Cervera at Santiago. Mr. Yerkes took the ground that all the honor of that memorable conflict belong to Admiral Sampson and was inclined to entirely ignore Commodore Schley's part in the affair. The Governor listened until his companion had finished, and then with that characteristic twinkle in his eye said: "My dear sir, it is exceeding gratifying to me to hear you take the position you have in this matter. It is like a balm to my conscience and settles a point that has worried me many a day. I was walking through the woods once with a boy friend of mine when we saw a rabbit run into a sinkhole. We stood around the hole awhile; then I told the boy to keep watch until I went to get some fire to smoke the rabbit out. When I returned the boy had the rabbit. I took it away from him, claiming that it belonged to me because I told him to catch it if it came out. That was over fifty years ago, and you are the first man who has ever agreed with me that the rabbit was mine. I feel now that I was right in taking it and my conscience is at rest." Mr Yerkes looked solemn for a few moments, then smiled a feeble smile and changed the subject.

A young man of Glencoe, Okla. Ter., is offering 3,000 tickets on himself as husband, which he is selling at $5 each, and it is said they are going like hot cakes. This is how he explains his scheme: "By selling 3,000 chances for $5 each, it will bring me $15,000, which is a sufficient sum of money to attract any young woman desirous of marrying. I may not get the prettiest girl in the country, but I will get one, I am sure, who is anxious to marry me. I sell numbers for $5 and agree when paid for the number to marry the holder of said number provided she draws the lucky number at the raffle. I will have the raffle conducted on fair and square means, by parties entirely disinterested in it. Numbers from 1 to 3,000 will be placed in a box, and a blindfolded party will draw out one number. The girl holding the similar number shall become my wife. I will marry her as soon as she is ready. The money will be invested so as to support us handsomely. I shall take the bride on an extended wedding trip.

Buffalo Bill's show at Lawrenceburg, last Monday, gathered in considerable Boone county money. The attendance from this side of the river was very large, all of which goes to show that people like a circus.

Around the altar were banks of ferns and palms and other plants which formed a most beautiful background for the marriage ceremony. A few minutes after 2:30 p. m., as the sweet strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Mrs. VanLandingham, fell upon the ears of the assembled guests, the bridal party, consisting of the bridesmaid, Miss Emma Gardner, and the best man, Mr. John Schneider, and Miss May on the arm of her intended, came in and took their places in front of the altar, where they were met by Rev. Jones, who officiated in a very pretty and impressive ceremoney. STOPS PAIN

Athens, Tenn., Jan. 27, 1901.
Ever since the first appearance of my menses they were very irregular and I suffered with great pain in my hips, back, stomach and legs, with terrible bearing down pains in the abdomen. During the past month I have been taking Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and I passed the monthly period without pain for the first time in years. NANNIE DAVIS.

What is life worth to a woman suffering like Nannie Davis suffered? Yet there are women in thousands of homes to-day who are bearing those terrible menstrual pains in silence. If you are one of these we want to say that this same will bring you permanent relief. Console yourself with the knowledge that 1,000,000 women have been completely cured by Wine of Cardui. These women suffered from leucorrhoea, irregular menses, headache, backache, and bearing down pains. Wine of Cardui will stop all these aches and pains for you. Purchase a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui to-day and take it in the privacy of your home.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1901. NO. 49.

THE next session of the Legislature will be rather a busy one. Besides the general run of business a U. S. Senator will be to elect.

HEAVY rains, followed by a drop in temperature, did much damage in portions of Alabama and North and South Carolina last week.

THE sun was scheduled to cross the line yesterday, making the equinoctial storm due, and all joined in the prayer that it inaugurate a change in the weather.

EDITOR NEWLON, of the Owen Herald, fell when getting off of a street car in Cincinnati, one day last week, and received an ugly cut on his head. Nothing serious, though.

MUCH interest is being taken in official circles in Washington in the meeting of foreign diplomats in Brussels to devise international means for suppressing anarchy.

IT begins to look like a court of inquiry will be necessary to determine whether the surgeons and doctors who treated President McKinley knew anything about the wounds.

FROM the eulogies of some of the federal office holders, one not familiar with the facts, would think that Roosevelt instead of McKinley was the victim of the assassin's bullet.

"The allied Third party" is to be the outgrowth of the conferences of seven reform parties in Kansas City. An address outlining the purposes and policies agreed upon is to be issued.

EDITOR WESTOVER, of Williamstown, read the riot act to his delinquent subscribers, last week. After the 7th of next month the subscriber who "no payee no takee" the Courier, so says the affable editor.

IT is the general belief that there is not enough new corn in this county to fatten the meat necessary for home consumption during the next twelve months. Such a thing has not happened before in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

JUST who will be the President's confidential political advisers in Kentucky is a much mooted question, but it is very reasonable to suppose that W. O. Bradley will occupy that position in as much as he was a Roosevelt admirer for the Presidency no further back than 1896. It may be that the g. o. p. will get a general shaking up in Kentucky in the next few months.

THE new President entered upon the duties of his office in a quiet, business like manner, and the machinery of government moved along without a jar. Such a result can only be in a government where the several departments form one whole, most admirably balanced. The convention of wisdom that organized this government has never been equaled in governmental affairs in this world, and probably will never be.

SENATOR DEBOE and Collector Sapp, of Louisville, are not certain of a stand-in with President Roosevelt. Collector Sapp has been rather careless about the observation of Civil Service rules applicable to his office, much complaint having been made of him on that account, and for that reason it is believed by those in his party who want to see him relieved of office, that the President, who has a record as an ardent admirer of Civil Service, will give him the bounce.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT says he will know no north, no south, no east, no west in the discharge of the duties of his office. He claims kin with every section of the country, and men of merit, regardless of geographical location are the kind he wants to make his appointments from among. He has been considered as a radical civil service reformer in the past, and his party is now guessing as to what he will do in that respect, having been placed in a position where he can make prominent his notions in regard to that law.

No good will come to the Democratic party in this State from the joint discussions between the four candidates for United States Senator. Call them off—they will engender discensions.

SMALL jealousies prompt many unreasonable contentious among men, as is shown by the talk of some of the Buffalo undertakers, who claim that the undertaker who prepared President McKinley's remains for burial did a bad job of embalming. This is an age of critics.

IN many of the counties in the State the tobacco crop is said to be the largest in the last twenty years. In Russell county it is said the crop will average 300 lbs. heavier to the acre than it did last eason, and the tobacco growers in that section are finding it a problem to secure house room for the crop as it is cut. It is said the quality is unusually good.

PROSPECTING for oil is being conducted in every direction in Kentucky, and there is no reason why Boone should not be given a chance to show what she can produce along that line. There are some localities in this county where a substance resembling oil has been known to exist for a long time, but it was never given any special attention by the owners of the land, nor has an expert ever seen it. No doubt the indications of the existence of oil in Boone are as pronounced as they are in some of the neighboring counties in which large arears of territory have been leased for prospecting purposes. An expert might do well to come to this county and look over the land.

While 250 million trees were sold by nurserymen last spring, only 150 million are alive today, including all planted by fruit growers in past years. This is as nearly as I can quote Prof. Bailey's first words before the recent Nurserymen's association at Niagara Falls, says a correspondent of Green's Fruit grower. I quote from memory and may not be quite accurate in figures in every instance. Only one tree in sixteen lives at all. Only one in five lives to yield any fruit. Only one in 100 that lives gives anything like good results. The loss of seeds is equally as great. These facts indicate great carelessness, or lack of experience in planting trees or seeds yet the loss is no greater than that which seems to occur to the usual forces of nature, though in nature there is no waste of substance.

The robin hatches, say five young birds each season. If all the young lived, in ten years the increase from one pair of birds would amount to 50,000 birds; thus the world would be overrun with robins.

In nature not one seed in one thousand lives to make a plant or tree, and of those that live not one in 100 ever reach the blossoming stage. Not one fish egg of 1,000 hatches, and but few that hatch survive long enough to reach mature size. If all the fish eggs hatched and all young fishes lived the waters of the earth would become solid with fish, so as to impede navigation.

It is not the fault of the nurserymen that more trees sold and planted do not live to produce abundant harvests of fine fruit. Many people who plant trees have not the experience necessary to make them live and thrive. Many planters do not do as well as they know how to do in planting trees. If every planter made all of his trees live and produce as they might the markets would be flooded. John Burrows considers the personality of each tree and vine. As we passed over his place he would remark: "This tree or vine needs more pruning, this vine was pruned too closely, that one needs spraying, the other needs having its fruit thinned," etc. He knows the personal need of each. Time sifts out all dross, hence nurseymen should be watchful. If poor varieties are sold they will be discarded later. If you sell poor trees your trade will diminish. The careless planting of trees by the orchardist creates a larger demand from nurserymen. While it is your duty to instruct the fruit grower who plants your products you are not responsible if that man neglects your advice.

The Cream.

Butter for storage must be made pretty dry.

An easily fattened cow is usually a poor milker.

A persistent milker is made very largely the first season.

In the dairy the most profitable cow is the one that is the best mother.

A heifer which has no calf until three years old rarely makes a good milker.

A good point in a dairy cow is to have the milking habit well established.

Dairying to be made profitable can no longer combine beef and milk production.

Vigor in a dairy cow is the result of comfort, good feeding and the developing of dairy qualities.

The heifer intended for the dairy should be fed from first to last, to promote growth and not fat forming.

The best foods to make blood are the best for milk production, and the cows to make good milk must have good blood.

It is best to have a cow that understands one branch of business thoroughly rather than an all purpose animal.

Cows will often change from day to day in the amount of solids in their milk and especially in the amount of butter fat.

Feed liberally, but do not feed a poor cow ten years in order to sell her for beef at the end of that time, sell her when thirty months old.

The first year of milking is the proper time to lay the foundation for a persistent milker, if delayed beyond this it will hardly prove successful.

The outside appearance of a package has some influence on the same of the contents. A neat looking package makes a favorable impression on the customer.

There should be no guess work in butter making, the work should be done by a regular system. It is the slipshod manner of work that causes so much poor butter.

Butter will never grain finely in coming if the fat globules have been previously injured by overheating of the cream or too much violence displayed in the churning.

Crop and Stock.

Corn fodder that is not cut down until the leaves are yellow, and then left all winter in the field, where the shocks are blown over and the fodder exposed to rains and frosts, is usually worth nothing, and instead of so doing it will be better to haul it to the barnyard and let the cattle pick it over before it loses value; but if the fodder is cut when somewhat green, and cared for, the farmer will find that it is as valuable as grain. There is an annual enormous loss in this country which should not occur.

Talking about feeding hens, several years ago, a relative sent me in September, 24 pullets, Red and White Leghorns crossed. I built a 10x12 shed-roof house, then commenced to speculate on the egg question. I gave them two quarts shorts, one quart meal and some scraps (if I had them); this was scalded for morning, and at night they got two quarts mixed grain. On October 10 the first egg hove in sight and from that on, those pullets just made a business of shelling out hen fruit, until the 10th of the following October, then quit. Those 24 pullets laid 4,908 eggs during the year, or 17 per hen for each month, with an average of 204½ for the year. That was before I heard this agitation about 200-egg hens, but I have been trying every year since to get the same kind of layers. I now have some White Wyandottes that have set us puffing again. But as I remarked before, there are 'pints again these pints,' and a good one is to stick to yours if it is a good one; but if you are wrong, make a change! Go at it again don't lose your faith in the good old hen!—Dee, in Poultry Monthly.

The memorial address of William J. Bryan was especially marked by evidences of deep sincerity, strong emotion and good taste. The words of Mr. Bryan were in remarkable contrast with the narrow spirit of the few partisans who left the hall because a Republican had not been selected to make the address.—Phil. Record.

Errors in Horseshoeing.

There are three or four most irrational practices followed by many country blacksmiths in the shoeing of horses that cannot be too strongly condemned.

First, the cutting away of the frog, which is done by a majority of the country smiths, is a most positive injury to the foot and can have no reasonable argument in its favor. The frog is the natural cushion and expander of the hoof and was placed there by an allwise Creator. To cut it out means not only to rob the foot of the cushion that shouldsoften the concussion of every step, but to allow the foot to contract at the heel and become misshapen and crippled.

Another mistaken idea is that the sole of the foot should be thinned till it will yield to the pressure of the thumbs. The sole proper should never be touched by the knife. All loose scale may be trimmed away, but the knife should never cut either the sole or the frog. All trimming on the bottom of the foot should be done by the rasp, which will trim the edges and not the sole.

Cutting of a frog or sole in any way works an injury by causing the tissues to shrink and become hard and dry. A frog that has been trimmed by the knife often dries so as to become as detrimental to the foot as a stone or other foreign body. There is never any good excuse for touching the knife to a healthy frog. It will wear away fast enough if let alone. The writer never saw one that was too large.

Hot fitting of shoes to horses feet should not be allowed by the horse's owner. While it may be possible, as claimed by some horseshoers, that a better fit is obtained in this way, and that no real harm is done to the foot if properly trimmed after touching with the hot shoe, it is also possible that a good fit may be obtained by a cold fitting, and the latter process is certainly safer. If the foot be perfectly leveled with the rasp, and the shoe be made perfectly level, there is no trouble about making a fit.

A very common fault among horseshoers is the habit of setting a shoe a little to far back on the foot and then rasping off the toe to meet the front of the shoe. The trimming of the hoof should all be done from the bottom of the foot before the shoe is set. The outside of the hoof should not be touched by the rasp, except to smooth off any slivers around the edge. The common practice of rasping the entire outer surface of the hoof after setting the shoe should never be allowed, as it destroys the natural coating of varnish with which every healthy hoof is covered, and allows it to become dry and brittle.—Prof. J. M. Drew, in Farm Blacksmithing.

Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was of a party that inetnded making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Lacyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

An international exposition is projected at St. Louis for 1903. From its prospectus it promises to be a very comprehensive affair. We quote a single paragraph: "It will comprehend man in his full twentieth century development, exhibiting not alone his material, but his social advancement. It will show humanity at rest as well as at work, presenting man in his hours of recreation, his excercises, his games and his sports. It will illustrate the modern home with the infinity of comforts and conveniences that have been brought into common use within the century the St. Louis World's Fair will commemorate."

We have before us a portion of a daybook kept by a Burlington grocer in 1871, from which we quote the then prices of some of the staple articles: Bacon, 13½ cents a pound; meal, 80 cents a bushel; molasses, 80 cents a gallon; coal oil, 35 cents a gallon; coffee, 25 cents a pound; flour, $8 a barrel; dem. sugar, 7 pounds for $1; gran. sugar 6½ pounds for $1.

One reason for the continued low price of wool is well stated in the announcement of one of the leading commission houses, as follows: "The failure of prices to advance to the point which reasonable expectation warranted, is probably largely owing to the fact that almost the whole wool clip of this year has come to the market at once, thus making a relatively large stock, of which much was available for immediate sale.

One afternoon last week as Mrs. Edgar Cropper was driving along the pike near G. T. Gaines', her horse started to turn from the pike into the road that leads to Woolper creek, and in her endeavor to prevent it doing so she pulled the wrong line, drawing the horse and on to a steep bank, upsetting the buggy and throwing her out. The horse became frightened and ran with the buggy which was injured considerably. Luckily Mrs. Cropper was not hurt.

The habit of speaking of the general purpose cow sometimes leads people into classing with this animal the no-purpose cow. This latter animal is in evidence on a great many farms and it has done more toward injuring dairy and the cattle business than anything else. The no-purpose cow is much like the mongrel dog or the backyard fowl. Neither has any particular breed possibilities or capabilities. They exist because they are the products of a lazy, careless system. They do not help their owner much, but tend to discourage him with his life.

The no-purpose cow is the product of indifferent systems of farming, and it is an animal which is neither good for milk nor beef. She is usually a good feeder, an excellent feeder in fact, but not much of a producer. It is astonishing sometimes to know where the food goes which she eats, for it is converted into neither fat, flesh nor milk. It must make bone, muscle or sinew, for the flesh of the animal is generally tough when eaten.

Now the general purpose cow is a cross or type intermediate between the beef and dairy type. This animal, strictly speaking, is the product of careful and good breeding, and is not the outcome of chance or accident. She has been bred for a dual purpose and if she comes up to anticipations she is a good milker and a good beef producer. While not as good as the best beef animals or the finest dairy cows in producing flesh or milk, she nevertheless possesses the ability to partake of each to a considerable degree. She is eminently adapted to the general farmer who wishes milk, and later a fat cow for the shambles, with calves which will produce good veal in a short time from birth. It may not be generally known, but it is more difficult to raise such an animal than a typical beef or dairy cow. The danger, however, comes in with the no-purpose cow. In trying to secure a good general purpose animal we may stumble upon the former. This should be avoided in every possible way, for the investment would prove as unsatisfactory as any possibly could on the farm.—E. P. Smith in Indiana Farmer.

Dr. George F. Shrady, of New York, boldly and freely criticizes the surgeons who attended Mr. McKinley. Dr. Shrady writes editorially on "The Revelations of the Autopsy" in the New York Medical Record. A NATION IN SORROW

Millions Paid Tribute of Respect and Love to the Dead President.

Journey From Buffalo to Washington Was Made Through a Living Lane of Bared Heads.

Thousands of His Friends Viewed the Remains as They Lay in State in the Court House at Canton, O.

The Funeral Procession to the Cemetery Was About One and One-Half Miles in Length.

Along the Route of the March Was An Almost Unbroken Line of Soldiers and on All Intersecting Streets Militiamen Were Posted.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Through a living lane of bare-headed people stretching from Buffalo over 300 miles, was borne down into the broad valley of the Susquehanna, on the Marble City on the banks of the Delaware, the body of the nation's martyred president Monday made his last journey to the seat of government over which he presided for four and one-half years. The whole country within a few hours drained its population at the sides of the line over which the funeral train passed. The thin lines through the mountains and the sparsely settled districts thickened at the little hamlets, covered acres in towns, suddenly grew into the proportions of respectable cities and were congested into vast multitudes in the larger cities. Work was suspended and business at the end of it. Taken all together the journey home was the most complete demonstration of universal personal sorrow since Lincoln was borne to his grave. Every one of those who came to view the remains to attribute to the dead had an opportunity to catch a glimpse of the flag-covered bier only for a few seconds, as the observation car at the rear end of the train.

When the train arrived the casket was removed from the observation car. One of the large windows was lowered at the side and a platform and runway to the ground was slipped out through the opening and tenderly received upon the bent shoulders of the body bearers, the pall bearers men from Fort McHenry, Md., were on the right and four sailors on the left. Straightening themselves under the short burden they walked slowly towards the hearse. Before the casket marched the officers, Maj. Parker, Col. Bingham, Capt. Gilmore and Maj. MacAuley, and that order, while the others stood aside and in the entrance stood with uncovered heads, the remains were carried to Sixth street and placed in the hearse. As the casket emerged a bugle note rose clearly and "taps" rang out. That was the only subject that broke the dead silence. Just beyond the entrance to the station President Roosevelt and the members of the cabinet had paused and had taken station so as to leave a broad space for the general cortege.

The hearse bearing the third martyred president quickly moved away and was followed at once by President Roosevelt and those accompanying him. In the procession to view the remains Mr. Roosevelt were Secretaries Hay and Gage and Capt. Cowles, Secretaries Root and Hitchcock, Attorney General Knox and Postmaster General Smith followed in another carriage, while Secretary Wilson, Secretary Cortelyou, Senator Penrose and Senators Hanna and Fairbanks drove behind in other carriages. The citizens coming from Buffalo, officers of the army and navy and friends followed.

The military were ready in the morning. As the procession swept from the Sixth street station into Pennsylvania avenue a deeply impressive sight was presented.

A platoon of mounted police, in command of Sergt. Matthews, led the way. Next came a delegation of G. A. R. men from the department of the Potomac, members of the Union Veteran union, and the Spanish war veterans, and then troops I and L of the 11th cavalry, from Fort Myer, Va. Right side by side were seen was the hearse, flanked on either side by the body bearers, with a detachment of regular army officers in command as rear. The carriages containing the distinguished officials were next in line, that of President Roosevelt being immediately behind the signal corps. Scattered along at different parts of the procession were groups of army and navy officers, who had informally received the body at the railroad station. It was about half past nine when the head of the procession reached the white house grounds and turned into the driveway.

It was with simple ceremony and a silence that fitted perfectly the solemnity of the occasion that the body of the late president was borne up Pennsylvania avenue to the white house and laid upon the bier in the great east room, where he had stood so often in the prime of his manhood to receive the greetings of the common people he loved better than himself.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The nation officially and with state ceremony paid its final tribute of respect and love to the memory of William McKinley.

Monday was a perfect autumn day, but Tuesday morning dawned cold, gray and dreary. The sky was overcast with low flying clouds. Nature itself seemed to be in mourning for the nation's dead. As the hours passed dashes of rain fell at intervals, but despite the inclemency of tens of thousands of sorrowing people appeared early upon the streets. Both sides of Pennsylvania avenue from the white house to the capitol were massed with an impenetrable throng of people wishing in this way to pay final tribute of love and respect for the dead. As the funeral cortege moved after it appeared representing every department of the nation's martial service and by representatives of religious and fraternal organizations passed down the broad thoroughfare to the solemn notes of the Dead March from Saul played by regimental bands, the sorrowing people bared their heads in respectful awe, and from many near-stained faces bespoke their grief more eloquently than words. It was a silent throng. Not a sound was heard.

As with solemn and cadence tread the procession moved down the avenue, the people recognized was that of their former President Cleveland. They recognized, too, the new president, upon whom the responsibilities of chief executive had been thrust so unexpectedly. With silent salute they greeted him, and with them he mingled his tears in sorrow for the dead.

This was almost the closing act in the awful tragedy which has drenched the civilized world in tears. Beneath the great white dome of the capitol funeral services of state were held Tuesday over the remains of the dead president. It was eminently fitting that the services should be conducted in that beautiful rotunda, hallowed by the tread of the feet and rites of two other martyrs to the cause of the republic. As befitted the occasion and the character of the man whose remains were lying cold and rigid in the narrow embrace of the metallic casket, the services were simple. They were conducted in accordance with the rites of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which President McKinley was a lifelong member. Consisting only of two hymns, two songs, a prayer and benediction, they were beautiful and solemnly impressive. Grouped around the bier were representatives of every phase of American national life, including the president and his entire family, ex-president of the United States, Grover Cleveland, together with representatives at this capital of almost every nation of the earth. Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Spain, and all the republics to the southward of the United States mingled their tears with those of the American people.

Despite the fact that no attempt had been made to decorate the interior of the rotunda beyond the arrangements made about the catafalque, the assemblage presented a memorable sight. Number black attire of hundreds of city ians present was splashed brilliant with the blue and gold of the representatives of the army and the navy, and the court costumes of the diplomatic corps. As the sweet notes of Mr. McKinley's favorite hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," floated through the great rotunda, the assemblage rose to its feet. Bared heads were bowed and eyes streamed with tears. At the conclusion of the hymn, as Rev. Dr. Naylor, presiding elder of the Washington district, rose to offer prayer, a hush that fell upon the people was profound. When, in conclusion, he repeated the Lord's Prayer, the great audience joined solemnly with him, and the murmur of their voices resembled the roll of the distant surf. Rarely had the word Amen been breathed when the words of the song, "Some Time We'll Understand," came straight to the heart of every auditor. The solo was sung by Mrs. Thomas C. Noyes, of this city, and the refrain was echoed and re-echoed by the double quartette choir.

The venerable bishop Andrew Edwin Drews, of Ohio, the oldest bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, then took his position at the head of the bier. In gentle breeze through the rotunda stirred the gathering shadows, which lay upon the coffin and the "Peace that passeth all understanding" seemed to rest on the venerable face as he began his task. He began his eulogy of the life and works of William McKinley. His words were simple, but in his whole heart was in every one of them. His tribute to the Christian fortitude of the dead president was impressive. Upon the conclusion of the sermon the audience, as if by prearrangement, joined "Nearer, My God to Thee" in singing "Nearer, My God to Thee." All present seemed to be imbued with a sentiment of resignation as the divine blessing was asked by Rev. W. H. Chapman, acting pastor of Metropolitan M. E. church, on behalf of the living and dead.

Mrs. McKinley did not attend the services at the capitol here. It was deemed wise by those nearest and dearest to her that she should not undergo the ordeal. She remained at the white house and forted by every attention that loving thoughtfulness could suggest.

At the conclusion of the funeral services in the rotunda the casket lid was removed that those who had assembled friends of the dead president might be afforded the comfort of a last glance at his features. And that last glance they he loved and who loved him might pass by the bier of their martyred dead. At 12:30 the crowds began to pass through the rotunda, and during the six hours in which the last sad rites were paid it is estimated that 85,000 people viewed the remains.

When the remains of the dead president were finally closed forever to the view of Washington people the cavalcade escort again was formed and conveyed them to the special train which now is carrying the body to Canton. The magnificent display of floral offerings, numbering no less than 125 pieces, and making the most remarkable floral show ever seen here, were taken to the station from the capitol in carriages and wagons, and there placed aboard a special car, which had been provided for them. Three sections, comprising in all 30 cars, were required to accommodate all those who accepted invitations to make the journey to Canton.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The last chapter of the sad ceremonial, the removal of the remains of the dead president to the grave at his old home at Canton, O., began at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday night when the funeral cortege left the Pennsylvania railroad.

The great bronze doors of the capitol in which the body had lain in state had closed while there was still thousands of people waiting for the last glimpse of the casket. The guards at the capitol who had patiently throughout the long day's hold the waiting lines in order, rallied a hurried look at the face of the deceased, the cover of the casket was screwed down and the undertakers lifted once more upon the shoulders of the body which had been borne to the hearse at the foot of the east portico of the capitol.

At the Pennsylvania railroad station there was a dense throng, and the remains were received by large delegations of army and navy officers. The guard of soldiers and seamen carried the casket from the hearse to the observation car, placed in the second section of the funeral train.

The casket was placed on standards draped with the national colors. It was covered with floral emblems.

The second section was the presidential train proper, made up of practically the same seven cars which made the trip from Buffalo. The car Olympia was assigned to Mrs. McKinley, while the car Edgemere, which came next, was occupied by the president and the cabinet. Behind in order came the sleepers Naples and Belgrade, the dining car Waldorf, and a combination car.

The third section of the train was devoted entirely to the accommodation of the army and navy officers.

President Roosevelt's arrival at the train was not at first generally noticed by incident. His brother-in-law, Capt. Cowles, of the navy, accompanied him.

It was just before 7 o'clock when Mrs. McKinley was driven to the station, escorted by Secretary Cortelyou and Gen. Dick. From the carriage entrance to the car set apart for her next to the head of the train a guard of police kept open a walk for her. She declined this, however, and walked with surprising firmness to her car, escorted by Abner McKinley and Dr. Rixey.

Canton, O., Sept. 19.—The first section of the funeral train reached Canton at 11:20. The climax of great demonstrations of sorrow that had been observed all the way from Washington to Canton was reached 18 miles from Canton. There the hill-masted flags were bordered heavily with black, and by the side of every white woman and child was at the station. A big white streamer, ten feet wide, was across the railway. Lettered heavily upon it were in black:

"WE MOURN OUR NATION'S DEAD."

The church bells were tolling dolorously. Then came the last half hour's run into Canton. Every mile of the way was be received into the arms of its own people. Mile by mile the approach was greeted by the firing of guns and by mournful silence. Flags that had often waved McKinley welcome were now lowered in sorrow. Farmers and countryfolk generally seemed to have suspended all occupation; here schools were dismissed and the entire population thronged along the track in sorrowful silence. Everywhere was shown that the people took this mournful homecoming as a personal bereavement which touched every household, and it was as though fathers and mothers and sisters were watching for a glimpse of the casket of their own dead boy.

The funeral train proper bearing the remains of President McKinley arrived at 12 o'clock noon. Gen. Dick and Judge Day at the head of the local reception committee, while presented aboard the station was the entire militia of the state.

Mrs. McKinley, weeping piteously, was helped from the train by Dr. Rixey and Abner McKinley and conducted to a carriage. Dr. Rixey entered with her and the three rode rapidly to her home. The near relatives followed her.

The remains were then lifted from the catafalque car and carried on the shoulders of the body bearers through a gangway formed by Knights Templar veil and his cabinet to the waiting hearse. The surrounding soldiers were at present arms and bugles sounded taps. The president and cabinet then entered carriages. They took their places in front of the hearse, headed by Adm. Dewey and Gen. Miles in full uniform, and the sad procession then moved up North street in the direction of the court house, where the body was to lie in state.

Tenderly the multitude who had known William McKinley best received his remains on Wednesday. They had forgotten the illustrious career of the statesman in the loss of a great personal friend, and the familiar features, dearer to them with the passing of the years. They hardly noticed the president of the United States or his cabinet or the army and admirals in their resplendent uniforms. The beautiful flag-draped casket which contained the body of their friend and fellow townsman had all their thoughts. For more than three days and two weeks ago this very day in the full strength of his manhood and they had brought him back from the capital of the nation of every man, woman and child. The entire population of the little city, thousands from the surrounding country, the full strength of the national guard of the state—eight regiments, three batteries of artillery, one battalion of engineers, 1,000 men in all, the governor, lieutenant governor and a part of the supreme court, representing the three branches of the state government, were at the station to receive the remains.

Perhaps the great change that had come upon the countenance moved the people in the saddest way. The familiar features, the familiar expression, the splash brilliant appeared upon the brow and cheeks Tuesday at the state ceremonial in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington had disappeared. The line had become livid. All but two from the lights from the chandelier above the head were extinguished in order that the embalmer's art appear not noticeable, but everyone who viewed the remains Wednesday remarked the darkened features and the pinched lips. When the body was taken away thousands were still in line, and the committee in charge of the arrangements was appealed to to allow a further opportunity to view the remains. Thursday morning before they are taken to the church. This had to be reluctantly denied to them and the casket may never be opened again.

Canton, O., Sept. 20.—With majestic solemnity, surrounded by his countrymen and his townspeople, in the presence of the president of the United States, the cabinet, justices of the United States supreme court, senators and representatives in congress, the heads of the military and naval establishments, the governors of states and a great concourse of people who had known and loved him, all that is mortal of the third president to fall by an assassin's bullet, was committed to the grave. It was a spectacle of mournful grandeur.

From every city and hamlet in Ohio, from the remote corners of the state, and from the east and west, the human tide flowed into the town until 100,000 people were within its gates here to pay their last tribute to the fallen chief.

The final scene was in the First Methodist church, where the funeral service was held, and at the beautiful West Lawn cemetery, where the body was consigned to a vault, were simple and impressive.

The services in the church consisted of the solemn oration, prayers by the ministers of three denominations and singing by a quartette. The body was then taken to West Lawn cemetery and placed in a receiving vault, pending the time when it will be finally laid to rest beside the dead children who were buried years ago.

One of the most pathetic features of the day was the absence of Mrs. McKinley from the funeral services at the church and the cemetery when the body of her husband was laid to rest. Mrs. McKinley's shock of the shooting, then of death and through the ordeal of state ceremonies, she had borne up bravely. But there was a limit to human endurance and Tuesday and Wednesday found the poor wife too weak to pass through the trials of the final ceremonies. Through the open door of her room she heard the prayer of the minister as the body was borne out of the house.

The long line of the funeral march from the church to the cemetery was about one and one-half miles in length. From the church to the entrance of the cemetery the church there was on each side of the street an almost unbroken line of soldiers, and on all the intersecting streets detachments of the militia were posted about 100 feet from the thoroughfare upon which the cortege moved.

There was not a window that commanded a view of the line of march that was not filled with faces. The numerous stands were crowded to their utmost capacity and on the roofs were hundreds of people.

All day long the streets were kept clear by the military and not a vehicle of any description, save those belonging to the funeral cortege, were permitted to enter upon them.

No greater reverence has ever been shown to any man, living or dead, than was exhibited toward the dead president Thursday. As the funeral car passed through the streets men and women sobbed convulsively and at the cemetery gates where the crowd was densest packed, and where the people had remained for hours pressing against the iron fence, two women fainted utterly by excitement at the vault.

It was exactly four minutes after 4 when the funeral car bore the remains of the dead president through the gateway of his last resting place. Twenty minutes after that time the brief service at the vault was over, the members of the family and distinguished men of the nation who had come so far to do him honor, had passed through the gates on their homeward way. Only one hour and forty minutes after the hearse had entered the cemetery the place was clear and the dead president was resting alone under the watchful care of the men of the regular army. A sentry's measured tread resounded from the cement walk before the vault, another kept vigil on the grassy slope above and at the head and at the foot of the casket stood armed men.

For nearly an hour before the head of the funeral procession arrived at the gates of the cemetery the strains of the dirge played by the bands came over the hill top to the waiting throng, and told them that the procession was on its way.

A detachment of mounted police headed the parade. Behind them came the Grand Army band of Canton, and solemn notes of "Nearer, My God to Thee" welling out as it came up the drive way. A moment after entering the cemetery the music was changed to that of the funeral interlude. Behind the band came the Grand Army posts, fully 500 of the veterans marching by the left flank. Veterans came, in well set ranks, with rifles at "arms port," the men of the 6th Ohio infantry, O. N. G., the engineer corps of the national guard from Cleveland and the comrades of the late president in the ranks of the 23d Ohio volunteers during the civil war.

Then came a long line of carriages bearing the members of the family and the distinguished visitors.

On alighting from the vehicles President Roosevelt walked with Dr. Rixey to the vault and took a position on the south side of the walk close to the door.—Assistant Secretary Root came next and assumed a similar position on the north side of the walk, and the other members of the cabinet arranged themselves by the side of the president and secretary of war. With bared heads the president and members of the cabinet in waiting stood on each side of the walk. Within a minute after the formation of the lines the funeral car came up to the gate. It was gently lifted from the hearse, and borne to the door of the vault, where it was rested upon the catafalque. Just as the bearers lowered it to the catafalque Abner McKinley and Mrs. Barber alighted from their carriage and stood at the head of the line of officers. They remained here for a few seconds, and then passed up to the head of the casket, where they remained during the brief services.

Bishop Joyce, of Minneapolis, read the burial service of the Methodist church, slowly but in a voice that could be heard distinctly by all who were grouped about the vault.

From eight bugles rang out the notes of the soldiers' last call, "Taps." It was the end. Slowly down, and the last notes of the bugles died away so softly that all who heard it remained listening for a few seconds to hear it again repeated. When the last note had floated away Secretary Wilson was in tears, Secretary Hitchcock was also overcome and the president was gazing grimly at the walk. It was the last moment for the men who had been so closely associated with the president for so long and the thought seemed sadder than most of them could bear. It was all ended at last. The guard took their positions and the mourners entered their carriages and returned to the city.

The delay caused by the services at the bier being over, the procession resumed its march. Every man in the line, save those in uniform who rendered appropriate honor in other ways, went past the casket with uncovered head.

As the head of the division containing the Knights Templar wheeled into the cemetery the equestrians, who had been delayed in reaching the place for the previous ceremonies, took up a position to the south of the vault and sang "Farewell, My Brother." This hymn was followed by others, including "Rock of Ages," "The Christian's Good Night," and "The Wayside Cross." The selections were beautifully rendered and no part of the funeral ceremonies in Canton was more impressive. The darkness was gathering fast as the Knights sang their last hymn, and many in the multitude of the casket were moved to tears, and the sound of sobs was distinctly audible in the crowd that lined the fence back of the line of national guardsmen.

The last of the procession passed the bier at 5:45, and the orders were given by Capt. Biddle that the cemetery should be cleared. The order was quickly carried out and the president was left in the care of his guard of honor.

Canton, O., Sept. 20.—Never before on this continent has such a floral display been seen at any public occasion as that in West Lawn cemetery Thursday afternoon. The vault was lined with the rarest and costliest flowers, a multitude of floral pieces was spread on the ground before the door of the vault and for 200 feet to the right and left of the doorway and for half a hundred feet on the rear of a line passing through the front wall it was impossible to tread, so thickly did the tributes lie. Nearly every country on both hemispheres was represented by an offering. The number of those from the United States is almost past counting. They came from every state in the union, and there is scarcely a man in public life who has not paid respect to the virtues of William McKinley did not beside his confined remains Thursday afternoon.

The inside of the vault was literally a mass of roses and orchids when the casket was carried into it, and the outside walls were well nigh hidden beneath the myriad flower hung upon them. Above the doorway hung an enormous wreath of dark green galix leaves, over the middle portion of the vault was a similar wreath, the leaves being a deep red; in a corresponding position on the other side hung a wreath of purple ivy.

The great wreath in the center was the offering of the Italian government and king of Italy, and was one of the handsomest pieces seen. Upon a great streamer of black satin, which swung from the mass of deep green leaves, was the following inscription:

"REQUIEM ETERNAM DONA EI DOMINE."

Beside the black streamer floated one of red, white and blue, the colors of the United States, and another of red, white and green, the colors of Italy. To the right of the door in a frame, formed of red and white roses, was a vase full six feet high made of white asters. This was the offering of the manufacturing potters of East Liverpool, O. The employes of these manufacturing potters sent an elaborate design of a vase done in red asters, and another beautiful wreath of lilies of the valley, interlined with smilax, the whole surmounted with roses and purple orchids. To the left of the doorway was a great bunch of red roses and purple orchids bound together with a wide band of royal purple satin.

Standing a short distance from the vault to the south was a small cradle covered entirely with white and purple asters. On its sides were worked in immortelles the word, "Niles." This was said to be the cradle in which President McKinley had been rocked during his boyhood days in Niles, O., and special instructions came with it that it should be guarded with great care and sent directly to Niles, where it is to be preserved.

From the republic of Cuba came an enormous representation of the flag of the new nation. A wreath of white roses and lilies of the valley came from the republic of Uruguay. The wreath of white roses and purple asters from the president of Uruguay. From the Knights Templar of Canton came a great field five feet long and three feet wide, formed entirely of white asters. In the center was the cross of the Knights Templar. A round button, two feet in diameter, with the red cross in the center, came from the Knights of Tennessee. An elaborate offering of roses and orchids came from Melville E. Stone, of New York, and other wreaths came from Savannah, Ga., from San Francisco, from Duluth, New Orleans, and from dozens of other cities.

ASSASSINATION PLOT.

An Investigation Reveals the Possibility That It Was Laid a Year or More Ago.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 23.—Investigations made Sunday by Police Detective Schmunk reveal the startling possibility that a plot to assassinate President McKinley was laid a year or more ago, before he was elected for his second term, but that it may have laid in the peaceful precincts of Orange township, where the Czolgosz family lived. A remittance made to the assassin by his brother Waldeek Czolgosz, a month ago, led to the investigation that may have an important bearing on the case.

From the first the Buffalo police and the secret service agents of the federal government have been strong in their belief that there was a plot, although the Cleveland police have been inclined to doubt the theory.

HERR JOHANN MOST.

The Well Known Anarchist and Saloon Keeper Precke Placed Under Arrest.

New York, Sept. 23.—The police of Newton, borough of Queens, Sunday night arrested Johann Most, the anarchist, as a disorderly person. They suspected that he was going to conduct an anarchist meeting in a saloon in Corona, L. I.

They also arrested Christina Precke, who is said to run the saloon, on the charge of violating the liquor tax and keeping a disorderly house.

Later developments show that Herr Most was gathered in while haranguing a crowd of 500 people. There was a scramble for the door when the police appeared, but the officers succeeded in capturing Most, as well as several men whom they claim to be prominent in getting up the meeting.

ADMITS HIS GUILT.

Czolgosz Thursday Said He Killed the President and That He Is an Anarchist.

Buffalo, Sept. 20.—The Courier Friday morning prints the following:

"What's the use of talking about that? I killed the president. I am an anarchist and simply did my duty; that's all I'll say."

Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, said those words Thursday to Frank A. Oleskauowski, editor of Buffaloski, a Polish newspaper, but would say nothing further about the crime, while willing to talk freely about other subjects.

He May Be Appointed Surgeon General of the Navy December 18, Next.

WHOLE WORLD MOURNS

All Civilized Countries Pay Tribute to McKinley's Memory.

Queen Alexandra Has Written an Autograph Letter to Mrs. McKinley—Memorial Services Held in European Capitals.

London, Sept. 20.—The London morning papers again appear with black borders and long accounts of the ceremonies in Canton and of memorial services and tributes throughout the world. The editorials generally comment upon the widespread sympathy evoked.

"Seldom, if ever," says the Standard, "has a common sorrow found expression in so many lands."

The Daily News finds "this spontaneous manifestation of mourning" deeply suggestive and impressive, being paralleled only at the death of Victoria.

Several London theaters were closed Thursday night. Those remaining open witnessed some remarkable demonstrations. The programme began with the "Dead March in Saul," the audience standing. At the leading variety houses the "Star Spangled Banner" was also played and was received with ringing cheers and shouts of "Down with anarchy." A concert in Queen's hall, Sir Arthur Sullivan's "In Memorium" overture and Tchaikowsky's "Pathetique Symphonie" were played in memory of Mr. McKinley.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain attended the memorial service in Birmingham Thursday. There was also a big demonstration in that city Thursday night in connection with the Wesleyan conference, when resolutions of sympathy and condolence were adopted after the crime of Czolgosz had been characterized in terms of the deepest abhorrence.

Queen Alexandra has written an autograph letter to Mrs. McKinley, which will go to the United States by the next mail.

Lord Landsdowne, the foreign secretary, intimates through the press his regret that illness prevented him from attending the memorial service in Westminster abbey.

Memorial services are reported from Berlin, Lisbon, Culcutta, Paris, Hamburg and other capitals.

Mr. Choate, in his letter of apology for absence from the King Alfred Millenary commemoration at Westminster, due to the death of President McKinley, says:

"The sympathy expressed in a perfect avalanche of telegrams from all parts of the British dominion is most touching."

MARINES ON GUARD.

All Irrelevant Questions and Hearsay Evidence Will Be Cut Out —This Will Shorten the Term of the Court.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The Schley court of inquiry reconvened, and before adjournment examined four witnesses.

Marines were on guard at the railing, and before the court opened, barred out all save members of the court and witnesses. Later Judge Advocate General Lemly arranged to allow members of the press associations within the railing.

The most important incident of the day was the decision of the court withdrawing a question, put by the court itself, asking a witness to give his opinion concerning a point under controversy. The witness was Rr. Adm. Higginson, who participated in the Santiago campaign as captain of the battleship Massachusetts. This vessel at one time was a part of the flying squadron, commanded by Commodore Schley, and the court asked him to state whether all possible measures were taken to capture or destroy the Spanish vessel, Cristobal Colon as it lay in Santiago harbor from May 27 to June 1, 1898. Counsel for Adm. Schley objected to the question on the ground that a reply would involve an opinion and not a statement of facts. Judge Advocate Lemly admitted that the precedents were against questions of this character, and the court withdrew this interrogatory.

It is generally admitted that this decision will have the effect of materially shortening the term of the court, as will also the court's manifest intention to cut out irrelevant questions and all hearsay testimony. In several cases the witnesses were admonished to relate only events coming within their own observation. Adm. Dewey showed himself a prompt and methodical presiding officer. He called the court to order exactly at the designated hour, and adjourned it just as promptly at 4 o'clock.

The witnesses Friday were Rr. Adm. Higginson, who commanded the battleship Massachusetts during the Spanish war; Capt. C. M. Chester, who commanded the cruiser Cincinnati; Maj. Thomas N. Wood, of the marine corps, who commanded the marines on the Massachusetts, and Commander Giles R. Herber, who was executive officer of the Texas, the latter being on the stand when the court adjourned. The attendance of the public was small.

"Now I will offer," said Capt. Lemly, "a chart showing the positions of the vessels off Santiago."

"I object," spoke up Capt. Parker, of Schley's counsel, quickly. "The chart is grossly incorrect. It places the coast line six miles further south and four miles further west than it is in fact."

"The chart does not prove anything," explained Capt. Lemly. "It is not put as evidence, but for reference."

Capt. Lemly, the judge advocate general, then read the order of the navy department, appointing Adm. Ramsay to be a member of the court.

"I ask you, Adm. Schley, if you have any objection to any member of this court," said Capt. Lemly.

"I have not," replied Adm. Schley.

Capt. Lemly then swore in the members of the court, the three bending forward, and each grasping a small Bible.

Capt. Lemly was himself sworn in by Adm. Dewey, and in turn administered the oath to the clerk and reporter of the court.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The testimony at Saturday's session of the Schley court of inquiry was unfavorable to the admiral.

Capt. Barber repeated his statements that the sea was not too rough to coal off Santiago, and declared the only signals observed off Cienfuegos before proceeding to Santiago were, he thought, between the Spanish forces.

Commander Schroeder, who was executive officer of the battleship Massachusetts at that time, corroborated most of Capt. Barber's testimony. He declared that during the bombardment of the Colon the American ships might have gone in closer. He also testified that Adm. Schley, at that time, had given orders to get away, saying, "Let's get out of this."

BOER SUCCESSES.

They Are Overrunning Cape Colony and Are Within 40 Miles of Cape Town.

London, Sept. 23.—A most alarming letter from Cape Town was published Monday by the Daily Express. The writer says:

"The Boers are overrunning Cape Colony. They are on both the coast lines and within 40 miles of Cape Town. Even the intelligence department does not know how many colonial rebels have taken up arms in the last fortnight.

"The town guard of Cape Town has been ordered to hand in the magazine rifles and ammunition, ostensibly because those are wanted at the front. Martini-Henrys have been served out instead."

In conclusion the writer declares that "the Dutch element in the colony is in revolt, and it is useless to disguise the fact."

The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, September 22:

"Kreitzinger, while endeavoring to force a passage of Orange river, near Herschell, at 1 o'clock Friday morning, rushed the camp of a party of Lovatt's scouts. He failed to cross the river, but the scouts lost heavily. Lieut. Col. Hon. Andrew Murray and Capt. Murray, his adjutant, were killed. Deeply regret the loss of Col. Murray, who throughout the war had led Lovatt's scouts with great gallantry.

"Under cover of darkness the Boers managed to carry off a gun. They were promptly followed up and the gun was recovered in a smart engagement, in which Kreitzinger lost two killed and 115 taken prisoners."

Lord Kitchener also reports that the British captured by the Boers in the ambush near Scheepers Nek, September 17, have been released, and that the British casualties in the recent Vlakfontein engagement, when the Boers captured a company of mounted infantry and two guns, were one officer and five men killed, 22 men wounded and six officers and 109 men taken prisoners. He announced that these prisoners have since been released.

BOLD ANARCHISTS.

Spring Valley, Ill., Sept. 23.—Twenty anarchists, armed with double barreled shotguns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition, are standing guard over the office of L'Anrore, the notorious anarchist publication, which expressed joy at the murder of President McKinley and satisfaction over the announcement of Assassin Czolgosz that he was an anarchist.

Meanwhile fully 2,000 citizens of adjoining towns have sent word to the authorities here that they are ready and extremely anxious to start at a moment's notice for this city and assist in exterminating the reds. The temper of the people here is at the boiling point, the defiant attitude of the anarchist colony having increased the general anger.

John Gabilli, the editor of L'Aurore, has been in hiding ever since a recent mass meeting gave evidence of a desire to demolish his publication and adorn him with a coat of tar and feathers.

Monday a committee will wait on General Manager Dalzell, of the Spring Valley Coal Co., who resides in Chicago, and insist that he discharge every known anarchist in his employ.

The anarchists and their sympathizers number fully 500, and if this step is taken it will mean that one or two of the mines will have to close down until other men can be brought in.

The anarchist threaten to hold a mass meeting Monday evening. If they persist in this plan a riot is almost certain to ensue, and there can be but one ending for the patriotic citizens here will be heavily reinforced by outsiders, who will come prepared for business.

STILL HOLDS HER OWN.

No Material Change in the Condition of Mrs. McKinley.

It Is Estimated That 20,000 People Visited the Resting Place of the Late President in West Lawn Sunday.

Canton, O., Sept. 23.—Dr. Rixey said Sunday evening that there has been no material change in the condition of Mrs. McKinley and that she is doing as well as could be expected.

She went out for two hours Sunday and still seems to be holding her own.

Sunday's drives were taken in the family carriage, an open surrey which the president had sent on from Washington for use during the summer vacation, and Dr. Rixey and Mrs. C. Barber accompanied Mrs. McKinley. The first trip was to the cemetery Sunday morning, and was taken at the request of Mrs. McKinley. A much longer drive was taken during the afternoon at the suggestion of the doctor, who feels that his patient is benefitted by all the outdoor life she can stand and can be induced to take. The outings have always had a tendency to produce sleep and rest and to increase the appetite, and now have that effect to a degree at least. It is understood that Mrs. McKinley is securing fairly good rest in the midst of her sorrow and grief.

There was placed on the McKinley casket Sunday by Judge Wm. R. Day a large floral wreath for the emperor of Russia. Judge Day received a telegram from Charge DeWollante, of the Russian embassy at Washington, requesting him to have this wreath placed on the casket of the late president. It is oval in shape, and seven feet by six. It is composed on one side of American Beauty roses and on the others of orchids. The base is of sage palms, the entire wreath being interspersed with small cocoa ferns tied with orchid satin ribbon.

The resting place of the late president was visited by thousands of people Sunday, probably 20,000 people entering the gates of West Lawn cemetery between the early hours of the morning and the late hours of the evening. The attraction was the floral tributes sent for the funeral, which have been arranged at either side of the vault. They are still in a very good state of preservation, and probably will be for several days longer. The guard of regular soldiers patrolled a wide circle around the vault and flowers so that a long line could view the flowers at one time and thus prevented serious congestion.

A number of beautiful flowers were also placed on the graves of the McKinley children, which are also protected by a patrol of soldiers, and many of the crowd wandered from the vault to the private lot. Many also climbed the high knoll in the new part of the cemetery, the prospective site of the permanent McKinley tomb and monument, all agreeing that it was a most appropriate location. These thousands of visitors at the cemetery were not from Canton alone, but hundreds came from neighboring towns. The court house was kept open all day for the accommodation of hundreds of people who had not yet seen the catafalque, and many people passed through the corridors during the day.

AGUINALDO'S BODY GUARD.

Maj. Alhambra, Two Captains, Two Lieutenants and 20 Men Have Surrendered.

Manila, Sept. 21.—Aguinaldo's body guard, Maj. Alhambra, two captains, two lieutenants and 29 men, with 23 rifles, surrendered about 40 miles north of Baler, Island of Luzon, to Capt. George A. Detchmendy, of the 22d United States infantry, Saturday, took the oath of allegiance and were released.

Since Aguinaldo left Gen. MacArthur's house for his present place of confinement he has never left the premises, although he is at liberty to do so if accompanied by an officer. The reason assigned is that he fears assassination at the hands of the partisans of the late Gen. Luna.

Gen. Chaffee has refused the request for the release of the prisoners in the Island of Guam. He considers that their release would not be safe until the surrender or capture of Malvar and Lukban.

Capt. Detchmendy reports that he has recovered a portion of the body of Denzell George Arthur Venville, the ill-fated apprentice of the United States gunboat Yorktown, who was one of Lieut. Gilmore's party when that officer was captured by the Filipinos in April, 1899. The remains will be forwarded to Manila for shipment home.

Gen. Frederick Funston, who has been in the hospital suffering from appendicitis for about a week, has undergone a successful operation.

The total number to be exhibited will be close to 1,500, 70 flocks. 20 of which will be the merino. Angora goats will be included in this exhibition. Superintendent Converse, under whose direction the various cattle and stock shows have been given, promises that the sheep show will establish a precedent in the way of numbers and quality which will be hard to equal. Judging will take place on Wednesday and Thursday next.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

BLOODY ENCOUNTER.

A Wagon Used as a Barricade in a Fight—Two Men Hurt, One Probably Fatally.

Richmond, Ky., Sept. 21.—News has reached here of a bloody encounter Friday morning at Round Hill between Albert and Leslie Curtis, on one side, and Frank Tussey, a farmer, on the other. Tussey was on his way to his tobacco field and was overtaken by the Curtis brothers, who were armed with shotguns. They at once opened fire on Tussey, who promptly returned the shots from behind his wagon. A desperate battle followed. Tussey received 14 No. 4 shot in his back and arms, and is thought to be mortally wounded. Leslie Curtis received a bullet in the leg and one in the shoulder. Albert Curtis escaped unhurt. CHURCHES DRAPED.

Memorial Services Were Held by All Denominations in Louisville Thursday.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 20.—All the churches in Louisville Thursday held services in memory of President McKinley. Most of the edifices were draped in black. The congregations which attended were surprising in point of numbers, thousands of people joining in the tribute to the beloved chief executive. Eloquent addresses were made, and in each church the president's favorite hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," were sung. Business was suspended and the schools were closed. Public buildings were locked tight all day. The observation was general throughout Kentucky. The governor's proclamation made the day a legal holiday, and no more business than was necessary was transacted. Every city, town and hamlet throughout the state joined in the nation's day of mourning.

NEGRO BURGULAR.

He Kills a Man and Shoots His Wife in Newport, Ky.—The Citizens Are Aroused.

Newport, Ky., Sept. 19.—J. Henry Badger was shot and killed by a Negro burglar, and his wife was seriously wounded, at their beautiful home in the Kentucky Highlands.

The Highlands has during recent years been the scene of several murders, but the citizens have not been so thoroughly aroused since the murder of Pearl Bryan, which occurred only a mile away from the scene of the deed that was committed at 3 a. m. Wednesday. Unlike the Pearl Bryan murder, there was a witness left to tell the story and to give a description of the murderer, who, however, succeeded in escaping, and has since eluded the many sheriff's posses that are now scouring the country in search of him.

SHOT AND KILLED.

They Forgot the Past to Engage in a Fatal Wrestling Match—Shootist at Large.

Inez, Ky., Sept. 21.—John Mollett, aged 18, was shot and instantly killed by Lindsey Wells, aged 20, on Greasy creek. Ten years ago they quarreled at school and were chastised by their teacher. They had not exchanged words until a few days ago, when they met by chance and decided to forget past differences. Thursday they engaged in a friendly wrestling match, in which Mollett threw Wells, who thereupon whipped out a pistol and shot Mollett four times, each ball penetrating his skull. Wells is still at large.

Negroes Arrested.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 20.—Because they proceeded to have the colored baptist church built after a license was refused Martin Boyd, T. L. Brooks and Robert Parrent, Negro members of the colored Baptist church of this city, were arrested Thursday afternoon on the charge of unlawfully erecting a nuisance. The objection to the church being built there is that it is directly opposite the governor's mansion. The case will be heard in the city court Friday.

Fire at Hopkinsville.

NO ONE WAS HURT.

Shots Were Fired in Profusion at the Reinecke Mines in Madisonville Wednesday.

Madisonville, Ky., Sept. 19.—Early Wednesday morning a force of union miners attacked the Reinecke mines here. The union men opened fire when the guards were least expecting an attack. About 500 shots were exchanged. No one was hurt.

Three of the shots struck the secretary's office and went through the building. The Monarch mines have been closed all day. Warrants have been issued for J. D. Woods, president of the mining district, all the official board and nearly 150 members.

At 6 o'clock Wednesday evening another attack was made. About 200 shots were exchanged. After the shooting the men retreated to their camp near by for supper.

County Judge Hall and Sheriff Hankins have asked Gov. Beckham four times to send the state guards on the grounds that the county was unable to cope with the situation.

TO PINEVILLE FOR TRIAL.

The Removal of the Ku-Klux Was Effected Without Exciting Suspicion.

Mayking, Ky., Sept. 19.—Sheriff Wilson Sergent and a dozen deputies of this county left Tuesday night unawares with the 15 kuklux outlaw members for Pineville, Bell county, where they were transferred on a change of venue at the last term of court. For fear their friends of Boone's Fork would release the outlaws, Sheriff Sergent departed with them Tuesday midnight. They will go on trial September 23 for the murder and robbery of Mrs. Jemima Hall and her son, Sherwood Reynolds, at Boone's Fork, last November. The trial will be watched with more interest than any case ever tried in Bell county.

Hundreds of witnesses will go from this county.

AT FRANKFORT.

Gov. Beckham Delivered a Eulogy at the Memorial Services Held in the Opera House.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 20.—At the McKinley memorial services Thursday the opera house was packed with 1,000 people, and hundreds could not get in. All the ministers and church choirs took part, and short addresses eulogistic of the dead president were made by Gov. Beckham, Judge Durrelle and Rev. J. R. Savage, of the Methodist church.

All stores were closed and the city wore a general air of mourning.

Both Ways.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 21.—Mr. P. Booker Reed has the distinction of having served Louisville as mayor, both as a democrat and republican. He was mayor from 1885 to 1887, having been elected as a democrat. Later he became a republican, and is now president of the board of aldermen, by virtue of which he is acting mayor while Mayor Weaver is away.

To Look Into the Trouble.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 19.—Because of persistent reports of striking mine troubles at Earlington, Gov. Beckham has the troops at Hopkinsville, Henderson and Bowling Green under arms subject to "move" orders. It is said that the governor has sent Gen. Percy Haley to Earlington to look into the trouble and wire a report.

Troops Disbanded.

Owensboro, Ky., Sept. 21.—Adjt. Gen. Murray Friday afternoon notified Capt. Ellis, in command of Company C, of the Kentucky state guard, to dismiss his men and allow them to go to their homes, and they were at once dismissed. The men have been held in the armory for several days, expecting to be sent to Madisonville.

Eulogized by W. C. P. Breckinridge.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 20.—Two vast audiences paid respect to the memory of McKinley here Thursday. Ex-Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, a colleague of the dead president on the ways and means committee in congress, made the principal address at the opera house.

Looking For Him.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 21.—William Schneider, a suspected anarchist, who was arested on a charge of disorderly conduct for alleged disrespectful speeches against President McKinley, failed to appear in the city court Friday and his bond was declared forfeited. The police are looking for him.

School Children Wore Crepe.

Stanford, Ky., Sept. 20.—Services were held Thursday afternoon in the First Christian church. All ministers of the city participated. Public school children marched to church in a body, each child and teacher wearing a crepe.

Memorial services in honor of our martyred President were appropriately observed here on Thursday the 19th inst. at 1.30 p. m. All the schools and business houses were closed, and a procession with Capt. A. B. Parker as Marshall and headed by the Old Kentucky Home band, was formed at the Christian church. In the procession, following the band were about 100 boys and girls from the public schools, each wearing a large piece of crape on the left arm. Then came the secret societies in the following order: the Knights of Pythias, the Masons and the Odd-Fellows, the three numbering about 100 members. Next came Prof. L. N. Early's school in carriages, the vehicles being appropriately draped. These were followed by citizens on foot. Thus organized the solemn procession marched over the principal streets of the town, and when Gordon's Hall was reached it broke ranks and repaired to the large auditorium, which had been arranged for the occasion, and where the memorial services were conducted as follows: "A Comrade's Farewell," by band; scripture reading, Rev. L. N. Early; song, Methodist choir; address, Rev. Early; song, "Nearer My God, to Thee," choir; reading of the proclamations of President Roosevelt, Governor Beckham and Police Judge Crisler, Dr. J. M. Grant; eulogy, Hon. T. B. Mathews; song, "Lead Calmly Life," choir; benediction, Rev. Early. The ceremonies were solemn and impressive. The stage in the hall was heavily draped in crape, as was the portrait of the President and the large flag that entwined it. The unanimity with which our people, regardless of political creeds, took part in the ceremonies speaks volumes for their loyalty to their country and their love and respect for the departed, who had been exalted to the highest position in our government. It was an occasion, the solemnity of which was genuine, and made a lasting impression on all.

MARINES ON GUARD.

All Irrelevant Questions and Hearsay Evidence Will Be Cut Out —This Will Shorten the Term of the Court.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The Schley court of inquiry reconvened, and before adjournment examined four witnesses.

Marines were on guard at the railing, and before the court opened, barred out all save members of the court and witnesses. Later Judge Advocate General Lemly arranged to allow members of the press associations within the railing.

The most important incident of the day was the decision of the court withdrawing a question, put by the court itself, asking a witness to give his opinion concerning a point under controversy. The witness was Rr. Adm. Higginson, who participated in the Santiago campaign as captain of the battleship Massachusetts. This vessel at one time was a part of the flying squadron, commanded by Commodore Schley, and the court asked him to state whether all possible measures were taken to capture or destroy the Spanish vessel, Cristobal Colon as it lay in Santiago harbor from May 27 to June 1, 1898. Counsel for Adm. Schley objected to the question on the ground that a reply would involve an opinion and not a statement of facts. Judge Advocate Lemly admitted that the precedents were against questions of this character, and the court withdrew this interrogatory.

It is generally admitted that this decision will have the effect of materially shortening the term of the court, as will also the court's manifest intention to cut out irrelevant questions and all hearsay testimony. In several cases the witnesses were admonished to relate only events coming within their own observation. Adm. Dewey showed himself a prompt and methodical presiding officer. He called the court to order exactly at the designated hour, and adjourned it just as promptly at 4 o'clock.

The witnesses Friday were Rr. Adm. Higginson, who commanded the battleship Massachusetts during the Spanish war; Capt. C. M. Chester, who commanded the cruiser Cincinnati; Maj. Thomas N. Wood, of the marine corps, who commanded the marines on the Massachusetts, and Commander Giles R. Herber, who was executive officer of the Texas, the latter being on the stand when the court adjourned. The attendance of the public was small.

"I object," spoke up Capt. Parker, of Schley's counsel, quickly. "The chart is grossly incorrect. It places the coast line six miles further south and four miles further west than it is in fact."

"The chart does not prove anything," explained Capt. Lemly. "It is not put as evidence, but for reference."

Capt. Lemly, the judge advocate general, then read the order of the navy department, appointing Adm. Ramsay to be a member of the court.

"I ask you, Adm. Schley, if you have any objection to any member of this court," said Capt. Lemly.

"I have not," replied Adm. Schley.

Capt. Lemly then swore in the members of the court, the three bending forward, and each grasping a small Bible.

Capt. Lemly was himself sworn in by Adm. Dewey, and in turn administered the oath to the clerk and reporter of the court.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The testimony at Saturday's session of the Schley court of inquiry was unfavorable to the admiral.

Capt. Harber repeated his statements that the sea was not too rough to coal off Santiago, and declared the only signals observed off Cienfuegos before proceeding to Santiago were, he thought, between the Spanish forces.

Commander Schroeder, who was executive officer of the battleship Massachusetts at that time, corroborated most of Capt. Harber's testimony. He declared that during the bombardment of the Colon the American ships might have gone in closer. He also testified that Adm. Schley, at that time, had given orders to get away, saying, "Let's get out of this."

BOER SUCCESSES.

They Are Overrunning Cape Colony and Are Within 40 Miles of Cape Town.

London, Sept. 23.—A most alarming letter from Cape Town was published Monday by the Daily Express. The writer says:

"The Boers are overrunning Cape Colony. They are on both the coast lines and within 40 miles of Cape Town. Even the intelligence department does not know how many colonial rebels have taken up arms in the last fortnight.

"The town guard of Cape Town has been ordered to hand in the magazine rifles and ammunition, ostensibly because those are wanted at the front. Martini-Henrys have been served out instead."

In conclusion the writer declares that "the Dutch element in the colony is in revolt, and it is useless to disguise the fact."

The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, September 22:

"Kreitzinger, while endeavoring to force a passage of Orange river, near Herschell, at 1 o'clock Friday morning, rushed the camp of a party of Lovatt's scouts. He failed to cross the river, but the scouts lost heavily. Lieut. Col. Hon. Andrew Murray and Capt. Murray, his adjutant, were killed. Deeply regret the loss of Col. Murray, who throughout the war had led Lovatt's scouts with great gallantry.

"Under cover of darkness the Boers managed to carry off a gun. They were promptly followed up and the gun was recovered in a smart engagement, in which Kreitzinger lost two killed and 115 taken prisoners."

Lord Kitchener also reports that the British captured by the Boers in the ambush near Scheepers Nek, September 17, have been released, and that the British casualties in the recent Vlakfontein engagement, when the Boers captured a company of mounted infantry and two guns, were one officer and five men killed, 23 men wounded and six officers and 109 men taken prisoners. He announced that these prisoners have since been released.

BOLD ANARCHISTS.

Spring Valley, Ill., Sept. 23.—Twenty anarchists, armed with double-barreled shotguns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition, are standing guard over the office of L'Aurore, the notorious anarchist publication, which expressed joy at the murder of President McKinley and satisfaction over the announcement of Assassin Czolgosz that he was an anarchist.

Meanwhile fully 2,000 citizens of adjoining towns have sent word to the authorities here that they are ready and extremely anxious to start at a moment's notice for this city and assist in exterminating the reds. The temper of the people here is at the boiling point, the defiant attitude of the anarchist colony having increased the general anger.

John Gabilli, the editor of L'Aurore, has been in hiding ever since a recent mass meeting gave evidence of a desire to demolish his publication and adorn him with a coat of tar and feathers.

Monday a committee will wait on General Manager Dalzell, of the Spring Valley Coal Co., who resides in Chicago, and insist that he discharge every known anarchist in his employ.

The anarchists and their sympathizers number fully 300, and if this step is taken it will mean that one or two of the mines will have to close down until other men can be brought in.

The anarchist threaten to hold a mass meeting Monday evening. If they persist in this plan a riot is almost certain to ensue, and there can be but one ending, for the patriotic citizens here will be heavily reinforced by outsiders, who will come prepared for business.

STILL HOLDS HER OWN.

No Material Change in the Condition of Mrs. McKinley.

It Is Estimated That 20,000 People Visited the Resting Place of the Late President in West Lawn Sunday.

Canton, O., Sept. 23.—Dr. Rixey said Sunday evening that there has been no material change in the condition of Mrs. McKinley and that she is doing as well as could be expected.

She went out for two hours Sunday and still seems to be holding her own.

Sunday's drives were taken in the family carriage, an open surrey which the president had sent on from Washington for use during the summer vacation, and Dr. Rixey and Mrs. C. Barber accompanied Mrs. McKinley. The first trip was to the cemetery Sunday morning, and was taken at the request of Mrs. McKinley. A much longer drive was taken during the afternoon at the suggestion of the doctor, who feels that his patient is benefitted by all the outdoor life she can stand and can be induced to take. The outings have always had a tendency to produce sleep and rest and to increase the appetite, and now have that effect to a degree at least. It is understood that Mrs. McKinley is securing fairly good rest in the midst of her sorrow and grief.

There was placed on the McKinley casket Sunday by Judge Wm. R. Day a large floral wreath for the emperor of Russia. Judge Day received a telegram from Charge DeWollante, of the Russian embassy at Washington, requesting him to have this wreath placed on the casket of the late president. It is oval in shape, and seven feet by six. It is composed on one side of American Beauty roses and on the others of orchids. The base is of sage palms, the entire wreath being interspersed with small cocoa ferns tied with orchid satin ribbon.

The resting place of the late president was visited by thousands of people Sunday, probably 20,000 people entering the gates of West Lawn cemetery between the early hours of the morning and the late hours of the evening. The attraction was the floral tributes sent for the funeral, which have been arranged at either side of the vault. They are still in a very good state of preservation, and probably will be for several days longer. The guard of regular soldiers patrolled a wide circle around the vault and flowers so that a long line could view the flowers at one time and thus prevented serious congestion.

A number of beautiful flowers were also placed on the graves of the McKinley children, which are also protected by a patrol of soldiers, and many of the crowd wandered from the vault to the private lot. Many also climbed the high knoll in the new part of the cemetery, the prospective site of the permanent McKinley tomb and monument, all agreeing that it was a most appropriate location. These thousands of visitors at the cemetery were not from Canton alone, but hundreds came from neighboring towns. The court house was kept open all day for the accommodation of hundreds of people who had not yet seen the catafalque, and many people passed through the corridors during the day.

GOVERNMENT OF CUBA.

Military Governor Wood Expects to Be Able to Hand It Over to the Cubans by Next May.

Wood is that he will be able to complete arrangements by which the conduct of affairs in the island can be handed over to the Cubans by May 1. The electoral law is satisfactory to the administration provided some modifications are made.

As a result of his talk with the officials here Gen. Wood expressed the opinion that there will be no change in the attitude of the administration towards the Cubans, but that the policy inaugurated by Mr. McKinley will be continued by his successor.

AGUINALDO'S BODY GUARD.

Maj. Alhambra, Two Captains, Two Lieutenants and 20 Men Have Surrendered.

Manila, Sept. 23.—Aguinaldo's body guard, Maj. Alhambra, two captains, two lieutenants and 20 men, with 23 rifles, surrendered about 40 miles north of Baler, Island of Luzon, to Capt. George A. Detchmendy, of the 22d United States infantry, Saturday, took the oath of allegiance and were released.

Since Aguinaldo left Gen. MacArthur's house for his present place of confinement he has never left the premises, although he is at liberty to do so if accompanied by an officer. The reason assigned is that he fears assassination at the hands of the partisans of the late Gen. Luna.

Gen. Chaffee has refused the request for the release of the prisoners in the Island of Guam. He considers that their release would not be safe until the surrender or capture of Malvar and Lukban.

Capt. Detchmendy reports that he has recovered a portion of the body of Denzell George Arthur Venville, the ill-fated apprentice of the United States gunboat Yorktown, who was one of Lieut. Gilmore's party when that officer was captured by the Filipinos in April, 1899. The remains will be forwarded to Manila for shipment home.

Gen. Frederick Funston, who has been in the hospital suffering from appendicitis for about a week, has undergone a successful operation.

The total number to be exhibited will be close to 1,500, 70 flocks, 20 of which will be the merino. Angora goats will be included in this exhibition. Superintendent Converse, under whose direction the various cattle and stock shows have been given, promises that the sheep show will establish a precedent in the way of numbers and quality which will be hard to equal. Judging will take place on Wednesday and Thursday next.

Albion, Mich., Sept. 23.—Mrs. Chas. Davis and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Chas. Hancock, while driving to their home about six miles from here, were attacked by a highwayman, who held their horse and demanded their money. Mrs. Davis whipped up her horse and the highwayman fired at her, the bullet striking her in the neck. Mrs. Hancock then drove the horse to this place, and as they were crossing the Michigan Central tracks here the buggy was struck by a passenger train and both women thrown violently to the ground. Mrs. Hancock escaped with slight bruises. Mrs. Davis, who was unconscious from the bullet wound, suffered a severe scalp wound by the fall. They will go on trial September 23 for the murder and robbery of Mrs. Jemima Hall and her son, Sherwood Reynolds, at Boone's Fork, last November. David Alcorn, of Pittsburg, has returned to his home after a visit of two weeks here. J. Frank Tilley and family have also returned to their home in that city, after a visit of several days with relatives here.

Memoral services in honor of our martyred President were appropiately observed here on Thursday the 19th inst. at 1:30 p. m. All the schools and business houses were closed, and a procession with Capt. A. B. Parker as Marshall and headed by the Old Kentucky Home band, was formed at the Christian church. In the procession, following the band were about 100 boys and girls from the public schools, each wearing a large piece of crape on the left arm. Then came the secret societies in the following order: the Knights of Pythias, the Masons and the Odd Fellows, the three numbering about 100 members. Next came Prof. L. N. Early's school in carriages, the vehicles being appropriately draped. These were followed by citizens on foot. Thus organized the solemn procession marched over the principal streets of the town, and when Gordon's Hall was reached it broke ranks and repaired to the large auditorium, which had been arranged for the occasion, and where the memorial services were conducted as follows: "A Comrade's Farewell," by band; scripture reading, Rev. L. N. Early; song, Methodist choir; address, Rev. Early; song, "Nearer My God, to Thee," choir; reading of the proclamations of President Roosevelt, Governor Beckham and Police Judge Crisler, Dr. J. M. Grant; eulogy, Hon. T. B. Mathews; song, "Lead Calmly Life," choir; benediction, Rev. Early. The ceremonies were solemn and impressive. The stage in the hall was heavily draped in crape, as was the portrait of the President and the large flag that entwined it. The unanimity with which our people, regardless of political creeds, took part in the ceremonies speaks volumes for their loyalty to their country and their love and respect for the departed, who had been exalted to the highest position in our government. It was an occasion, the solemnity of which was genuine, and made a lasting impression on all.

Buford, son of G. M. Allen, of Normansville, has been called to Montana to take charge of a mute printing establishment. Only a few weeks since he graduated at the Danville school for the Deaf and Dumb, and one of the professors of that institution having taken charge of a similar school in the far west, sent for Buford to superintend the printing office that is run in connection with the school. Buford is a bright young man, and was always found at the head of his classes in school. He made the "art preservative" a study at school, and is quite proficient therein.

Miss Julia Ann Beall, of the Hebron neighborhood, died Monday at 4:30 p. m. after about one week's illness, first having flux. She was born in Burlington a little over 67 years ago, and was a daughter of the late Jordan Beall, who, many years ago, was engaged in the tannery business here. She was a sister of the late John Beall and an aunt of ex-Sheriff David Beall. She was a consistent christian lady, and her funeral will be conducted at 10 a.m. to-day by Rev. J. A. Kirtley, at Sand Run Baptist church, of which she had been a member since 1854. After the funeral the interment will take place in the family lot in Sand Run cemetery.

His Last Address

President McKinley's Memorable Speech at Buffalo. Words That Will Ring Through Time. Progress and Prosperity Perpetuated Through Pacific Policy—The True Basis of National Greatness.

On the Pan-American exposition grounds at Buffalo, Thursday, September 5, transpirted an event the memory of which will linger ever in the minds of men. The day preceding that on which President McKinley received the fatal wound at the hands of an anarchist assassin, the nation's foremost citizen and statesman spoke to the people in words that will leave their inupress upon the pages of American history. In them the world will read the promptings of a great heart and the logic of a master mind. The words of the lamented president would seem to have been uttered under the dawning consciousness of his coming end, so full of inspiration were they. President McKinley was introduced by President Milburn, of the exposition, and was received by the vast audience with tumultuous enthusiasm, upon the subsidence of which he spoke as follows:

President McKinley's Address.

"I am glad to be again in the city of Buffalo and exchange greetings with her people, to whose generous hospitality I am not a stranger, and with whose good will I have been repeatedly and signally honored. Today I have additional satisfaction in meeting and giving welcome to the foreign representatives assembled here, whose presence and participation in this exposition have contributed in so marked a degree to its interests and success.

"To the commissioners of the Dominion of Canada and the British colonies, the French colonies, the republics of Mexico and of Central and South America, and the commissioners of Cuba and Porto Rico, who share with us in this undertaking, we give the hand of fellowship and felicitate with them upon the triumphs of art, science, education and manufacture which the old has bequeathed to the new century.

Timekeepers of Progress.

"Expositions are the timekeepers of progress. They record the world's advancement. They stimulate the energy, enterprise and intellect of the people and quicken human genius. They go into the home. They broaden and brighten the daily life of the people. They open mighty storehouses of information to the student.

"Every exposition, great or small, has helped to some onward step. Comparison of ideas is always educational and as such instructs the brain and hand of man. Friendly rivalry follows, which is the spur to industrial improvement, the inspiration to useful invention and to high endeavor in all departments of human activity. It exacts a study of the wants, comforts, and even the whims of the people and recognizes the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor.

"The quest for trade is an incentive to men of business to devise, invent, improve, and economize in the cost of production. Business life, whether among ourselves or with other people, is ever a sharp struggle for success. It will be none the less so in the future. Without competition we would be clinging to the clumsy and antiquated process of farming and manufacture and the methods of business of long ago, and the twentieth would be no further advanced than the eighteenth century. But though commercial competitors we are, commercial enemies we must not be.

Mission of the Exposition.

"The Pan-American exposition has done its work thoroughly, presenting in its exhibits evidences of the highest skill and illustrating the progress of the human family in the western hemisphere. This portion of the earth has no cause for humiliation for the part it has performed in the march of civilization. It has not accomplished everything; far from it. It has simply done its best, and without vanity or boastfulness, and, recognizing the manifold achievements of others, it invites the friendly rivalry of all the powers in the peaceful pursuits of trade and commerce, and will cooperate with all in advancing the highest and best interests of humanity. The wisdom and energy of all the nations are none too great for the world's work. The success of art, science, industry and invention is an international asset and a common glory.

"After all, how near one to the other is every part of the world! Modern inventions have brought into close relation widely separated peoples and made them better acquainted. Geographic and political divisions will continue to exist, but distances have been effaced. Swift ships and fast trains are becoming cosmopolitan. They invade fields which a few years ago were impenetrable. The world's products are changed as never before, and with increasing transportation facilities come increasing knowledge and trade. Prices are fixed with mathematical precision by supply and demand. The world's selling prices are regulated by market and crop reports. We travel greater distances in a shorter space of time and with more ease than was ever dreamed of by the fathers.

Isolation No Longer Possible.

"Isolation is no longer possible or desirable. The same important news is read, though in different languages, the same day in all Christendom. The telegraph keeps us advised of what is occurring everywhere, and the press foreshadows, with more or less accuracy, the plans and purposes of the nations. Market prices of products and of securities are hourly known in every commercial mart, and the investments of the people extend beyond their own national boundaries into the remotest parts of the earth.

"Vast transactions are conducted and international exchanges are made by the tick of the cable. Every event of interest is immediately bulletined. The quick gathering and transmission of news, like rapid transit, are of recent origin, and are only made possible by the genius of the inventor and the courage of the investor.

"It took a special messenger of the government with every facility known at the time for rapid transit 19 days to go from the city of Washington to New Orleans with a message to Gen. Jackson that the war with England had censed and a treaty of peace had been signed. How different now.

Achievements of the Telegraph.

"We reached Gen. Miles in Porto Rico by cable and he was able through the military telegraph to stop his army on the firing line with the message that the United States and Spain had signed a protocol suspending hostilities. We knew almost instantly of the first shots fired at Santiago and the subsequent surrender of the Spanish forces was known at Washington within less than an hour of its consummation. The first ship of Cervera's fleet was hardly emerged from that historic harbor when the fact was flashed to our capital, and the swift destruction that followed was announced immediately through the wonderful medium of telegraphy.

"So accustomed are we to safe and easy communication with distant lands that its temporary interruption even in ordinary times results in loss and inconvenience. We shall never forget the days of anxious waiting and awful suspense when no information was permitted to be sent from Peking and the diplomatic representatives of the nations in China, cut off from all communication inside and outside the walled capital, were surrounded by an angry and misguided mob that threatened their lives; nor the joy that thrilled the world when a single message from the government of the United States brought through our minister the first news of the safety of the besieged diplomats.

Progress of a Century.

"At the beginning of the nineteenth century there was not a mile of steam railroad on the globe. Now there are enough miles to make its circuit many times. Then there was not a line of electric telegraph; now we have a vast mileage traversing all lands and all seas. God and man have linked the nations together. No nation can longer be indifferent to any other. And as we are brought more and more in touch with each other the less occasion is there for misunderstanding and the stronger the disposition, when we have differences, to adjust them in the court of arbitration, which is the noblest forum for the settlement of international disputes.

Our Unexampled Prosperity.

"My fellow-citizens, trade statistics indicate that this country is in a state of unexampled prosperity. The figures are almost appalling. They show that we are utilizing our fields and forests and mines and that we are furnishing profitable employment to the millions of workingmen throughout the United States, bringing comfort and happiness to their homes and making it possible to lay by savings for old age and disability.

"That all the people are participating in this great prosperity is seen in every American community and shown by the enormous and unprecedented deposits in our savings banks. Our duty is the care and security of these deposits, and their safe investment demands the highest integrity and the best business capacity of those in charge of these depositories of the people's earnings.

"We have a vast and intricate business built up through years of toil and struggle, in which every part of the country has its stake, which will not permit of either neglect or of undue selfishness. No narrow, sordid policy will subserve it. The greatest skill and wisdom on the part of the manufacturers and producers will be required to hold and increase it.

"Our industrial enterprises which have grown to such proportions affect the homes and occupations of the people and the welfare of the country. Our capacity to produce has developed so enormously and our products have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention.

"Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have. No other policy will get more. In these times of marvelous business energy and gain we ought to be looking into the future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems that we may be ready for any storm or strain.

Prosperity Demands Reciprocity.

"By sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production, we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus.

"A system which provides a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. If such a thing were possible it would not be best for us or for those with whom we deal. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to our industries and labor.

"Reciprocity is the natural outgrowth of our wonderful industrial development under the domestic policy now firmly established. What we produce beyond our domestic consumption must have a vent abroad. The excess must be relieved through a foreign outlet, and we should sell everywhere we can, and buy wherever the buying will enlarge our sales and productions, and thereby make a greater demand for home labor.

Exclusive No Longer.

"The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not.

"If, perchance, some of our tariffs are no longer needed for revenue or to encourage and protect our industries at home, why should they not be employed to extend and promote our markets abroad?

Need of Merchant Marine.

"Then, too, we have inadequate steamship service. New lines of steamers have already been put in commission between the Pacific coast ports of the United States and those on the western coasts of Mexico and Central and South America. These should be followed up with direct steamship lines between the eastern coast of the United States and South American ports.

"One of the needs of the times is direct commercial lines from our vast fields of production to the fields of consumption that we have but barely touched. Next in advantage to having the thing to sell is to have the convenience to carry it to the buyer.

"We must encourage our merchant marine. We must have more ships. They must be under the American flag, built and manned and owned by Americans. These will not only be profitable in a commercial sense; they will be messengers of peace and amity wherever they go.

Must Build Isthmian Canal.

"We must build the isthmian canal, which will unite the two oceans and give a straight line of water communication with the western coasts of Central and South America and Mexico. The construction of a Pacific cable cannot be longer postponed.

"In the furtherance of these objects of national interest and concern you are performing an important part. This exposition would have touched the heart of that American statesman whose mind was ever alert and thought ever constant for a larger commerce and a truer fraternity of the republics of the new world. His broad American spirit is felt and manifested here. He needs no identification to an assembly of Americans anywhere, for the name of Blaine is inseparably associated with the Pan-American movement which finds this practical and substantial expression, and which we all hope will be firmly advanced by the Pan-American congress that assembles this autumn in the capital of Mexico.

"The good work will go on. It cannot be stopped. These buildings will disappear; this creation of art, and beauty, and industry will perish from sight, but there influence will remain to "'Make it live beyond its too short living

With praises and thanksgiving."

Victory of Peace, Not War.

"Who can tell the new thoughts that have been awakened, the ambitions fired, and the high achievements that will be wrought through this exposition? Gentlemen, let us ever remember that our interest is in concord, not conflict, and that our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war. We hope that all who are represented here may be moved to higher and nobler effort for their own and the world's good, and that out of this city may come, not only greater commerce and trade for us all, but, more essential than these, relations of mutual respect, confidence, and friendship, which will deepen and endure.

"Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth."

President McKinley.

William McKinley, like Abraham Lincoln, had sprung from the heart of the common people. He was one of those who had taken part in the strife between fraternal states. Out of it he carried no bitterness, but, catching the spirit of the dying Lincoln, his heart grew broad as the union and was filled with love of his fellow-man. He looked forward to the time when America might rejoice in the bravery of all her sons, and when the union, linked heart to heart, would have its strongest bond of perpetuity. He became president, and, notwithstanding his peaceful nature, was destined to be a war president. It became his country's privilege during his administration to end 400 years of cruelty in Cuba, to carry the American flag around the globe and plant it in the Philippines, to penetrate the heart of China and to place the United States on a plane with the powers of the earth in Peking.—Atlanta Constitution (Dem.).

OUR NATIONAL NEEDS

Vice President Roosevelt's Speech at Minneapolis.

In an address at the state fair grounds, Minneapolis, Monday, September 2, Vice President Roosevelt made some notable declarations which, now that he is president, will have some special interest for the people. In the course of his remarks he paid a high tribute to the character and energy of his hearers, descended, he said, from a race of pioneers which had pushed westward into the wilderness and laid the foundations for new commonwealths. The men with ax and pick, and plow, who, he said, had pushed to completion the dominion of our people over the American wilderness had shown by their qualities of daring, endurance and far-sightedness that they recognized in practical form the fundamental law of success in American life—the law of worthy work; the law of resolute, high endeavor. Continuing, he said: "It seems to me that the simple acceptance of this fundamental fact of American life will help us to start aright in facing not a few of the problems that confront us from without and from within.

"We cannot possibly do our best work as a nation unless all of us know how to act in combination as well as to act each individually for himself. This acting in combination can take many forms, but of course its most effective form must be when it comes in shape of law, that is, of action by the community as a whole through the law-making body.

"No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to where our legislation shall stop in interfering between man and man, between interest and interest. All that can be said is that it is highly undesirable on the one hand to weaken individual initiative, and, on the other hand, that in a constantly increasing number of cases we shall find it necessary in the future to shackle cunning as in the past we have shackled force.

Legislation for Wage-Workers.

"It is not highly desirable, but necessary, that there should be legislation which shall carefully shield the interests of wageworkers and which shall discriminate in favor of the honest and humane employer by removing the disadvantage under which he stands when compared with unscrupulous competitors who have no conscience and will do right only under fear of punishment.

"Nor can legislation stop with what are termed labor questions. The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital which have marked the development of our industrial system, create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of the state and nation toward prosperity."

There was, he contended, but the scantiest justification for most of the outcry against men of wealth, as such, and it ought to be unnecessary, he said, to state that any appeal which finally entails the possibility of lawlessness and violence is an attack upon the fundamental properties of American citizenship.

As to Foreign Relations.

As to our relations with foreign powers Vice President Roosevelt said that our nation, while first of all seeing to its own domestic well being, must not shrink from playing its part among the great nations without.

"Our duty," he said, "may take many forms in the future as it has taken many forms in the past. Nor is it possible to lay down a hard and fast rule for all cases. We must ever face the fact of our shifting national needs, of the always changing opportunities that present themselves. But we may be certain of one thing, whether we wish it or not, we cannot avoid hereafter having duties to do in the face of other nations. All that we can do is to settle whether we shall perform those duties well or ill."

He counseled courtesy and respect in all dealings with any foreign power with whom the government might come in contact. On this point he added:

"Let us make it evident that we intend to do justice. Then let us make it equally evident that we will not tolerate injustice being done to us in return. Let us further make it evident that we use no words which we are not prepared to back up with deeds, and that while our speech is always moderate, we are ready and willing to make it good. Such an attitude will be the surest possible guarantee of that self-respecting peace, the attainment of which is and must ever be the prime aim of a self-governing people."

Must Enforce Monroe Doctrine.

"This is the attitude we must take as regards the Monroe doctrine.

"We do not by this policy intend to sanction any policy of aggression by one American commonwealth at the expense of any other, nor any policy of commercial discrimination against any foreign power whatsoever. Commercially, as far as this doctrine is concerned, all we wish is a fair field and no favor, but if we are wise we shall strenuously insist that, under no pretext whatsoever, shall there be any territorial aggrandizement on American soil by any European power, and this, no matter what form the territorial aggrandizement may take."

The vice president concluded with a discussion of the subject of expansion and a review of what had been accomplished in Cuba and the Philippines toward a free and independent commonwealth of the former, and, "ultimately, a self-governing people" of the latter.

Wm. McKinley, Third of Our Martyr Presidents

Christian-Gentleman, Soldier, Lawyer and Statesman

A BRIEF HISTORY OF HIS LIFE

The ancestry of William McKinley can be traced back to the old Scotch Covenanters of three centuries ago. During the reign of Charles II. the family migrated to the north of Ireland. From the north of Ireland about the year 1740 two McKinley brothers came to this country. One of these brothers, James, was the great-great-grandfather of the late president. His son David McKinley was a revolutionary hero, and a Jeffersonian democrat. He died in the year 1840. Through this David McKinley's wife Hannah C. Rose, the English Puritan stock became mingled with the Scotch Covenanter stock in President McKinley's blood. The grandfather of Hannah C. Rose was an English Puritan leader who settled in Pennsylvania, and who had somewhat to do with the government of that colony. McKinley's grandfather in 1809 moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio. William McKinley, Sr., was born in Pennsylvania in 1807.

HOUSE IN WHICH MCKINLEY WAS BORN AT NILES, O.

William McKinley was a seventh son. There were eight other children in the family. He was born at Niles, Trumbull county, O., January 29, 1843. From this town, then a little village of iron-workers, the family moved to Poland, O., on the western reserve, for the better education of the children. It had been his mother's ambition, as well as his own, that he receive a thorough college education. He attended the academy at Poland, and from there went to the Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa. Ill health took him home in his junior year. The next winter he spent teaching in a district school for a salary of $25 and his board.

At the outbreak of the civil war young McKinley enlisted as a private in the Twenty-third Ohio infantry. He served under men who afterward became well known to the nation. His first colonel was Rosecrans, later the famous major general. Stanley Matthews, who achieved distinction as United States senator and associate justice in the United States supreme court, was his lieutenant colonel. His major was President Rutherford B. Hayes.

McKinley saw his first battle at Carnifex Ferry. Later the regiment joined McClellan's Army of the Potomac. At Antietam McKinley was a sergeant. His bravery on this occasion led to his receiving a commission as second lieutenant. He was a staff officer under Gens. Hayes, Cook and Carroll. At 20 he was a first lieutenant, and a year later a captain. Just before the close of the war President Lincoln signed the commission giving him the brevet rank of major. During the war he cast his first vote for president, and helped to swell the Lincoln majority.

At the close of the war the youthful major (aged 22) decided to fit himself as a lawyer. He had been urged to apply for a commission in the regular army, but his tastes and predilections were those of a man of peace. He entered the office of Judge Charles E. Gidden at Poland, and made good progress in the study of law. After a year and a half's work he went to Albany, N. Y., where he completed his legal studies. He was admitted to the bar in 1867, and opened a law office at Canton.

It was the centennial year that Maj. McKinley made his entrance into national politics. In 1876 he declared himself a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in his district and he received the nomination over three opponents on the first ballot. He was not only nominated but elected, which feat he repeated half a dozen times, representing the people of Stark and the surrounding counties of Ohio in congress for the 14 years from 1876 to 1890.

During that period the democrats gerrymandered the district three times in attempts to drive him out of congress, in which he was making himself famous. The first two attempts failed, but the last in 1890 did not. A popular candidate was nominated by the democrats in the person of ex-Lieut. Gov. Warwick. McKinley was finally defeated by the slender majority of 363 votes. This defeat followed closely after the passage of the McKinley bill, the high tariff measure to which Maj. McKinley had given his name and for which he stood as sponsor on account of his position in congress as chairman of the committee of ways and means and the leader of the republican majority in the house. Astute politicians predicted the complete political extinction of McKinley after his defeat in 1890. Not only had he gone down in the wreck, but his party's majority in the lower house of congress had followed its leader. The whole battle had been fought and lost on the issue of the McKinley bill. The decision of the people was thought by politicians and by the people themselves to be final.

Yet the following year he was elected governor of Ohio, and two years later was reelected. Almost before his term as governor of Ohio had expired he was nominated and elected to the highest office the people of this country have within their power to bestow.

The second term of McKinley as governor of Ohio marked the crystallization of the sentiment of his admirers all over the country that he be made the republican nominee for president in 1896.

* * * * *

The startling events of his first term, the blowing up of the Maine, the Spanish war and our quick and decisive victory, the driving of the Spaniards out of Cuba and our promise to liberate that much-abused island and place it among the republics of the western hemisphere, our annexation of Porto Rico, the Hawaiian islands and the Philippines, are all part of contemporaneous history. When Mr. McKinley's term neared its close last year such a deep hold had he secured upon the affections of his party that his was the only name mentioned for his successor. He was renominated by acclamation and Theodore Roosevelt, then governor of New York, was placed upon the ticket with him to fill the vacancy caused in the vice presidency by the death of Vice President Hobart.

When the election day came last November President McKinley was found to have been reelected with the same emphasis which the people showed when they declared their choice of him the first time. He was given 7,333,715 votes to 6,255,668 for Bryan, a plurality of 978,047 votes for McKinley over Bryan and a majority of 623,527 votes over all the other candidates for president.

Many species of corn are growing in Bolivia which are unknown in the United States. One variety has grains twice as large as those of the largest corn grown by our farmers. One kind is of a bright yellow color, every grain being as large as a thumb nail. When bitten it crumbles up almost like flour, and with a slight brushing it could be turned into meal.

His Last Address

President McKinley's Memorable Speech at Buffalo. Words That Will Ring Through Time. Progress and Prosperity Perpetuated Through Pacific Policy—The True Basis of National Greatness.

On the Pan-American exposition grounds at Buffalo, Thursday, September 5, transpirted an event the memory of which will linger ever in the minds of men. The day preceding that on which President McKinley received the fatal wound at the hands of an anarchist assassin, the nation's foremost citizen and statesman spoke to the people in words that will leave their impress upon the pages of American history. In them the world will read the promptings of a great heart and the logic of a master mind. The words of the lamented president would seem to have been uttered under the dawning consciousness of his coming end, so full of inspiration were they. President McKinley was introduced by President Milburn, of the exposition, and was received by the vast audience with tumultuous enthusiasm, upon the subsidence of which he spoke as follows:

President McKinley's Address.

"I am glad to be again in the city of Buffalo and exchange greetings with her people, to whose generous hospitality I am not a stranger, and with whose good will I have been repeatedly and signally honored. Today I have additional satisfaction in meeting and giving welcome to the foreign representatives assembled here, whose presence and participation in this exposition have contributed in so marked a degree to its interests and success.

"To the commissioners of the Dominion of Canada and the British colonies, the French colonies, the republics of Mexico and of Central and South America, and the commissioners of Cuba and Porto Rico, who share with us in this undertaking, we give the hand of fellowship and felicitate with them upon the triumphs of art, science, education and manufacture which the old has bequeathed to the new century.

Timekeepers of Progress.

"Expositions are the timekeepers of progress. They record the world's advancement. They stimulate the energy, enterprise and intellect of the people and quicken human genius. They go into the home. They broaden and brighten the daily life of the people. They open mighty storehouses of information to the student.

"Every exposition, great or small, has helped to some onward step. Comparison of ideas is always educational and as such instructs the brain and hand of man. Friendly rivalry follows, which is the spur to industrial improvement, the inspiration to useful invention and to high endeavor in all departments of human activity. It exacts a study of the wants, comforts, and even the whims of the people and recognizes the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor.

"The quest for trade is an incentive to men of business to devise, invent, improve, and economize in the cost of production. Business life, whether among ourselves or with other people, is ever a sharp struggle for success. It will be none the less so in the future. Without competition we would be clinging to the clumsy and antiquated process of farming and manufacture and the methods of business of long ago, and the twentieth would be no further advanced than the eighteenth century. But though commercial competitors we are, commercial enemies we must not be.

"The Pan-American exposition has done its work thoroughly, presenting in its exhibits evidences of the highest skill and illustrating the progress of the human family in the western hemisphere. This portion of the earth has no cause for humiliation for the part it has performed in the march of civilization. It has not accomplished everything; far from it. It has simply done its best, and without vanity or boastfulness, and, recognizing the manifold achievements of others, it invites the friendly rivalry of all the powers in the peaceful pursuits of trade and commerce, and will cooperate with all in advancing the highest and best interests of humanity. The wisdom and energy of all the nations are none too great for the world's work. The success of art, science, industry and invention is an international asset and a common glory.

"After all, how near one to the other is every part of the world! Modern inventions have brought into close relation widely separated peoples and made them better acquainted. Geographic and political divisions will continue to exist, but distances have been effaced. Swift ships and fast trains are becoming cosmopolitan. They invade fields which a few years ago were impenetrable. The world's products are changed as never before, and with increasing transportation facilities come increasing knowledge and trade. Prices are fixed with mathematical precision by supply and demand. The world's selling prices are regulated by market and crop reports. We travel greater distances in a shorter space of time and with more ease than was ever dreamed of by the fathers.

Isolation No Longer Possible.

"Isolation is no longer possible or desirable. The same important news is read, though in different languages, the same day in all Christendom. The telegraph keeps us advised of what is occurring everywhere, and the press foreshadows, with more or less accuracy, the plans and purposes of the nations. Market prices of products and of securities are hourly known in every commercial mart, and the investments of the people extend beyond their own national boundaries into the remotest parts of the earth.

"Vast transactions are conducted and international exchanges are made by the tick of the cable. Every event of interest is immediately bulletined. The quick gathering and transmission of news, like rapid transit, are of recent origin, and are only made possible by the genius of the inventor and the courage of the investor.

"It took a special messenger of the government with every facility known at the time for rapid transit 19 days to go from the city of Washington to New Orleans with a message to Gen. Jackson that the war with England had ceased and a treaty of peace had been signed. How different now.

Achievements of the Telegraph.

"We reached Gen. Miles in Porto Rico by cable and he was able through the military telegraph to stop his army on the firing line with the message that the United States and Spain had signed a protocol suspending hostilities. We knew almost instantly of the first shots fired at Santiago and the subsequent surrender of the Spanish forces was known at Washington within less than an hour of its consummation. The first ship of Cervera's fleet was hardly emerged from that historic harbor when the fact was flashed to our capital, and the swift destruction that followed was announced immediately through the wonderful medium of telegraphy.

"So accustomed are we to safe and easy communication with distant lands that its temporary interruption even in ordinary times results in loss and inconvenience. We shall never forget the days of anxious waiting and awful suspense when no information was permitted to be sent from Peking and the diplomatic representatives of the nations in China, cut off from all communication inside and outside the walled capital, were surrounded by an angry and misguided mob that threatened their lives; nor the joy that thrilled the world when a single message from the government of the United States brought through our minister the first news of the safety of the besieged diplomats.

Progress of a Century.

"At the beginning of the nineteenth century there was not a mile of steam railroad on the globe. Now there are enough miles to make its circuit many times. Then there was not a line of electric telegraph; now we have a vast mileage traversing all lands and all seas. God and man have linked the nations together. No nation can longer be indifferent to any other. And as we are brought more and more in touch with each other the less occasion is there for misunderstanding and the stronger the disposition, when we have differences, to adjust them in the court of arbitration, which is the noblest forum for the settlement of international disputes.

Our Unexampled Prosperity.

"My fellow-citizens, trade statistics indicate that this country is in a state of unexampled prosperity. The figures are almost appalling. They show that we are utilizing our fields and forests and mines and that we are furnishing profitable employment to the millions of workingmen throughout the United States, bringing comfort and happiness to their homes and making it possible to lay by savings for old age and disability.

"That all the people are participating in this great prosperity is seen in every American community and shown by the enormous and unprecedented deposits in our savings banks. Our duty is the care and security of these deposits, and their safe investment demands the highest integrity and the best business capacity of those in charge of these depositories of the people's earnings.

"We have a vast and intricate business built up through years of toil and struggle, in which every part of the country has its stake, which will not permit of either neglect or of undue selfishness. No narrow, sordid policy will subserve it. The greatest skill and wisdom on the part of the manufacturers and producers will be required to hold and increase it.

"Our industrial enterprises which have grown to such proportions affect the homes and occupations of the people and the welfare of the country. Our capacity to produce has developed so enormously and our products have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention.

"Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have. No other policy will get more. In these times of marvelous business energy and gain we ought to be looking into the future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems that we may be ready for any storm or strain.

Prosperity Demands Reciprocity.

"My sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production, we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus.

"A system which provides a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. If such a thing were posible it would not be best for us or for those with whom we deal. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to our industries and labor.

"Reciprocity is the natural outgrowth of our wonderful industrial development under the domestic policy now firmly established. What we produce beyond our domestic consumption must have a vent abroad. The excess must be relieved through a foreign outlet, and we should sell everywhere we can, and buy wherever the buying will enlarge our sales and productions, and thereby make a greater demaud for home labor.

Exclusive No Longer.

"The period of exclusiveuess is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not.

"If, perchance, some of our tariffs are no longer needed for revenue or to encourage and protect our industries at home, why should they not be employed to extend and promote our markets abroad?

Need of Merchant Marine.

"Then, too, we have inadequate steamship service. New lines of steamers have already been put in commission between the Pacific coast ports of the United States and those on the western coasts of Mexico and Central and South America. These should be followed up with direct steamship lines between the eastern coast of the United States and South American ports.

"One of the needs of the times is direct commercial lines from our vast fields of production to the fields of consumption that we have but barely touched. Next in advantage to having the thing to sell is to have the convenience to carry it to the buyer.

"We must encourage our merchant marine. We must have more ships. They must be under the American flag, built and manned and owned by Americans. These will not only be profitable in a commercial sense; they will be messengers of peace and amity wherever they go.

Must Build Isthmian Canal.

"We must build the isthmian canal, which will unite the two oceans and give a straight line of water communication with the western coasts of Central and South America and Mexico. The construction of a Pacific cable cannot be longer postponed.

"In the furtherance of these objects of national interest and concern you are performing an important part. This exposition would have touched the heart of that American statesman whose mind was ever alert and thought ever constant for a larger commerce and a truer fraternity of the republics of the new world. His broad American spirit is felt and manifested here. He needs no identification to an assembly of Americans anywhere, for the name of Blaine is inseparably associated with the Pan-American movement which finds this practical and substantial expression, and which we all hope will be firmly advanced by the Pan-American congress that assembles this autumn in the capital of Mexico.

"The good work will go on. It cannot be stopped. These buildings will disappear; this creation of art, and beauty, and industry will perish from sight, but there influence will remain to "'Make it live beyond its too short living With praises and thanksgiving."

Victory of Peace, Not War.

"Who can tell the new thoughts that have been awakened, the ambitions fired, and the high achievements that will be wrought through this exposition? Gentlemen, let us ever remember that our interest is in concord, not conflict, and that our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war. We hope that all who are represented here may be moved to higher and nobler effort for their own and the world's good, and that out of this city may come, not only greater commerce and trade for us all, but, more essential than these, relations of mutual respect, confidence, and friendship, which will deepen and endure.

"Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth."

President McKinley.

William McKinley, like Abraham Lincoln, had sprung from the heart of the common people. He was one of those who had taken part in the strife between fraternal states. Out of it he carried no bitterness, but, catching the spirit of the dying Lincoln, his heart grew broad as the union and was filled with love of his fellow-man. He looked forward to the time when America might rejoice in the bravery of all her sons, and when the union, linked heart to heart, would have its strongest bond of perpetuity. He became president, and, notwithstanding his peaceful nature, was destined to be a war president. It became his country's privilege during his administration to end 400 years of cruelty in Cuba, to carry the American flag around the globe and plant it in the Philippines, to penetrate the heart of China and to place the United States on a plane with the powers of the earth in Peking.—Atlanta Constitution (Dem.).

Vice President Roosevelt's Speech at Minneapolis.

In an address at the state fair grounds, Minneapolis, Monday, September 2, Vice President Roosevelt made some notable declarations which, now that he is president, will have some special interest for the people. In the course of his remarks he paid a high tribute to the character and energy of his hearers, descended, he said, from a race of pioneers which had pushed westward into the wilderness and laid the foundations for new commonwenlths. The men with ax, and pick, and plow, who, he said, had pushed to completion the dominion of our people over the American wilderness had shown by their qualities of daring, endurance and far-sightedness that they recognized in practical form the fundamental law of success in American life—the law of worthy work; the law of resolute, high endeavor. Continuing, he said: "It seems to me that the simple acceptance of this fundamental fact of American life will help us to start aright in facing not a few of the problems that confront us from without and from within.

"We cannot possibly do our best work as a nation unless all of us know how to act in combination as well as to act each individually for himself. This acting in combination can take many forms, but of course its most effective form must be when it comes in shape of law, that is, of action by the community as a whole through the law-making body.

"No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to where our legislation shall stop in interfering between man and man, between interest and interest. All that can be said is that it is highly undesirable on the one hand to weaken individual initiative, and, on the other hand, that in a constantly increasing number of cases we shall find it necessary in the future to shackle cunning as in the past we have shackled force.

Legislation for Wage-Workers.

"It is not highly desirable, but necessary, that there should be legislation which shall carefully shield the interests of wageworkers and which shall discriminate in favor of the honest and humane employer by removing the disadvantage under which he stands when compared with unscrupulous competitors who have no conscience and will do right only under fear of punishment.

"Nor can legislation stop with what are termed labor questions. The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital which have marked the development of our industrial system, create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of the state and nation toward prosperity."

There was, he contended, but the scantiest justification for most of the outcry against men of wealth, as such, and it ought to be unnecessary, he said, to state that any appeal which finally entails the possibility of lawlessness and violence is an attack upon the fundamental properties of American citizenship.

As to Foreign Relations.

As to our relations with foreign powers Vice President Roosevelt said that our nation, while first of all seeing to its own domestic well being, must not shrink from playing its part among the great nations without.

"Our duty," he said, "may take many forms in the future as it has taken many forms in the past. Nor is it possible to lay down a hard and fast rule for all cases. We must ever face the fact of our shifting national needs, of the always changing opportunities that present themselves. But we may be certain of one thing, whether we wish it or not, we cannot avoid hereafter having duties to do in the face of other nations. All that we can do is to settle whether we shall perform those duties well or ill."

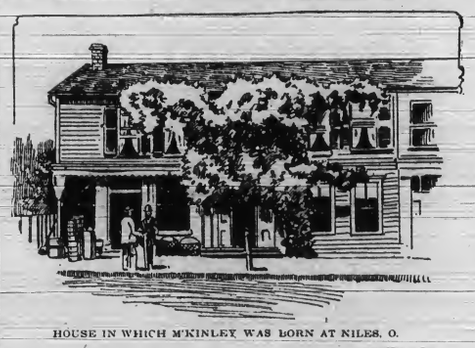
He counseled courtesy and respect in all dealings with any foreign power with whom the government might come in contact. On this point he added:

"Let us make it evident that we intend to do justice. Then let us make it equally evident that we will not tolerate injustice being done to us in return. Let us further make it evident that we use no words which we are not prepared to back up with deeds, and that while our speech is always moderate, we are ready and willing to make it good. Such an attitude will be the surest possible guarantee of that self-respecting peace, the attainment of which is and must ever be the prime aim of a self-governing people."

Must Enforce Monroe Doctrine.

"This is the attitude we must take as regards the Monroe doctrine.

"We do not by this policy intend to sanction any policy of aggression by one American commonwealth at the expense of any other, nor any policy of commercial discrimination against any foreign power whatsoever. Commercially, as far as this doctrine is concerned, all we wish is a fair field and no favor, but if we are wise we shall strenuously insist that, under no pretext whatsoever, shall there be any territorial aggrandizement on American soil by any European power, and this, no matter what form the territorial aggrandizement may take."



The vice president concluded with a discussion of the subject of expansion and a review of what had been accomplished in Cuba and the Philippines toward a free and independent commonwealth of the former, and, "ultimately, a self-governing people" of the latter.

Wm. McKinley, Third of Our Martyr Presidents

Christian-Gentleman, Soldier, Lawyer and Statesman

A BRIEF HISTORY OF HIS LIFE

The ancestry of William McKinley can be traced back to the old Scotch Covenanters of three centuries ago. During the reign of Charles II. the family migrated to the north of Ireland. From the north of Ireland about the year 1740 two McKinley brothers came to this country. One of these brothers, James, was the great-great-graadfather of the late president. His son David McKinley was a revolutionary hero, and a Jeffersonian democrat. He died in the year 1840. Through this David McKinley's wife, Hannah C. Rose, the English Puritan stock became mingled with the Scotch Covenanter stock in President McKinley's blood. The grandfather of Hannah C. Rose was an English Puritan leader who settled in Pennsylvania, and who had somewhat to do with the government of that colony. McKinley's grandfather in 1809 moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio. William McKinley, Sr., was born in Pennsylvania in 1807.

HOUSE IN WHICH M'KINLEY WAS BORN AT NILES, O.

William McKinley was a seventh son. There were eight other children in the family. He was born at Niles, Trumbull county, O., January 29, 1843. From this town, then a little village of iron-workers, the family moved to Poland, O., on the western reserve, for the better education of the children. It had been his mother's ambition, as well as his own, that he receive a thorough college education. He attended the academy at Poland, and from there went to the Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa. Ill health took him home in his junior year. The next winter he spent teaching in a district school for a salary of $25 and his board.

At the outbreak of the civil war young McKinley enlisted as a private in the Twenty-third Ohio infantry. He served under men who afterward became well known to the nation. His first colonel was Rosecrans, later the famous major general. Stanley Matthews, who achieved distinction as United States senator and associate justice in the United States supreme court, was his lieutenant colonel. His major was President Rutherford B. Hayes.

McKinley saw his first battle at Carnifex Ferry. Later the regiment joined McClellan's Army of the Potomac. At Antietam McKinley was a sergeant. His bravery on this occasion led to his receiving a commission as second lieutenant. He was a staff officer under Gens. Hayes, Cook and Carroll. At 20 he was a first lieutenant, and a year later a captain. Just before the close of the war President Lincoln signed the commission giving him the brevet rank of major. During the war he cast his first vote for president, and helped to swell the Lincoln majority.

At the close of the war the youthful major (aged 23) decided to fit himself as a lawyer. He had been urged to apply for a commission in the regular army, but his tastes and predilections were those of a man of peace. He entered the office of Judge Charles E. Glidden at Poland, and made good progress in the study of law. After a year and a half's work he went to Albany, N. Y., where he completed his legal studies. He was admitted to the bar in 1867, and opened a law office at Canton.

It was the centennial year that Maj. McKinley made his entrance into national politics. In 1876 he declared himself a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in his district and he received the nomination over three opponents on the first ballot. He was not only nominated but elected, which feat he repeated half a dozen times, representing the people of Stark and the surrounding counties of Ohio in congress for the 14 years from 1876 to 1890.

During that period the democrats gerrymandered the district three times in attempts to drive him out of congress, in which he was making himself famous. The first two attempts failed, but the last in 1890 did not. A popular candidate was nominated by the democrats in the person of ex-Lieut. Gov. Warwick. McKinley was finally defeated by the slender majority of 363 votes. This defeat followed closely after the passage of the McKinley bill, the high tariff measure to which Maj. McKinley had given his name and for which he stood as sponsor on account of his position in congress as chairman of the committee of ways and means and the leader of the republican majority in the house. Astute politicians predicted the complete political extinction of McKinley after his defeat in 1890. Not only had he gone down in the wreck, but his party's majority in the lower house of congress had followed its leader. The whole battle had been fought and lost on the issue of the McKinley bill. The decision of the people was thought by politicians and by the people themselves to be final.

Yet the following year he was elected governor of Ohio, and two years later was reelected. Almost before his term as governor of Ohio had expired he was nominated and elected to the highest office the people of this country have within their power to bestow.

The second term of McKinley as governor of Ohio marked the crystallization of the sentiment of his admirers all over the country that he be made the republican nominee for president in 1896.

* * * * *

The startling events of his first term, the blowing up of the Maine, the Spanish war and our quick and decisive victory, the driving of the Spaniards out of Cuba and our promise to liberate that much-abused island and place it among the republics of the western hemisphere, our annexation of Porto Rico, the Hawaiian islands and the Philippines, are all part of contemporaneous history. When Mr. McKinley's term neared its close last year such a deep hold had he secured upon the affections of his party that his was the only name mentioned for his successor. He was renominated by acclamation and Theodore Roosevelt, then governor of New York, was placed upon the ticket with him to fill the vacancy caused in the vice presidency by the death of Vice President Hobart.

When the election day came last November President McKinley was found to have been reelected with the same emphasis which the people showed when they declared their choice of him the first time. He was given 7,233,715 votes to 6,355,668 for Bryan, a plurality of 978,047 votes for McKinley over Bryan and a majority of 623,627 votes over all the other candidates for president.

THE SPIRIT OF AMITY

Dr. Talmage Commends Good Feeling Among Mankind.

Mentions Illustrious Examples in His Sermon—The Grace of Forgiveness — Kindness a Magnificent World.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage commends the spirit of amity and good feeling and mentions illustrious examples of that spirit; text, Acts, 34:2, "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Here we are on the island of Malta, another name for Melita. This island, which has always been an important commercial center, belonging at different times to Phoenicia, to Greece, to Rome, to Arabia, to Spain, to France, now belongs to England. The area of the islands is 100 square miles. It is in the Mediterranean sea and of such clarity of atmosphere that Mount Aetna, 130 miles away, can be distinctly seen. The island is gloriously memorable because the knights of Malta for a long while ruled there, but most famous because of the apostolic shipwreck. The bestormed vessel on which Paul sailed had "laid to" on the starboard tack, and the wind was blowing east-northeast, and, the vessel drifting probably a mile and a half an hour. She struck at what is now called St. Paul's bay. Practical sailors have taken up the Bible account and decided beyond controversy the place of the shipwreck. But the island, which has so rough a coast, is for the most part a garden. Richest fruits and a profusion of honey characterized it in St. Paul's time as well as now. The finest oranges, figs and olives grew there.

When Paul and his comrades crawled up the beach, saturated and hungry from long abstinence from food and chilled to the bone, the islanders, though called barbarians because they could not speak Greek, opened their doors to the shipwrecked unfortunates. Everything had gone to the bottom of the deep, and the barefooted, barcheaded apostle and ship's crew were in a condition to appreciate hospitality. About 25 such men a few years ago I found in the life station near East Hampton, Long Island. They had got ashore in the night from the sea, and not a hat or shoe had they left. They found out, as Paul and his fellow voyagers found out, that the sea is the roughest of all robbers. My text finds the ship's crew ashore on Malta and around a hot fire drying themselves and with the best provision the islanders can offer them. And they go into government quarters for three days to recuperate. Publius, the ruler, inviting them, although he had severe sickness in the house at the time, his father down with a dangerous illness. Yes, for three months they stayed on the island, watching for a ship and putting the hospitalities of the islanders to a severe test. But it endured the test satisfactorily, and it is recorded for all the ages of time and eternity to read and hear in regard to the Inhabitants of Malta: "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Kindness! What a great word that is! It would take a reed as long as that which the apocalyptic angel used to measure Heaven to tell the length, the breadth, the height of that munificent word. It is a favorite Bible word, and it is early inclached in the book of Genesis, caught up in the book of Joshua, embraced in the book of Ruth, sworn by in the book of Samuel, crowned in the book of Psalms and enthroned in many places in the New Testament. Kindness! A word no more gentle than mighty. I expect it will wrestle me down before I get through with it. It is strong enough to throw an archangel. But it will be well for us to stand around it and warm ourselves by its glow as Paul and his fellow voyagers stood around the fire on the Island of Malta, where the Maltese made themselves immortal in my text by the way they treated their victims of the sea. "The barbarous people showed us no little kindness."

Kindness! All definitions of that multipotent word break down half way. You say it is clemency, benignity, gencrosity; it is made up of good wishes; it is an expression of benevolence; it is a contribution to the happiness of others. Some one else says: "Why, I can give you a definition of kindness; it is sunshine of the soul; it is affection perennial; it is a climatic grace; it is the combination of all graces; it is compassion; it is the perfection of gentle manliness and womanliness." Are you all through? You have made a dead failure in your definition. It cannot be defined, but we all know what it is, for we have all felt its power. Some of you may have felt it as Paul felt it, on some coast of rock as the ship went to pieces, but more of us have again and again in some awful stress of life had either from earth or Heaven hands stretched out which "showed us no little kindness."

There is kindness of disposition, kindness of word, kindness of act, and there is Jesus Christ, the impersonation of all of them. Kindness! You cannot affect it. You cannot play it as a part. You cannot enact it. You cannot dramatize it. By the grace of God you must have it inside of you, an everlasting summer, or, rather, a combination of June and October, the geniality of the one and the tonic of the other. It cannot dwell with arrogance or spite or revenge or malevolence. At its first appearance in the soul all those Amalekites and Gergashites and Hittites and Jebusites must quit, and quit forever. Kindness wishes everybody well—every man well, every woman well, every child well, every bird well, every horse well, every dog well, every cat well. Give this spirit full swing, and you would have no more need of societies for prevention of cruelty to animals, no more need of protective sewing woman's associations, and it would dull every sword until it would not cut skin deep, and unwheel every battery till it could not roll, and make gunpowder of no more use in the world except for rock blasting or pyrotechnic celebration. Kindness is a spirit divinely implanted and in answer to prayer, and then to be sedulously cultivated until it fills all the nature with a perfume richer and more pungent than mignonette, and, as if you put a tuft of that aromatic beauty behind the clock on the mantel or in some corner where nobody can see it, you find people walking about your room looking this way and that, and you ask them: "What are you looking for?" and they answer: "Where is that flower?" So if one has in his soul this infinite sweetness of disposition its perfume will whelm everything.

Let us all pray for the spirit of kindness. It will settle a thousand questions. It will change the phase of everything. It will mellow through and through our entire nature. It will transform a lifetime. It is not a feeling got up for occasions, but perennial. That is the reason I like petunias better than morning glories. They look very much alike, and if I should put in your hand a petunia and a morning glory you could hardly tell which is the petunia and which the morning glory. But the morning glory blooms only a few hours and then shuts up for the day, while the petunia is in as widespread a glow at 12 o'clock at noon and six o'clock in the evening as at sunrise. And this grace of kindness is not spasmodic, it is not intermittent, is not for a little while, but it irradiates the whole nature all through and clear on till the sunset of our earthly existence.

Kindness! I am resolved to get it. Are you resolved to get it? It does not come by haphazard, but through culture under the divine help. Thistles grow without culture. Rocky mountain sage grass grows without culture. Mullein stalks grow without culture. But that great red rose in the conservatory, its leaves packed on leaves, deep dyed as though it had been obliged to fight for its beauty and it were still reeking with the carnage of the battle, that rose needed to be cultured, and through long years its floral ancestors were cultured. O God, implant kindness in all our souls and then give us grace to watch it, to enrich it, to develop it!

Still further, I must speak of kindness of word. When you meet anyone, do you say a pleasant thing or an unpleasant? Do you tell him of an agreeable thing you have heard about him or the disagreeable? When he leaves you does he feel better or does he feel worse? Oh, the power of the tongue for the production of happiness or misery! One would think from the way the tongue is caged in we might take the hint that it has a dangerous power. First it is chamed to the back part of the mouth by strong muscles. Then it is surrounded by the teeth of the lower jaw, so many ivory bars, and then by the teeth of the upper jaw, more ivory bars. Then, outside of all, are the two lips, with the power of compression and arrest. And yet, notwithstanding these four imprisonments or limitations, how many take no hint in regard to the dangerous power of the tongue, and the results are laceration, scarification and damnation.

Oh, say the cordial thing! Say the useful thing. Say the hospitable thing. Say the helpful thing. Say the Christlike thing. Say the kind thing. I admit that it is easier for some temperaments than for others. Some are born pessimists, and some are born optimists, and that demonstrates itself all through everything. It is a cloudy morning. You meet a pessimist, and you say: "What weather to-day?" He answers: "It's going to storm," and umbrella under arm and waterproof coat show that he is honest in that utterance. On the same block, a minute after, you meet an optimist, and you say: "What do you think of the commercial prospects?" and he says: "Glorious. Crops not so good as usual, but foreign demand will make big prices. We are going to have such an autumn and winter of prosperity as we have never seen." On your way back to your store you meet a pessimist merchant: "What do you think of the commercial prospects?" you ask, and he answers: "Well, I don't know. Wheat and corn crop blasted in Kansas and Missouri, and the grain gamblers will get their fist in, and the hay crop is short in some places, and in the southern part of Wisconsin they had a hailstorm, and our business is as dull as it ever was." You will find the same difference in judgment of character. A man of good reputation is assailed and charged with some evil deed. At the first story the pessimist will believe in guilt. "The papers said so, and that's enough. Down with him!" The optimist will say: "I don't believe a word of it. I don't think that a man that has been as useful and seemingly honest for 20 years could have got off track like that. There are two sides to this story, and I will wait to hear the other side before I condemn him." My hearer, if you are by nature a pessimist, make a special effort by the grace of God to extirpate the dolorous and the hypercritical from your disposition. Believe nothing against anybody until the wrong is established by at least two witnesses of integrity. And, if guilt be proved, find out the extenuating circumstances, if there are any. Kindness! Let us, morning, noon and night, pray for it until we get it.

When you can speak a good word for some one, speak it. If you can conscientiously give a letter of recommendation, give it. Watch for opportunities for doing good 50 years after you are dead. All my life has been affected by the letter of introduction that Rev. D. Van Vranken, of New Brunswick Theological seminary, wrote for me, a boy under him, when I was seeking a settlement in which to preach the Gospel. That letter gave me my first pulpit. Dr. Van Vranken has been dead more than 30 years, yet I feel the touch of that magnificent old professor. Strange sensation was it when I received a kind message from Rev. Thomas Guard, of Baltimore, the great Methodist orator, six weeks after his death! By way of the eternal world? Oh, no; by way of this world. I did not meet the friend to whom he gave the message until nearly two months after Thomas Guard had ascended. So you can start a word about some one that will be on its travels and vigorous long after the funeral psalm has been sung at your obsequies. Kindness! Why, if 50 men all aglow with it should walk through the lost world methinks they would almost abolish perdition.

Suppose all this assemblage and all to whom these words shall come by printer's type should resolve to make kindness an overarching, undergirding and all pervading principle of their life and then carry out the resolution. Why, in six months the whole earth would feel it. People would say: "What is the matter? It seems to me that the world is getting to be a better place to live in. Why, life, after all, is worth living. Why, there is Shylock, my neighbor, has withdrawn his lawsuit of foreclosure against that man, and because he had so much sickness in his family he is going to have the house for one year rent free. There is an old lawyer in that young lawyer's office, and do you know what he has gone in there for? Why, he is helping to fix up a case which is too big for the young man to handle, and the white-haired attorney is hunting up precious decisions and making out a brief for the young man. I know that a strange thing has taken place in the pulpit, and all the old ministers are helping the young ministers, and all the old doctors are helping the young doctors, and the farmers are assisting each other in gathering the harvest, and for that farmer who is sick the neighbors have made a "bee," as they call it, and they have all turned in to help him get his crops into the garner? And they tell me that the older and more skillful reporters who have permanent positions on papers are helping the young fellows who are just beginning to try and do not know exactly how to do it. And after a few erasures and interpolations on the reporter's pad they say: "Now, here is a readable account of that tragedy; hand it in, and I am sure the managing editor will take it."

"And I heard this morning of a poor old man whose three children were in hot debate as to who should take care of him in his declining days. The oldest son declared that it was his right, because he was the oldest, and the youngest said it was his right because he was the youngest, and Mary said it was her right because she better understood her father's vertigo and rheumatism and poor spells and knew better how to nurse him, and the only way the difficulty could be settled was by the old man's promise that he would divide the year into three parts and spend a third of his time with each one of them. And neighboring stores in the same line of goods on the same block are acting kindly to each other. It seems to me that those words of Isaiah are being fulfilled when he says: "The carpenter encouraged the goldsmith and he that smoothed the hammer, him that smote the anvil, saying, it is ready for the soldering. What is the matter? It seems to me our old world is picking up. Why, the millennium must be coming in. Kindness has got the victory."

My hearers, you know and I know we are far from that state of things. But why not inaugurate a new dispensation of geniality. If we cannot have a millennium on a large scale, let us have it on a small scale and under our own instruments. Kindness! If this world is ever brought to God, that is the thing that will do it. You cannot fret the world up, although you may fret the world down. You cannot scold it into excellence or reformation or godliness.

And while we take the matchless kindness from God may it be found that we have uttered our last bitter word, written our last cutting paragraph, done our last retaliatory action, felt our last revengeful heart throb. And it would not be a bad epitaph for any of us if, by the grace of God, from this time forth we lived such beneficent lives that the tombstone's chisel could appropriately cut upon the plain slab that marks our grave a suggestion from the text: "He showed us no little kindness." But not until the last child of God has got ashore from the earthly storms that drove Him on the rocks like Mediterranean Eurecydons, not until all the thrones of Heaven are mounted, and all the conquerors crowned, and all the harps and trumpets and organs of Heaven are thrummed or blown or sounded and the ransomed of all climes and ages are in full chorus under the jubilant swing of angelic baton, and we shall for thousands of years have seen the river from under the throne rolling into the "sea of glass mingled with fire," and this world we now inhabit shall be so far in the past that only a stretch of celestial memory can recall that it ever existed at all, not until then will we understand what Nehemiah calls "the great kindness," and David calls "the marvelous kindness," and Isaiah calls "the everlasting kindness" of God.

STATE NEWS.

All negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the Hopkins-county mining troubles have been declared off. Circuit Judge Nunn, who went to Madisonville to make an investigation, sent a telegram to Gov. Beckham urging that troops be sent at once.

Fourteen members of the Reynolds band, charged with the murder of Mrs. Hall in Letcher county, will be tried at the special term of the Bell Circuit Court, which convened in Pineville Monday. One member of the gang has agreed to turn State's evidence.

The home of John Scott located on the hill this side of Monterey, was struck by lightning Wednesday September 11th. One end of the house was torn away and the sill from one of the windows was thrown in the air striking Mr. Doc Houchins, who was lying on the bed across the room, and inflicting a severe wound on his nose and forehead. A remarkable and fortunate incident of the affair is the fact that a small child was asleep on the floor just under the window and the bolt passing directly over it did not awaken it from its innocent sleep.—Owen News.

Some who keep posted in the matter, say there is an abundance of quails in this county this fall, and that the hunting will be very fine, if no one will go into the field until the law permits, which is not before the 15th day of next November, but as rabbit hunting is allowed at any time, many will take advantage of that sport to bag the birds on the sly and in defiance of the law prohibiting the killing of them before November 15 of each year. The unlawful hunting of quails could be stopped if a few persons in each neighborhood would determined to have the game law enforced.

The Richmond Climax learns that James H. Arnold, a former resident of that place, is now one of Kansas City's wealthiest citizens, being rated at from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. Some twenty-odd years ago Mr. Arnold, who was then a Richmond merchant, shot and killed his brother-in-law, Robert Little, while in the latter's office on business connected with an inheritance in which the wives of each were interested, they being sisters. He was indicted for murder and the case was transferred to Jessamine County upon a change of venue. Hon. C. J. Bronston was Commonwealths Attorney for the district and prosecuted with a vigor and earnestness that has never been excelled by him in later years. We can not at this moment recall by whom he was assisted, but among the many distinguished lawyers for the defense was the late Senator D. W. Voorhies, of Indiana. He and the chief prosecutor had some warm tilts during the trial, which was intensely interesting and at times quite exciting. Arnold was acquitted and left the State.

Rub celery on the hands to remove the odor of onions.

Mix stove blacking with a little ammonia to prevent it burning off.

Add a few drops of ammonia to the blueing water to whiten the clothes.

Add a little sugar to milk to prevent it sticking to the vessel while boiling.

Add one or two tablespoonfuls of sugar to strong turnips when cooking.

Place an apple in the bread and cake boxes to keep bread and cakes moist.

Mix a little cornstarch with salt before filling the salt shaker, to prevent its clogging.

Add a tablespoonful of kerosene to a pail of clear hot water to wash the windows.

Sprinkle grated cheese over oatmeal porridge instead of sugar and eat with cream.

Wet a cloth in cider vinegar, wrapping cheese in it to keep moist and prevent moulding.

Never depend upon a single food for an animal. The cow prefers a varied diet and will give more milk when her food is of a kind to tempt her to eat. A good cow necessarily consumes more food than an inferior one.

In an address delivered by W. J. Bryan, at Lincln, Newbraska, on the 20th inst., among other things he said: "As monuments reared by grateful hands to the virtues of the living as well as to the services of the dead, so the sorrow that has overwhelmed our Nation, obliterating the distinctions of party, race and religion, is as complimentary to the patriotism of our people as to our departed Chief Magistrate. But it is not strange that the people bow as one over the bier of their illustrious fellow-citizen; not strange that the solemn stillness is broken only by the sacred hymns which he was wont to sing, notwithstanding that all hearts turn in sympathy to the husbandless home at Canton.

"The President's position made him part of the life of all his countrymen, and the circumstances which attended his taking off added indignation to grief—indignation that even one murderous heart could be found in all the land, and grief that the wicked purpose of that heart has been consummated against one so gentle in spirit and so kind in word and deed.

"Let us hope that the national affliction which unites all factions in a common sorrow will result in a broader charity and more liberal spirit among those who by different policies and through different parties seek to provide the welfare and increase the glory of our common country."

Ex-President Cleveland, in a memorial address at Princeton on the 20th, among other things said:

"The whole Nation loved their President. His kindly disposition and affectionate traits, his amiable consideration for all around him, will long be in the hearts of his countrymen. He loved them in return with such patriotism and unselfishness that in this hour of their grief and humiliation he would say to them. 'It is God's will; I am content. If there is a lesson in my life or death, let it be taught to those who still live and have the destiny of their country in their keeping.'

"First in my thoughts are the lessons to be learned from the career of William McKinley by the young men who make up the students today of our university. They are not obscure nor difficult. The man who is universally mourned today was not deficient in education; but with all you will have of his grand career and his services to his country, you will not hear that what he accomplished was due entirely to his education. He was an obedient and affectionate son, patriotic and faithful as a soldier, honest and upright as a citizen, tender and devoted as a husband, and truthful, generous, unselfish, moral and clean in every relation of life.

"By the memory of our martyred President let us resolve to cultivate and preserve the qualities that made him great and useful, and let us determine to meet the call of patriotic duty in every time of our country's danger or need.

A dispatch from Mt. Vernon, O., says: Germs that have lurked for 15 years in a child's toys may probably cause the death of two children at the home of Charles Hutton, in this city. Mrs. Hutton died about a week ago, and her daughter, Mrs. George Keck, of Indiana, came to attend the funeral, bringing with her a small daughter. Yesterday this child and another child of Mrs. Hutton were taken dangerously ill, so that physicians were summoned. They pronounced the disease malignant diphtheria, and at once administered antitoxin.

There is not a case of diphtheria in the city, and the physicians were at a loss to account for its origin. But upon investigation they found that a child of Mr. and Mrs. Hutton died 15 years ago of diptheria. During her illness she had played with an assortment of toys which, after her death, were gathered together by the father and stored in the garret of the home.

About a week ago the present victims found these toys, gathered them from their hiding place, and amused themselves with them. The physicians are certain that the germs have lingered about the toys all these years and have caused the present illness.

Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was placed on trial in the Supreme Court, in Buffalo, before Justice White Monday morning. He entered a plea of guilty, which was subsequently changed to "not guilty" by order of the court. Indications are that the trial will be short, and that there will be few technical questions raised by either side. The first day of the trial was consumed in the selection of a jury; the statement of the prosecution's case; the description of the Temple of Music, in which the assassination occurred, and the examination of the physicians who attended the President after he had been shot and who were present at the autopsy. The fact was brought out that the objections of the President's family prevented a thorough search for the bullet.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1901. NO. 51.

THE farmers did not turn out in large numbers to attend court Monday.

WHAT is President Roosevelt going to do in my case? is a question many officeseekers would like to have answered about now.

THE big fair at Louisville, it is said, does not owe its success to the patronage of the Louisville people.

THE tobacco market was irregular last week, but was some better towards the close, when some of the grades showed a slight improvement.

THE prices of hogs have gone back, and those who were waiting for the price to reach the eight cent mark are left, at least for the present.

THE candidates for some of the offices to be filled by the Boone County Insurance company were on hand at an early hour Monday, to look after their interest.

A GREAT deal of the hustling for appointment to office that had been done previous to the assassination of President McKinley has to be done over, and the road to Washington is kept warm.

DAVEZAC says he will make the race over in Kenton county as an independent candidate for county clerk. Can it be that he will control any part of the patronage of the office should he make possible a Republican's election?

THE Democrats seem to be getting the better of the registration in the cities in this State, but that is not a reliable indication, as some people do not vote as they register, and a great many will not go to the polls after registering.

A COURT up in Canada has decided that divorces granted in the United States do not go in that country, and a woman who had been divorced in this country, and afterwards went to Canada and married, has been convicted of bigamy.

THE Lawrenceburg, Indiana, editors are not dwelling together in unity as brothers should. As a general thing the reading public does not become interested in newspaper scraps, but quite the contrary. Remove your war paint, brethren.

ACCORDING to those who oppose Schley in the investigation, the naval battle at Santiago was fought without any plans or commands. Everybody seemed to be fighting as he saw proper—sort of a catch-as-catch-can engagement.

AS soon as President Roosevelt proclaimed that he would carry out President McKinley's policies, the woods were at once filled with would-be holdover appointed officials, who claim that the late President had signified his intentions of reappointing them.

SIX men were indicted by the grand jury in Louisville, last week, charged with breaking into Republican headquarters in that city after the Republican primary election held there last July, and stealing the ballot boxes. This is another echo of Sappism.

BOONE'S proposition in regard to the bridge across Big Bone creek at the "fish trap" was not acceptable to Gallatin county, and it was refused by the fiscal court in session at Warsaw, last week. Those who are interested in the matter will probably not allow it to drop yet.

FIFTY years ago Uncle Sam won from John Bull a handsome cup in a yacht race, and John has repeatedly tried to win the cup back, but has never succeeded, his last failure in that direction being made last week. Ah, John! it will be many years before you get a drink out of that cup.

THE contest for the Williamstown postoffice is creating the hardest fight the Grant county Republicans have ever had in their ranks. It is a presidential office, consequently the salary attached is a good one, and worth making a contest for. Who will be appointed is very uncertain.

At this time such bitter attacks upon McKinley as Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Bronston have recently indulged in are exceedingly out of taste, and are calculated to do no good. The Republicans still venomously assail the dead Goebel. This however does not license Democrats to speak ill of the dead. Republicans precedent in this respect should be rigidly shunned.—Blue-Grass Clipper.

THE Gallatin county fiscal court fixed the tax rate for county purposes, last week as follows: Tythe, $1 50; roads and bridges, 25 cents; turnpike bonds and interest on same, 12 cents; county orders and redeem same 23 cents, a total of 60 cents on each $100 taxable valuation in the county to which is added the State tax of 47½ cents per $100 valuation, making a total advalorem tax of 1 07½ per $100. This is a much larger tax than the taxpayers of this county have to shoulder, and yet they think theirs a considerable burden.

IT is evident that Caleb Powers and his friends are not satisfied with the manner in which Ex-Governor Brown and W. C. Owens conducted his trial, and for that reason he has reorganized his force of attorneys, dropping Brown and Owens out. It is said that instead of fighting the case along political lines and antagonizing the court in every way, which was Brown's plan to force the court into enough errors to insure a reversal in case of conviction, the attorneys will proceed upon the highest plane and will endeavor to establish Powers' innocence.

THE primary election held in Trimble county, a few days ago, gave perfect satisfaction to all concerned, and it is claimed that the iron-clad order of the committee, under which it was held, was carried out to the letter. A large vote was not polled, and no money or whisky was used by any of the candidates or their friends. Trimble county people are demanding that hereafter all the orders for primary elections to be held there shall contain the anti-money and anti-whisky clause. If Trimble county can enforce such an order other counties can and should.

THE three day's general registration of voters in the city of Louisville show a total registration of 41,709, against 44,220 in 1900. This decrease in the total vote is encouraging to the Democrats, as the only sufferers by it are the Republicans, their registered vote having fallen from 16,742 in 1901 to 13,786. The Democrats, on the other hand, have not only held their own, but their registered vote actually shows a substantial gain remaining at 22,588, as against 21,268 last year. The independent vote, which last year was 7,218, has fallen to 5,395, and this is another good sign for the Democrats, as it shows that the so-called Brown people have returned to the ranks of the regulars.

As far as Louisville, Covington, Lexington and Newport and all third-class cities are concerned, the question as to whether a separate ballot for the municipal ticket shall be printed seems about settled in favor of one ballot for both city and county. Secretary of State Hill says he has nothing to do with the matter and all he has ever said was that he would not honor requisitions for paper to print municipal ballots on, as the statute plainly prohibits him from doing it. He further says that County Clerks in counties containing cities of first, second and third classes can order as much paper as they deem proper to print the ballots, and that the Clerks can use their own discretion under the law as to having two separate ballots printed. Attorney General Breckinridge says he has never given an official opinion in the matter except to say that the statute provides that cities and towns of the fourth, fifth and sixth classes must use separate ballots from the county ballots in electing officers.

One boy was killed and another fatally injured by the explosion of a gas cylinder in a soda fountain at Estherville, Ia.

AS TO ANARCHY AND SOCIETY.

Some Reflections That Embody the Essentials of Conduct.

(C. C. Conner in Springfield Republican.)

It is time for reflection. Let the nation be seated for some moments to think. Let us talk of what concerns our wellbeing, and let us arise and act.

Lincoln was assassinated by a cold-blooded actor when partisan feeling, running to extreme lengths carried the agent. Garfield was shot down by a degenerate, the motive of whose act lay only in one disordered brain. McKinley was killed by an anarchist, who can hardly make the plea of insanity and who is representative of a sentiment that is growing in sight of our flag with the toleration of our people.

A nice point of government is to be decided upon at this stage of our nation's existence. We are to discriminate in some official and authoritative way between liberty and license. We want liberty for every man in his right to life and happiness. But that liberty implies for each the same right of every other man. License we might define as the unlawful crossing of the line of personal right and trespassing upon the rights of others, which violates public order and threatens the public welfare. We have been dealing with deeds. We are yet to deal with words and dispositions. We have allowed free speech. No man has been hindered from saying what he desired, even if it were subversive of the very principles of our government. Such speech becomes treason, and ought to be punished as such. Words, under certain circumstances, are charged with the significance of deeds. The elaborated address of a man upon matters of morals or questions of state is more than a word. It is an achievement. The book or the pamphlet or the newspaper article which has the inspiration and potency of life and action in it is to be judged and dealt with as a deed. Emma Goldman, who by her spoken words incited Czolgosz to fire the fatal shot at Buffalo, is partner in the crime of a treasonable murder. If President McKinley had not died, but had lived, as we so strongly hoped, on the grounds of the physicians' bulletins, the guilt of the party should not have been made a whit whiter. No need of waiting to see what the ultimate results of the shooting might be. The man was disposed to kill, he aimed to kill, and he was guilty of the thing he tried to do. The laws in our statute books should have provided to punish, and should yet punish, him accordingly. And that procedure of speech and parade which makes ready for the commission of such a crime should be stopped by the strong hand of the law. The assassin of the late King Humbert of Italy trained on American soil. The assassin of our lamented President trained on American soil, and had his heart so fired for the deed by a speech addressed to him in a company of his kind that he speeded over hundreds of miles and kept his heart hot for the crime until it was done. Such training and such incitement is treason, and should be so dealt with by the government.

Anarchy is a doctrine for primitive forests, not for the fields of civilization. In the woods alone, a man may do as he pleases simply. If he be joined by another there, he should have some regard unto him. Our Declaration of Independence was written in view of men living in brotherly and helpful relation with men. And above and beneath and about all laws of the land and deeds of men are the divine commandments, "Thou shalt love God with all thy heart and mind and might, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On these two commandments Jesus said, hung all the law and the prophets. After these and on the ground of these should proceed all men's lives.

Hereon we shall have all the liberty any true man should crave. We can do wholly as we please If we please to do right. We may even go counter to commonly accepted standards so we do no violence to other lives about us. We may transcend past or present conceptions of men, so our thoughts and life be good, and bless others and curse not, help and harmnot. We want individuality. But where two or more individuals come to be we must have law and order, we must have life and action in some recognized relations. Impulso may leap and play in us at high glee, it may even make us conspicuous if we indulge it oft. It is right and well, if it interferes not with others, but rather ministers to others. Hawthorne gathered blueberries and neglected his books; he went fishing and hunting, and forsook the classics. But the flavor of the berries and the scent of the sweet fields and the freshness of the streams got into his message to his fellows. Prescott esteemed the telling of tales to his school-fellows as the real business of life which he continued from day to day, of which the lessons of school and the duties of home were unwelcomed interruptions. But the genius of the future historian was in training by this rebellion against the rules of home and school, and the man added himself lovingly to the world, and we are grateful. Lowell, in his preparatory years, read everything except the books in the college course at Harvard, and the reader of his pages may thank him for it. He enriched his mind and gave to others by it. He passed the bounds marked out for him and his being broadened to include our delight. Emerson wrote:

> I serve you not, if you I follow,
> Shadow like, o'er hill and hollow;
> And bend my fancy to your leading,
> All too nimble for my treading.
> When the pilgrimage is done,
> And we're the landscape overrun,
> I am bitter, vacant, thwarted,
> And your heart is unsupported.
> Vainly valiant, you have missed
> The manhood that should yours assist.—
> Its compliment.

We should say, all hail to the man who will add himself to the world, so that when he adds himself he shall have respect unto the space occupied by another; and while there is another, he must come to regard him, and help him, and bless him. Here I repeat, is the basis of law. Here its necessity.

Granted, we may so character our lives in the principles of the religion of Christ as to become a law unto ourselves, but thus we destroy not the laws of the land for the governance of all, but fulfill them." "There are two kinds of lawless people," observed Henry Ward Beecher, "those who are under the law and those are above the law. The one class are a very bad sort of people, the other are the very best sort. A man who is above the law is lawless because he has already incorporated into his own nature the tendencies which the law was set to produce." But until he attains that character which shall make him willingly subject to a divine or national order, he should be constrained to live lawfully. "If national order is to be recognized in later years as a benefit." Froebel taught, "childhood must first be accustomed to law and order, and therein find the means of freedom. Lawlessness and caprice must rule in no period of life, not even in that of the nursling."

You know, when Jesus was shown the coin with Caesar's superscription, and was asked if it were lawful to give tribute to Caesar, he replied, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." The Christian scientists were raised in our estimation this last winter, when Mrs Eddy advised her followers to vaccinate their children, that they might be law-abiding. In Vienna, the traveler tells us, there is a municipal cenorship of architecture. Every man who builds must have regard to his neighbor and the general appearance of the city. "The good of the community" is set above as a law unto each man's liberty. No man, whoever he is or whatever his calling, has a right to disregard the good of others. He should not injure or offend his fellows. He should do nothing—if possible to prevent it—that shall imperil or inconvenience them. The public safety, the general weal, the greatest good to the greatest number, have claims over each individual, who is great only in service.

The excitement incident to traveling and change of food and water often brings on diarrhoea, and for this reason no one should leave home without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by all Druggists.

JUDGING from the gentlemen who compose the Democratic campaign committee in Kenton county, it is safe to say the Democrats will make a clean sweep over there this fall. It looks like some head work has been done by the Kenton Democrats.

The American Tobacco Company may build a factory in the northern portion of Ireland.

The President's Restrictions.

One would naturally think that the chief executive of so great a nation as ours would not only be exempt from some obligations which fall upon the average citizen, but would enjoy certain privileges peculiar to the highest office within the gif tof the people. This is not the case, however. The fact that the President of the United States is the only law-abiding and reason-possessing citizen thereof whom custom holds a prisoner within limited bounds is brought out very forcibly by John Elfreth Watkins, Jr., in an interesting article on "Some Things the President Does Not Do" in the October Ladies' Home Journal. It shows that in the spending of his leisure time the President is more restricted than the janitor who daily empties his waste-basket. For he must not leave the country, even for a day. This is an old, unwritten law. Neither can he go aboad a foreign warship, even when anchored in our harbors and when flying the colors of a friendly State, or make a formal call upon any one except a President elect, an ex-President, a President of a foreign State or a reigning monarch visiting our capital. He must not receive any but intimate friends on Sunday, or occupy other than the seat of honor at any formal dinner. He must never occupy the left side of a carriage seat, or cross the threshold of a foreign embassy's residence in Washington, for that is foreign ground. These are only a few of the many laws with which custom restricts our Presidents.

Crop and Stock.

Never mind abont the color of the cows. It is the color of the milk that counts.

In Maryland sparrows have been known to raise six broods in one year. In England there are seldom more than three broods.

The Elizabethtown News says that 3,170 cattle, costing $100,000, will be fattened in that county this season. It will require about $30,000 worth of feed. If they are made into 1,200-pound steers and sell for 5 cents a pound, they will bring $190,000.

Tobacco cutting is well under way this week, and in a few days the entire crop will be in the house. There is every reason to believe the yield will be above the average this year, as the plants are much heavier than at first it was thought.—Georgetown News.

The tobacco crop has grown out wonderfully since the late rains and will make about 70 per cent of a crop if not caught by the frost, which will hardly occur until rain falls again. Some of the growers are cutting their tobacco too green. Better let it ripen as frost bitten tobacco is better than green, which cures up badly and is almost worthless.—Warsaw Independent.

The Hessian fly that proved so destructive to the wheat crop during the past serson has again made its appearance. Volunteer wheat is being killed by it, and from present indications it might be well for farmers to defer sowing wheat until after a hard frost. The few big yields of wheat made in this section this year were sowed late.—Blue Grass Clipper.

Some Bluegrass cattle feeders have been down the past week offering our farmers $4 for their feeding cattle, but so far we have heard of very few sales at this figure and a good many of our farmers talk of feeding rather than to take the price. It looks as if the farmers had formed a combine to talk down the prices, but with the fine prospect for fall grass and with a fair crop of corn and other feed our farmers are in good shape to hold on for a time at least.—Flemingsburg Democrat.

The cigarette furnishes the smoke of battle now that smokeless powder is in vogue, says the Minneapolis Times. One American firm shipped 200,000,000 of the little cylinders to South Africa last year.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

A recruiting station for Uncle Sam's regular army has just been opened at the Johnson House Williamstown.

Mrs. Cynthia Mason and Emma Presser have returned to their home in Boone county after a pleasant visit of three weeks with friends here.

The Republican politicians of Grant county, and Williamstown especially, are in the middle of a "fix" about the succession to the Williamstown postoffice. The many crooks and turns the fight has taken on during the past ten days has given the old wheel horses lots of trouble and disturbed the well laid plans of several good schemers.

The sale of the personal property of the late D. W. Williams on last Thursday was very largely attended and was one of the best sales conducted in the county during the past year. Hogs, sheep, cattle and all kinds of live stock, as well as grain and feed, brought big round prices. Spring calves, both Durham and Angus, brought from $22,50 to $30 per head. Good ewes brought $4.50 and hogs from $6 to $7 per one hundred pounds. The entire sale bill amounts to almost $6,000.

Strange as it may appear there was a wonderful amount of good tobacco produced in Grant county this year. During the last half of August it looked to the old farmers and tobacco raisers that not half a crop could be produced in any event. The showers of the fall came on and in a few short weeks a wonderful change came over the crop, and some as good tobacco is hanging in the barns of Grant county as can be found in the State, and in many instances the crop is more than an average for size and weight. It takes but little fall rain to make a tobacco crop.

Mr. Harris Musselman, of near Mason, suffered the loss of his large stock barn, feed and some live stock last Friday night by fire. He had been to church at Mason and coming home turned out his horse at 9 o'clock. At that time there was no sign of fire about the barn. At 10 o'clock neighbors discovered the barn in flames, and before anyone could reach the burning building the flames had so spread that the stock in the barn could not be removed and a very valuable pair of work mules were consumed. The entire loss consisted of grain, hay, wagons, harness, stock and building that were burned and will approximate $1,000. A policy of $300 on the barn.

We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." She has besides raised the young turkeys to the age of accountability.—Springfield News.

RELIGION EXALTED.

Discourse on the Latter's Comparison of Religion and the Beautiful Crystal—Power of the Gospel.

The charm of an exalted religion is by Dr. Talmage in this discourse illustrated and commended; text, Job, 28:17: "The crystal cannot equal it."

Many of the precious stones of the Bible have come to prompt recognition. But for the present I take up the less valuable crystal. Job, in my text, compares saving wisdom with a specimen of topaz. An infidel chemist or mineralogist would pronounce the latter worth more than the former, but Job makes an intelligent comparison, looks at religion and then looks at the crystal and pronounces the former as of far superior value to the latter, exclaiming, in the words of my text: "The crystal cannot equal it."

Now, it is not a part of my sermonic design to depreciate the crystal, whether it be found in Cornish mine or Harz mountain or Mammoth cave or tinkling among the pendants of the chandeliers of a palace. The crystal is the star of the mnuatain; it is the queen of the cave; it is the eardrop of the hills; it finds its heaven in the diamond. Among all the pages of natural history there is no page more interesting to me than the page crystallographic. But I want to show you that Job was right when, taking religion in one hand and the crystal in the other, he declared that the former is of far more value and beauty than the latter, recommending it to all the people and to all ages, declaring: "The crystal cannot equal it."

In the first place, I remark that religion is superior to the crystal in exactness. That shapeless mass of crystal against which you accidentally dashed your foot is laid out with more exactness than any earthly city. There are six styles of crystallization and all of them divinely ordained. Every crystal has mathematical precision. God's geometry reaches through it, and it is a square, or it is a rectangle, or its a rhomboid, or in some way it has a mathematical figure. Now, religion beats that in the simple fact that spiritual accuracy is more beautiful than material accuracy. God's attributes are exact, God's law exact, God's decrees exact, God's management of the world exact. Never counting wrong though he counts the grass blades and the stars and the sands and the cycles. His Providence never dealing with us perpendicularly when those providences ought to be oblique, nor laterly when they ought to be vertical. Everything in our life arranged without any possibility of mistake. Each life a six-headed prism. Born at the right time; dying at the right time. There are no "happen so's" in our theology. If I thought this was a slipshod universe, I would be in despair. God is not an anarchist. Law, order, symmetry, precision, a perfect square, a perfect rectangle, a perfect rhomboid, a perfect circle. The edge of God's robe never frays out. There are no loose screws in the world's machinery. It did not just happen that Napoleon was attacked with bladder-tion at Borndino so that he became incompetent for the day. It did not just happen that John Thomas, the missionary, on a heathen island, waiting for an outfit and orders for another missionary tour, received that outfit and those orders in a box that floated ashore, while the ship and the crew that carried the box were never heard of. I believe in a particular providence. I believe God's geometry may be seen in all our life more beautifully than in crystallography. Job was right. "The crystal cannot equal it."

Again I remark that religion is superior to the crystal in transparency. We know not when or by whom glass was first discovered. Beads of it have been found in the tomb of Alexander Severus. Vases of it are brought up from the ruins of Herculaneum. There were female adornments made out of it 5,000 years ago—those adornments found now attached to the mummies of Egypt. A great many commentators believe that my text means glass. What would we do without the crystal? The crystal in the window to keep out the storm and let in the day; the crystal over the watch, defending its delicate machinery yet allowing us to see the hour; the crystal of the telescope, by which the astronomer brings distant worlds so near he can inspect them. Oh, the triumphs of the crystals in the celebrated windows of Rouen and Salisbury! But there is nothing so transparent in a crystal as in our holy religion. It is a transparent region. You put it to your eye and you see man—his sin, his soul, his destiny. You look at God and you see something of the grandeur of His character. It is a transparent religion. Infidels tell us it is opaque. Do you know why they tell us it is opaque? It is because they are blind. "The natural man receiveth not the things of God, because they are spiritually discerned." There is no trouble with the crystal. The trouble is with the eyes which try to look through it. We pray for vision. Lord, that our eyes might be opened! When the eye asive cures our blindness, then we find that religion is transparent.

The providence that seemed dark before becomes pellucid. Now you find God is not trying to put you down. Now you understand why you lost that child and why you lost your property. It was to prepare you for eternal treasures. And why sickness came, it being the precursor of immortal juvenescence. And now you understand why they lied about you and tried to drive you hither and thither. It was to put you in the glorious company of such men as Ignatius, who, when he went out to be destroyed by the lions, said: "I am the wheat, and the teeth of the wild beasts must first grind me before I can become pure bread for Jesus Christ." Or the company of such men as "that ancient Christian martyr" who, when standing in the midst of the amphitheater waiting for the lions to come out of their cave and destroy him and the people in the galleries jeering and shouting: "The lions!" replied: "Let them come on!" and then, stooping down toward the cave where the wild beasts were roaring to get out, again cried: "Let them come on!" Ah, yes, it is persecution to put you in glorious company, and while there are many things that you will have to postpone to the future world for explanation, I tell you that it is the whole tendency of your religion to unravel and explain and interpret and illumine and irradiate. Job was right in in a glorious transparency. "The crystal cannot equal it."

I remark again that religion surpasses the crystal in its beauty. The lump of crystal is put under the magnifying glass of the crystallographer and he sees in it indescribable exquisiteness—snowdrift and splinters of hoar frost and corals and wreaths and stars and crowns and constellations of conspicuous beauty. The fact is that crystal is so beautiful that I can think of but one thing in all the universe that is as beautiful, and that is the religion of the Bible. No wonder this Bible represents that religion as the daybreak, as the apple blossoms, as the glitter of a king's banquet. It is the joy of the whole earth.

People talk too much about their cross and not enough about their crowns. Do you know that the Bible mentions a cross but 27 times, while it mentions a crown 80 times? Ask that old man what he thinks of religion. He has been a close observer. He has been cultivating an esthetic taste. He has seen the sunrises of half a century. He has been an early riser. He has been an admirer of cameos and corals and all kinds of beautiful things. Ask him what he thinks of religion, and he will tell you: "It is the most beautiful thing I ever saw. The crystal cannot equal it."

Beautiful in its symmetry. When it presents God's character, it does not present Him as having love like a great protuberance on one side of His nature, but makes that love in harmony with His justice—a love that will accept all those who come to Him, and a justice that will by no means clear the guilty. Beautiful religion in the sentiment it implants! Beautiful religion in the hope it kindles! Beautiful religion in the fact that it proposes to garland and eathroae and emparadise an immortal spirit. Solomon says it is a lily. Paul says it is a crown. The Apocalypse says it is a fountain kissed by the sun. Ezekiel says it is a foliaged cedar. Christ says it is a bridegroom come to fetch home a bride. While Job in the text takes up a whole vase of precious stones—the topaz and the sapphire and the chrysoprasus—he holds out of this beautiful vase just one crystal and holds it up until it gleams in the warm light of the eastern sky, and he exclaims: "The crystal cannot equal it."

Oh, it is not a stale religion; it is not a stupid religion; it is not a toothless hag, as some seem to have represented it; it is not a Meg Merrilies with shrivelled arm come to scare the world; it is the fairest daughter of God, heiress of all His wealth, her cheek the morning sky, her voice the music of the south wind, her step the dance of the sea. Come and woo her. The Spirit and the Bride say come, and whosoever will, let him come. Do you agree with Solomon and say it is a lily? Then pluck it and wear it over your heart. Do you agree with Paul aad say it is a crown? Then let this hour be your coronation. Do you agree with the Apocalypse and say it is a springiag fountain? Then come and alake the thirst of your soul. Do you believe with Ezekiel and say it is a foliaged cedar? Then come under its shadow. Do you believe with Christ and say it is a bridegroom come to fetch home a bride? Then strike hands with your Lord and King while I pronounce you everlastingly one. Or if you think with Job that it is a jewel, then put it on your hand like a ring, on your neck like a bead, on your forehead like a star, while looking into the mirror of God's word you acknowledge: "The crystal cannot equal it."

Again, religion is superior to the crystal in its transformations. The diamond is only a crystallization. Carbonate of lime rises till it becomes calcite or aragonite. Red oxide of copper crystallizes into cubes and octahedrons. Those crystals which adorn our persons and our homes and our museums have only been resurrected from forms that were far from lustrous. Scientists for ages have been examining these wonderful transformations. But I tell you in the Gospel of the Son of God there is a more wonderful transformation. Over souls by reason of sin black as coal and hard as iron God, by His comforting grace, stoops and says: "They shall be mine in the day when I make up my jewels."

"What!" say you. "Will God wear jewelry?" If He wanted it, He could make the stars of the heaven His belt and have the evening cloud for the sandals of His feet, but He does not want that adornment. He will not have that jewelry. When God wants jewelry He comes down and digs it out of the depths and darkness of sin. These souls are all crystallizations of mercy. He puts them on, and He wears them in the presence of the whole universe. He wears them on the hand that was nailed, over the heart that was pierced, on the temples that were stung. "They shall be mine," saith the Lord, "in the day when I make up my jewels." Wonderful, transformation! Where sin abounded grace shall much more abound. The carbon becomes the solitaire. "The crystal cannot equal it."

Now, I have no liking for those people who are always enlarging in Christian meetings about their early dissipation. Do not go into the particulars, my brother. Simply say you were sick, but make no display of your ulcers. The chief stock in trade of some ministers and Christian workers seems to be their early crimes and dissipations. The number of pockets you picked and the number of chickens you stole make very poor prayer meeting rhetoric. Besides that, it discourages other Christian people who never got drunk or stole anything. But it is pleasant to know that those who were farthest down have been brought highest up. Out of infernal serfdom into eternal liberty. Out of darkness into light. From coal to the solitaire. "The crystal cannot equal it."

But, my friends, the chief transforming power of the Gospel will not be seen in this world, and not until Heaven breaks upon the soul. When that light falls upon the soul, then you will see the crystals. What a magnificent settiug for these jewels of eternity! I sometimes hear people representing Heaven in a way that is far from attractive to me. It seems almost a vulgar Heaven as they represent it, with great blotches of color and bands of music making a deafening racket. John represents Heaven as exquisitely beautiful. Three crystals! In one place he says: "Her light was like a precious stone, clear as crystal." In another place he says: "I saw a pure river from under the throne, clear as crystal." In another place he says: "Before the throne there was a sea of glass clear as crystal." Three crystals! John says crystal atmosphere. That means health. Balm of eternal June. What weather after the world's east wind! No rack of stormclouds. One breath of that air will cure the worst tubercle. Crystal light on all the leaves. Crystal light shimmering on the topaz of the temples. Crystal light tossing in the plumes of the equestrians of Heaven on white horses. But "the crystal cannot equal it." John says crystal river. That means joy. Deep and ever rolling. Not one drop of the Potomac or the Hudson or the Rhine to soil it. No one tear of human sorrow to embitter it. Crystal, the rain out of which it was made. Crystal, the bed over which it shall roll and ripple. Crystal, its infinite surface. But "the crystal cannot equal it." John says crystal sea. That means multitudinously vast. Vast in rapture. Rapture vast as the sea, deep as the sea, strong as the sea, ever chnnging as the sea. Billows of light. Billows of beauty, blue with skies that were never clouded and green with depths that were never fathomed. Arctics and antarctics and Mediterraneans and Atlantics and Pacifics in crystalline magnificence. Three crystals! Crystal light falling on a crystal river! Crystal river rolling into a crystal sea. But "the crystal cannot equal it."

"Oh," says some one, putting his hand over his eyes, "can it be that I who have been in so much sin and trouble will ever come to those crystals?" Yes, it may be—it will be. Heaven we must have, whatever we have or have not, and we come here to get it. "How much must I pay for it?" you say. You will pay for it just as much as the coal pays to become the diamond. In other words, nothing. The same Almighty power that makes the crystal in the mountain will change your heart which is harder than stone, for the promise is: "I will take away your stony heart, and I will give you a heart of flesh."

"Oh," says some one, "it is just the doctrine I want. God is to do everything, and I am to do nothing." My brother, it is not the doctrine you want. The coal makes no resistance. It hears the resurrection voice in the mountain and it comes to crystallization; but your heart resists. The trouble with you, my brother, is the coal wants to stay coal.

I do not ask you to throw open the door and let Christ in. I only ask that you stop bolting and barring it. My friends, we will have to get rid of our sins. I will have to get rid of my sins, and you will have to get rid of your sins. What will we do with our sins among the three crystals? The crystal atmosphere would display our pollution. The crystal river would be befouled with our touch. Transformation must take place now or no transformation at all. Give sin full chance in your heart and the transformation will be downward instead of upward. Instead of crystal it will be a cinder.

In the days of Carthage, a Christian girl was condemned to die for her faith, and a boat was bedaubed with tar and pitch and filled with combustibles and set on fire, and the Christian girl was placed in the boat, and the wind was off the shore, and the boat floated away with its precious treasure. No one can doubt that boat landed at the shore of Heaven. Sin wants to put you in a fiery boat and shove you off in an opposite direction—off from peace, off from God, off from Heaven, everlastingly off, and the port toward which you would sail would be a port of darkness, and the guns that would greet you would be the guns of despair, and the flags that would wave at your arrival would be the black flags of death. Oh, my brother, you must either kill sin or sin will kill you! It is no exaggeration when I say that any man or woman that wants to be saved may be saved. Tremendous choice! A thousand people are choosing this moment between salvation and destruction, between light and darkness, between charred ruin and glorious crystallization.

PEACH DUMPLINGS.

A Delicious Dish for Dessert That Is Not Difficult to Prepare.

When properly made, a peach dumpling is an ideal autumn dessert. For peach dumplings, select ten rich, ripe, yellow peaches. Cut them into quarters. Add half a pound of sugar and a pint of cold water. After the peaches begin to boil, let them cook just five minutes. Cool them while you prepare a dumpling paste. Put a cup and a half of flour in a sieve, with a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder. Rub in a scant tablespoonful of butter and moistrn the mixture to a paste with about a gill of warm milk and one egg. After the mass is mixed to an even consistency lay it on a floured board, roll it out, and cut it into six squares. Put about two tablespoonfuls of the prepared peaches in each square of the pastry. Draw them up so as to inclose the peaches in an even ball. Lay each dumpling on a square of thick, firm muslin cloth, which has been buttered and dredged with flour. These pieces of cloth should be about eight inches square. Tie each piece of cloth around the dumpling, gathering in the fullness at the top. Leave a space at the top of the cloth for the dumplings to swell. Have a pot of boiling water or a large saucepan, and plunge the dumplings into it. Let them boil steadily for 20 minutes. Lift the dumplings out one by one. Let them drain on the colander or sieve two minutes. Then remove the cloths and place the dumplings, which should be even, smooth balls of pastry, on a hot platter. Serve them with a hot caramel sauce. This is a delicious sauce for a table where tempernance even in the seasoning of food is the rule, says the New York Tribune.

Put six tablespoonfuls of sugar in half a pint of boiling water. Add a piece of stick cinnamon, two cloves and a little grated yellow lemon peel. Let the sirup boil ten minutes. While it is cooking put two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of water in a sheet iron spider, and stir it until it is dark brown and smoking or well carameled. Pour the prepared sirup over the carameled sugar and stir them together until a rich golden carameled sauce is formed.

These dumplings are excellent made of apricots or of apples in place of peaches. Use rich, ripe, fine fruit if you wish a good result.

THE LATEST IN DRESS.

New Ideas That Are Being Adopted by Followers of the Fashions.

The fur coatees which are now on view and make the observer less than ever in love with the humid weather, have flat pointed collars of the same fur or of ermine if the coat be of astrakan or caracul. The sleeves are for the most part large, says a fashion authority.

A dressy wrap for chilly evenings is a coat of grey beige and white crepe de sole, lace and chiffon hanging loose back and front with exquisitely embroidered collar and a double row of beautifully enameled buttons for decoration.

This season's yachting caps have broader brims than last year's and the latest note is to have the cap match the gown.

Loosely woven frieze is a favorite material for mountain expeditions.

Fichus and pointed bodices are expected to be conspicuous in the evening models for the coming season.

The office coat has taken the place of, or rather supplements, the tea jacket, and lovely models are seen in the crepe de chine, oriental satin and silk.

Petticoat tops of silk jersey cloth used as a deep yoke are again coming into favor. The cloth fits snugly around the hips and extends nearly to the knee, and is finished with an accordion flounce of taffeta.

To cover the safety pins that have been found the best devices for keeping the skirt and waist together, a tight-fitting band of webbing is now worn around the waist, fastened in front with a buckle. The webbing makes a good foundation for the outside belt.

The three flounced skirt will be worn next winter, and tucking will retain its popularity, especially for wool gowns.

According to Paris advices, felerines are to be the fashion in the coming winter. Some are to be long and draped, with one end thrown over the shoulder and fastened with a gold buckle. Others of these mantles will have, instead of a collar, a border of black and gold embroidery or velvet around the throat and bell shaped sleeves.

Serving Peaches.

If necessary, brush the peaches over very lightly with a soft linen cloth; arrange them on a round, flat dish; then place a smaller circle on top of these, and continue till you have one for the top; arrange the green leaves among the peaches; if you cannot obtain peach leaves, any leaf resembling them will do.—Washington Star.

Quick Work.

"You," said the angry customer to the clerk, "said that this cloth was fast color, and it faded out within two months after it was made up."

"Well, madam," replied the clerk, "I don't think you ought to have expected it to fade any faster than that." — Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Cause.

"There was a bread riot at our house the other day," said Frisbie.

"What was the trouble?" asked Perkasie.

"The bread was soggy, and my wife and the cook had words about it."—Detroit Free Press.

TRUSTS GET THE MONEY.

Mammoth Fortunes Being Amassed by the Favored Pets of Protection.

Why should the dastardly taking of the life of the president have made Wall street quail and call for help from the United States treasury? In no event would financial affairs be changed from the present programme, the succession to the head of the government was assured to those who would carry out the policy of the present administration. A new congress with a large republican majority is but waiting to be called together. Wall street says business never was better, and the large fortunes that have and are being amassed by the favored few is an indication that prosperity is in full blast in that favored region. And yet there is an undercurrent of trouble that, any untoward event will bring to the surface and prick the beautiful bubble that has been blown with so much care and patience.

The banks there have but little cash beyond the reserve they are required by law to keep, and the issue of clearing house certificates is talked of. There must be something radically wrong with a system that has so little stability. One of the causes is over capitalization of the trusts whose stocks the banks have taken as security for loans and Morgan, Rockefeller and others are also loaded up with them awaiting the time that the least desirable can be unloaded on the investing public. A vast amount of these stocks and bonds have been paid out in lieu of cash for the plants of the manufacturing concerns when the trusts were organized, and a good many of these stocks and bonds are constantly being thrown on the market by their owners, either because they would sooner have ready money or they fear they will decrease in price. The underwriting syndicate who organized the trusts are obliged to buy these stocks and bonds or the price would decline and more would be thrown on the market, and the bears would take a hand and sell for a decline and a panic would soon be inevitable.

This is the reason that the trusts magnates and their allies, the banking interests, call for aid from the United States treasury, and it may be fairly said that every dollar that is advanced or loaned to them is used to bolster up the trust securities. So it comes to this, that the people are being taxed beyond the necessities of the government to create a fund to be loaned to the trusts and the gamblers of Wall street.

STATESMANSHIP AT FAULT.

Professed Ignorance of Deeply Interested Advocates of a High Tariff.

Another protection organ is in trouble, which is hardly to be wondered at when it is considered that it is the sole organ also of the Quay gang at Philadelphia. It is much worried about reciprocity, and is afraid the national association of manufacturers do not understand the question, and will be led into making some big mistakes at their meeting to consider the question to be held this fall.

If the manufacturers have been relying for information on the Inquirer it is probable their knowledge on tariff questions is very meager, which is evident when it says: "At the same time it is not surprising that the manufacturers who are obliged to devote so much time to the conduct of their business that they have little opportunity to apply themselves to the study of abstract questions of statesmanship should be impressed by the suggestion that reciprocity is a kind of free trade in disguise, and that they should accordingly be disposed to look askance at the new departure to whose expediency their attention has been and is being directed."

Poor, overworked men, these manufacturers, without time to inquire and inform themselves on a most important matter that is of great concern in their own business. Bosh, they know more about reciprocity than this self-satisfied organ of protection does. They have had the best legal advice on the constitutionality of the French treaty, and they also know that a much more serious question than reciprocity is at issue, and that is, shall the tariff be eliminated or reduced on articles these trusts and manufacturers sell cheaper to foreigners than they do to our own people. That is an entirely different brand of reciprocity than the one the Inquirer is talking about, and trying to befog its readers with.

Reciprocity between the manufacturers and the people and let the foreigners take care of themselves is the tariff question that must soon be settled. If the Fifty-seventh congress does not take the side of the people against the trusts and the monopolies that the favored manufacturers have so long enjoyed, the people will see that a democratic majority is elected in 1902 that will reform the tariff to that extent, and then if that proves of advantage the people will be ready to take up the further question of tariff for revenue.

——There is great gloom at the headquarters of the Protective Tariff league and the Home Market club. They fear the tariff is about to be meddled with and that even some treasonable republicans may be helping to break open the shrine at which they worship. They are still firing blank cartridges at the democrats, but it is only in a half-hearted way. They should reserve their ammunition and pour some hot shot into these recreant republicans and they may keep up the Chinese wall awhile longer. Their allies, the trusts, should be called upon to give more material aid.

TWO KINDS OF TARIFF REFORM

Differing Diagnoses That Are Now Troubling the Protection Doctors.

It now appears there are two kinds of reciprocity, the James G. Blaine brand of 1891-2, which was forced by him on the McKinley tariff bill after his historic and exciting persona. Interview with the republican members of the ways and means committee. The other kind is the new brand, samples of which are seen in the reciprocity treaties now before the United States senate. The new Kasson brand is violently opposed by the Protective Tariff league, and in the matter it is furnishing to the republican newspapers it said: "Very many of the reductions strike directly at some established and important industry. The textile manufacturers and the jewelry manufacturers of Massachusetts have opposed with especial earnestness the ratification of this (the French) treaty by the senate." It then goes on and says that "the free trade newspapers are favoring these French reciprocity." In reading these fulminations of the league one has to make allowances for its misstatements, such as calling the tariff reform newspapers free trade, and so forth, for the league is in dire distress just about now. Its scientific tariff is under fire not only by the ever wicked democrats, but by those of its own household. Even President McKinley in his speech at Buffalo said that reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times, measures of retaliation are not." But let these tariff doctors fight out who is best capable of making a diagnosis of the disorder that is troubling the overprotected patient and inquire if either of them are likely to strike at the root of the disease. It is not the question of a five or ten per cent. reduction of the tariff on a few articles, as the French treaty provides, even allowing that the constitution will allow revenue to be lowered or raised by the action of the executive and the senate, but shall the protection given the trusts in the present tariff be taken off or continued? The French reciprocity treaty, nor any of the eight others now awaiting ratification, does not touch the monopoly granted the trusts, and this is the main question of the tariff reform that the people want settled.

The reduction of the tariff on a revenue basis will follow when the present extravagant and wasteful republican party is replaced by one pledged to an honest administration who will be free from lavishness or waste.

MR. BRYAN EULOGIZED.

Republican Editor Who Speaks in High Praise of the Democratic Leader.

The malignity and rancor of the republican daily newspapers before the last national election when speaking of Mr. Bryan was copied by the weeklies, many of whom now sincerely regret they were led to asperse and slander him. Amongst these is the editor of the Fort Lupton (Col.) Register, who not long ago had the privilege of a conversation with the democratic leader, and after giving an account of the interview with him, said: "He longs to free the people and to save the nation, and the infinite pity inspired by the conditions he sees and the infinite yearning to help and to save are stamped ineffaceably upon the face of the man.

"The adverse decree of the nation and the repudiation of his party have imparted a sadness into his life, but they have only added to the purpose and strengthened the ideals of that life.

"I am not a Bryanite in politics, and the impression of the man given here are the impressions of one who has always supported those political ideals and principles directly opposed to the principles laid down in the platform on which he stands. But difference of opinion and the prejudice of party cannot blur the innate greatness of the man. One cannot talk ten minutes with him without feeling that here is a man who is greater than his party, whose thoughts are profounder and whose ideals are loftier than those of the mere politician. Whose magnetic personality is that of a man born to lead, whose honesty of purpose and unswerving and sincere loyalty to the principles he believes to be right are beyond question.

"Such men are rare, and whatever the ethical principles and political dogmas they advocate, the world is better for their having lived and struggled."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——The jingoes in congress and out of it have at last a president after their own heart. They were never satisfied with Mr. McKinley; his foreign policy was too tame for them. But perhaps Mr. Roosevelt will not be so strenuous now he is president.

——According to the agricultural department, the corn crop is still shrinking and the potato and apple crops are about the worst on record. On the other hand, freight rates on these products have been advanced, so that the railroads will come out even. The crop that the railroads gather never fails.

——It is too bad that President Roosevelt could not have seen his way clear to accept the resignation of Attorney General Knox and have then appointed some eminent lawyer who was known to favor the carrying out of the anti-trust law. To have done this would have given him a hold on the masses of his countrymen that no president for some decades has enjoyed, but perhaps he knew it was impossible to find a republican lawyer of note with anti-trust proclivities.

DOUBLE-DECKER BEDSTEADS.

They Are So Made to Save Room—Three-Deckers Are Also Manufactured.

"What?" said the furniture man to a New York Sun reporter. "You never heard of a double-decker bed before? Well, they are not new, but they are used now in a wider variety of situations than formerly and there are more of them sold.

"Their construction as you see is very simple. The four corner posts are carried up to a sufficient height to support a second bed frame directly over the first and on above that to terminate in the usual manner, even with a brass knob or other ornament for finish.

"Of course the original purpose of the double-decker bed was to save room; and one of their earlier uses was in a newsboys' lodging house, instead of bunks. There have been built, in fact, for lodging house use, three-decker iron bedsteads, carrying three beds, one above the other.

"But the double-decker iron bedstead is by no means designed for lodging house use alone; it is used on shipboard, on transports, and, in suitably finished styles, on passenger steamers in saloon staterooms or cabins in place of bunks. Used on shipboard they are, of course, securely clamped in position; and for sea use the bedsteads are equipped with front guard rails, equivalent to the front board of a bunk.

"Double-decker iron bedsteads are commonly made with amply sufficient head room between the lower and the upper bed so that the occupant of the lower bed can sit up in it without touching the under side of the upper bed. We have built double-decker bedsteads with ladders attached by which to mount conveniently to the upper bed and we have made double-decker bedsteads so constructed that the upper bed could be turned up out of the way like the upper berth in a sleeping car or into a vertical position quite out of the way.

"The double-decker is used in small rooms in flats and also in private houses, as for example, in a house where there might be available but one comparatively small room for two servants, where two beds would monopolize too much of the floor space. There they put in a double-decker iron bed, with a great saving of room, and I have no doubt to the entire satisfaction of the users of it.

"I have heard of college men building up to save space in a small bedroom two cot beds, with home-made supports, one above the other; this improvised double-decker serving its purpose very well as long as it served it at all, but likely to prove unstable, if not actually to collapse.

"Clearly the light but strong, rigid and secure double-decker iron bedstead would be a boon in such a place as that; and, as a matter of fact such bedstends have been put to use here in bachelor apartments, where two men are occupying a suite of rooms. They don't want folding beds in their parlor or to give up the room required for two beds anywhere, and so they put in a double-decker bed.

"And this would not of necessity be a cheap affair. You can buy double-decker beds, plain and of simple construction, at a low price, or you can have them built in any degree of elaborateness as to design and finish and you can furnish them with bedding equipment in whatever measure of luxuriousness you may wish to pay for.

LAP WOMEN OF ALASKA.

They Manage the Reindeer and Are Making Educational Progress.

The Lap women who live in Alaska are proving themselves exceeding valuable by their aptness in the management and care of the reindeer and they are now teaching the native Alaskan the art, if such it may be called. There are about a dozen reindeer stations now established in Alaska and more to follow. The natives are required to serve an apprenticeship of several years at the reindeer stations. During this time they are practically taught how to manage the deer and the making of sledges and reindeer harness. After the expiration of their service the government allows each a number of deer as his own personal property. The total number of reindeer in Alaska at present is 3,500, of which some have been distributed to the Eskimos.

The average Lap woman is a picturesque figure. She is generally young and robust, and ten chances to one has an infant in her characteristic Laplund cradle, which is hewn out of a solid log and carried on the back by a strap. The wife of the chief herder is one of the most notable women of the colony. She is very intelligent and her particular duty is to teach the Eskimo women the art of making reindeer clothing, which is the warmest and best adapted for arctic climates. She also instructs them how to prepare the various foodstuffs which the reindeer furnishes, such as butter, cheese, and the cooking and drying of the meat. For this work she receives the same pay as the herders.

She travels from station to station, where the classes of women are assembled from the surrounding country of 100 miles or more. She then gives daily object lessons in her domestic work and gradually the Eskimo women are taught the ways of civilization.

October at the Pan-American.

Less than 30 days remain before the gates of the Pan-American Exposition are closed forever. During the crisp, cool days of October Buffalo is at her best, and those who have delayed their visit until now will have the most delightful weather of the year in which to enjoy the wonders of the Rainbow City.

In planning your trip you will probably want to go east of Buffalo, and it will be well to keep in mind how pleasantly this may be done over the picturesque Lackawanna Railroad.

The same low rates are in force over the Lackawanna Railroad as during midsummer. At this season a daylight ride over the Lackawanna System is a journey long to be remembered. Through the Delaware Water Gap and over the Blue Ridge ranges the woods are radiant in their autumnal coloring while the agricultural region of western New York is mellowed by the wonderfully rich tones of the fall harvest time.

Six solid vestibuled trains are run daily between New York and Buffalo, with daily through service between New York and Chicago and New York and St. Louis. Observation cars, dining cars and Pullman sleeping cars offer every comfort for the trip. A beautiful guide, profusely illustrated, telling about the Exposition and its features will be sent off receipt of two cents in postage stamps. Write for one to T. W. Lee, General Passenger Agent, Lackawanna Railroad, New York.

A Typical South African Store.

O. R. Larson, of Bay Villa, Sundays River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these, within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by all druggists.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church closed last Sunday night, having been in progress four weeks. There were 33 additions to the church. The following were baptised yesterday afternoon: Lucy Kirk, Mrs. W. I. Rouse, Meice McManama, Pearl Baldou, Miss Bailey, Mrs. Will Greene, Bell Wilson, Willie Ryle, Cecil Gaines, Willie Noble, Clyd Barker, Leslie Goodridge, Carl Rouse.

The following is the vote as cast, for officers of the Boone County Insurance Company at its annual election, held last Monday: For President, Edgar Cropper, no opposition, 1,152; for Vice-President, N. C. Tauner, no opposition, 539; for Secretary, M. Souther, 1,207; J. L. Frazier, 33; Oscar Gaines, 220; for Treasurer, F. A. Utz, 624; O. W. Gaines, 3; for Agent, R. W. Rouse, 646; W. M. Rogers, 1,319; for Assessor, James E. Smith, no opposition, 734. The following were elected Directors: W. T. Smith, 1,099; G. M. Allen, 522; C. L. Griffith, 939; E. H. Blankenbeker, 627; Solon Early, 575; O. W. Gaines, 545.

A young man who came in on the East Bend road to church, Sunday night, made things pretty lively on the pavement at Mr. Rouse's store. His horse got frightened as it was turning the corner at that point, and the sparks it knocked out of the pavement with its shoes, looked like a fourth of July fireworks. The animal was gotten under control before any injury was done.

When we went to press this morning, indications for rain were good.

Thos. Hafer, of Hebron, was in town yesterday. He is nursing a crippled hand.

Every thing needed in a sick-room at ESKEW'S, Walton, Ky.

I understand that it has been freely circulated by some person or persons in Florence and vicinity, that I collected the premium money which my baby was successful in winning at the baby show at the Florence fair, and spent it carousing and drinking, something that I do not indulge in, and I take this means to inform the public that it is a malicious falsehood from beginning to the end. A. H. LAIL.

For some time people in the neighborhood of Split Rock have been hearing mysterious noises and occasionally they have caught glimpses of a large white animal moving stealthily toward the river. But at last the mystery has been solved. The strange animal is nothing more nor less than a pleneosaurus, a monster at least 100 feet long and commonly supposed by geologists to have been extinct for thousands of years. If you are credulous about this story Dr. Collins will show you a photograph of the pleneosaurus going down the bank at Split Rock to get a drink.—Lawrenceburg, (Ind.) Press.

In traveling through the country now, an old fashion wood pile for winter is seldom seen, but our friend, Jasper Maunin, of the Limaburg neighborhood, follows the paths of his forefathers, yet, and has a tremendous rick of firewood close to his door, with which to do battle against the encroachment of old boreas this winter. The sight of that stately pile of winter fuel carries the older people back to the time when to accumulate a supply of wood for winter use, was the principal business of the farmer at this season of the year, there being a few, though, who attended to that branch of work as the weather compelled them.

Just about dark, one evening last week, Everett Hall was taking W. H. Clayton, of Hebron, to his poultry house to see some of his fancy fowls. Mr. Hall went into his residence to get a lantern and Mr. Clayton took a few steps toward the poultry house, when he spied an object he thought was a man, and addressed it as follows: "Good evening, sir; do you think it will frost to-night?" No answer came, and after a short pause Mr. C. increased the volume of his voice, and repeated the salutation, and still no response came. Becoming more excited Mr. C. shouted, in a trembling voice, "Are you a dummy?" Just then Mr. Hall came with the lantern, and Mr. Clayton seeing with what he had been trying to converse, and in a few more minutes would have assaulted, said with manifest surprise, "why, it is a dummy," while Mr. H. was convulsed with laughter. There is no doubt but Mr. Hall appeared on the scene with the light just in time to prevent a terrific struggle between his friend and the "scare-crow" he had erected for the protection of his poultry.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. HE WANTS SAMPSON.

Schley's Chief Counsel Asks That the Rear Admiral Be Summoned as a Witness.

Rayner Expressed the Opinion That the Word Santiago Had Been Inadvertently Used by Sampson.

Lieut. C. W. Dyson, Commander R. P. Rodgers and Commander A. C. Hodgson Gave Testimony in the Court of Inquiry.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Rr. Adm. Evans, who as captain commanded the battleship Iowa during the Santiago campaign, was a witness before the Schley court of inquiry Monday. His testimony covered the entire period from the time the Iowa left the port of Key West May 20, 1898, until July 5, when Adm. Evans testified he had a conversation with Adm. Schley concerning the battle of the 3d. He described in detail the principal battle off Santiago, and also gave particulars concerning the bombardment of the Colon on May 31.

Other witnesses of the day were Capt. Theodore F. Jewell, who was commander of the cruiser Minneapolis during the Spanish war, and Commander James M. Miller, who was in command of the collier Merrimac until that vessel was turned over to Licut. Hobson to be sunk in the mouth of the harbor at Santiago. Adm. Evans had not concluded his testimony when the court adjourned for the day.

Commander James M. Miller was sworn as a witness. He said he took on 5,000 tons of coal at Lambert's Point, sailed to Key West, and left there for Cienfuegos about May 20. His average speed during the trips was nine to ten knots.

On cross-examination by Mr. Rayner, he recalled the signals from the Brooklyn on the morning of the 24th in regard to coaling both the Massachusetts and the Texas at the same time. He said that owing to the peculiar motion of the battleships, even in fair weather, he objected to placing the collier between them, as it would surely have crushed her. "Now, let us understand this," said Rayner. "Between the afternoon of May 24 and 8 p. m. May 27 you coaled no vessels. Is this right?"

"Yes."

This was to support Schley's contention that coaling was impossible when he began the retrograde movement on May 26.

Question by the court: "Could you have coaled any of the vessels on May 25, had you been ordered to do so?"

"I could, but not comfortably to myself or to the other ships. It was nasty, squally weather, and had I my own wish I would not have attempted it."

Washington, Oct. 2.—The Schley court of inquiry made good headway again Tuesday, concluding with Adm. Evans and hearing three new witnesses, although the testimony of one of them was not concluded when the court adjourned for the day. Adm. Evans' testimony was along the same general lines as was his statement of Monday, but some points were presented in greater detail in response to questions by Mr. Rayner.

In cross examining Adm. Evans Mr. Rayner said:

"I want to call your attention to the report of Capt. McCalla, of the Marblehead, on page 426 of the appendix, which says: Commodore Schley explained to the commanding officers that in case Spanish ships came out he wished to concentrate the battleries of all our ships on a portion of those of the enemy. This was not explained as a tactical concentration of our whole force on a part of the enemy, but as a division of our whole fire on several of the enemy's ships. During the time the commanding officers were on board the flagship Capt. Evans asked Commodore Schley if it were his intention to steam at the enemy's ships in case they should start to come out. Commodore Schley answered 'Certainly,' and added words indicative of his intention to attack them as they came out of the narrow defile."

"I recollect it perfectly."

"Is that a correct statement?"

"That is correct."

"So there was a plan of battle arranged by Commodore Schley, was there not?"

"There is nothing there to indicate it from what you have read."

"Was not that the same order that was afterward given by the commander-in-chief, substantially: 'Close in toward harbor entrance and attack them?'"

"You have not read anything about indicating any plan of battle."

Evans explained that the Iowa did not run alongside the Viscaya, but in a course parallel to the shore.

"When I first saw the Brooklyn, the Texas was off the port quarter of the Colon; the Oregon off the port quarter of the Texas, and the Brooklyn to the south off the Texas port bow," said the witness in answer to a question by Rayner. "The Brooklyn was ahead."

The new witnesses were Capt. Sigsbee, who commanded the scout St. Paul during the Santiago campaign; Mr. Thomas M. Dienaide, a newspaper correspondent, who was on the Texas during the battle of July 3, and Chief Yeoman Gustave E. Becker, who was a clerk to Adm. Sampson during the war.

Capt. Sigsbee's testimony covered his communications to Commodore Schley upon the latter's arrival off Santiago May 26, 1898, and at subsequent dates, and dealt with the state of the weather at that period. He was asked a great number of questions by the court.

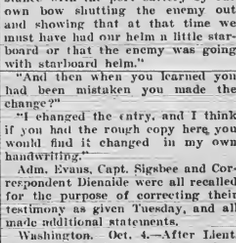
Washington, Oct. 3.—An interesting turn was given to the Schley court of inquiry Wednesday by the introduction of the first witness in Adm. Schley's behalf. This was Lieut. Jas. J. Doyle, who was watch officer on board the flagship Brooklyn during the war with Spain. The fact that Lieut. Doyle was put on the stand does not mean that the navy department has concluded the presentation of its side of the case. Mr. Doyle was called by the department, but as it has been the purpose of Adm. Schley to summon him, advantage was taken of his presence on the stand to question him as an original witness for "the applicant." He was under examination by Mr. Rayner in the interest of the admiral when the court adjourned for the day.

Before undergoing examination at Mr. Rayner's hands, Lieut. Doyle, at Capt. Lemly's request, explained his part in the battle of July 3, and his original entry in the ship's log concerning the famous loop and his alteration of that entry because he subsequently discovered that his first entry had been erroneous.

Mr. Rayner asked him if it were not true that the change in the log was not due to an error on the part of the witness and to no desire upon the part of anybody to falsify the fact.

"Absolutely," was the response.

"And the error," continued Mr. Rayner, "occurred, as I understood you to say, in this way: That during the action you could not see on account of the smoke and thought the ship did turn with starboard helm and you entered it so in the log."



"Yes," was the reply. "We lost track of the enemy in the first instance with the port battery by our own bow shutting the enemy out and showing that at that time we must have had our helm a little starboard or that the enemy was going with starboard helm."

"And then when you learned you had been mistaken you made the change?"

"I changed the entry, and I think if you had the rough copy here you would find it changed in my own handwriting."

Adm. Evans, Capt. Sigsbee and Correspondent Dienaide were all recalled for the purpose of correcting their testimony as given Tuesday, and all made additional statements.

Washington, Oct. 4.—After Lieut. Doyle, formerly of Commodore Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, had completed his testimony before the Schley court of inquiry Thursday,

ISIDOR RAYNER.

Attorney general of Maryland, now chief counsel for Admiral Schley before the court of inquiry.

Capt. William C. Dawson, of the marine corps, was called, and was followed by Lieut. Charles W. Dyson, of the bureau of steam engineering of the navy department.

Capt. Dawson was signal officer on board the battleship Indiana during the naval engagement off Santiago, and he gave an account from recollection of the behavior of the various ships of the American fleet during that battle. He said the Brooklyn had gone about 2,000 yards to the southward before joining in the pursuit of Cervera's ships.

Capt. Sigsbee resumed the stand in the morning to correct his testimony of Wednesday. He said he found a letter Wednesday night written May 29, in which he said he had no positive knowledge of the whereabouts of the Spaniards.

Lieut. Doyle then resumed the stand. He testified as to the bombardment of the Spanish forts. He was then asked:

"How often did you see Commodore Schley under fire?"

"During the bombardments and at the battle on July 3."

"What was his conduct?"

"I didn't have the opportunity to observe his conduct during the battle, but I did see him before and after the battle. He was as self-possessed as any one could be under those circumstnnces."

"Did you observe smoke over the harbor July 3?"

"Yes."

"I propose to show the court that Commodore Schley saw the smoke in the harbor July 2. He believed it to indicate that the fleet was coming out. He did his duty and notified the squadron," explained Rayner.

Both Lemly and Hanna opposed the statement, bitterly contending that the question tended to open up an inquiry on the conduct of other officers connected with the Santiago campaign. They meant, of course, Sampson, and that Rayner would try to show that Sampson left the blockade on the morning of July 3, despite this smoke warning that Cervera was probably coming out.

"What we want is the whole truth," declared Capt. Parker, of Schley's counsel, emphatically.

"The gentlemen on the other side say they, too, want the whole truth, and we are happy to agree with them. We are going to open the door wide and let everybody who took part in the campaign come under the scope of this investigation."

Washington, Oct. 5.—In the Schley naval court of inquiry Mr. Rayner, chief of counsel for Adm. Schley, asked Judge Advocate Lemly to summon Adm. Sampson as a witness in the case. The request grew out of a difference in the construction of a sentence in Adm. Sampson's letter to Commodore Schley, written from Key West, May 20, while Commodore Schley, with the flying squadron, lay off Cienfuegos. This is known as the "Dear Schley" letter, and in it, as printed in the naval department documents supplied to the senate, the admiral said, after expressing his opinion that notwithstanding the report that the Spanish squadron was in Santiago, it were better to continue to blockade Cienfuegos and Havana, "we shall continue to hold Havana and Santiago until we receive more positive information."

During the examination of Commander Raymond P. Rodgers, this dispatch was under consideration when Mr. Rayner expressed the opinion that the word Santiago had been inadvertently used by the commander-in-chief, assuming that he meant to use the word Cienfuegos, as better corresponding with the text.

As the document was printed there was a parenthetical note, to which Adm. Schley's initials were attached, saying that evidently the wrong city had been mentioned. Mr. Rayner asked Judge Advocate Lemly to make this concession, but the latter declined to do so, saying that he would produce the original of Adm. Sampson's dispatch to prove that he had said Santiago. Then Mr. Rayner said:

"I can not take that word Santiago to mean anything but Cienfuegos. It is an imputation upon Commodore Schley and I can not permit it to rest without summoning the author of that dispatch." To which Capt. Lemly responded: "I have told you once before you can summon any one you please."

"Then," retorted Mr. Rayner, "summon Adm. Sampson."

This occurred only a short time before the adjournment of the court for the day, and was the subject of more or less conversation of an animated character after the day's work was concluded. Mr. Rayner would only say that he would insist upon the admiral being summoned unless the correction was conceded.

The witnesses for the day were Lieut. C. W. Dyson, of the bureau of steam engineering, concerning the coal supply of the flying squadron; Commander Raymond P. Rodgers, who was second in command of the battleship Iowa during the Spanish war and carried Adm. Sampson's dispatches of May 20 to Commodore Schley, and Commander Albon C. Hodgson, who was the navigator of the flagship Brooklyn. While Commander Rodgers was on the stand Mr. Rayner submitted a computation of shells from the American fleet which had struck the wrecked vessels of Cervera's squadron, showing that at least 34 per cent. of them were fired by the Brooklyn.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Only one session of the Schley court of inquiry was held Saturday. An adjournment until Monday was taken at 1 o'clock in order to allow counsel to recuperate after an arduous week's labor. Practically the only witness of the day was Lieut. Commander Albon C. Hodgson, who was navigator of the flagship Brooklyn during the campaign of 1898, and almost the entire time was taken up with the reading of correspondence between himself and Adm. Schley concerning an alleged colloquy between them during the battle of Santiago, which the witness was reported to have detailed to a newspaper correspondent.

The correspondence has been published, and this fact rendered the proceedings of comparatively little popular interest. Lieut. Doyle was also on the stand again, but only for the purpose of correcting his former testimony.

During the day Judge Advocate Lemly made another statement concerning Adm Sampson's dispatch of May 20, 1898, relating especially to the admiral's use of the word "Santiago" where it was alleged he had intended to use word "Cienfuegos." The original was produced and showed that it was written "Santiago."

ATHLETIC GAMES.

Two World's Records Were Broken at the Inter-State Fair at Louisville, Ky.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 5.—The athletic games under sanction of the A. A. U., at the Inter-state fair, were made notable by the breaking of the world's record for the hammer throwing by Flanagan, of the Irish-American Athletic club, of New York.

He threw the hammer 170 feet 8½ inch. The previous record of 160 feet and 4 inches was held by him.

Flanagan also broke the world's record in the discus throw. He made 119 feet 7½ inches. His previous record was 118 feet 9 inches, which was the record.

All the events were hotly contested. Some of the best athletes in the country participated in the games. The weather was perfect and the track in good shape. Nearly 3,000 people saw the sport.

Mrs. McKinley's Condition.

Canton, O., Oct. 2.—Mrs. McKinley's condition is so far improved that she will not have a physician in constant attendance. Dr. P. M. Rixey, of the United States Navy, who has cared for her for several years past, being with the family most of the time, Tuesday evening ceased to be a member of the household, and with Secretary to the President Cortelyou returned to Washington. Dr. Rixey will report to the department immediately, he having been here on a special detail, but he is subject to a call any time his services here are necessary to Mrs. McKinley.

A MEMORIAL MEETING

Mr. McKinley's Last Words Were: "Nearer, My God, To Thee; E'en Tho' It Be a Cross, It Has Had My Constant Prayer."

Washington, Oct. 7.—The sons and daughters of the late President McKinley's native state of Ohio, who are now residents of Washington, Sunday paid a last public tribute to the memory of their dead congressman, governor and president, in a largely attended meeting at Chase's opera house. The gathering was held under the auspices of the Ohio Republican association, but was not confined to Ohioans. About 3,000 persons were present. The decorations were appropriate to the occasion. The marine band furnished the music, and was stationed on the stage directly under a large crayon protrait of President McKinley, which was draped in graceful folds of black, the whole surrounded by an immense American flag. The meeting was presided over by Col. J. H. Brigham, assistant secretary of agriculture. Rev. Dr. J. H. Muir delivered the invocation, and addresses were made by Rev. Frank M. Bristol, the pastor of the Metropolitan church, which the president attended while in Washington; Judge Thomas H. Anderson, Hon. Alphonso Hart, Hon. D. K. Watson, and Simon Wolf, of Washington. The speeches were full of expressions of love and honor for the memory of Mr. McKinley, and dwelt on the virtues and qualities which had endeared him to the people. Several of the speakers took occasion to denounce the anarchist in unmeasured terms, and advised that dire measures be taken against them.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the reading of a letter from Dr. M. D. Mann, one of the president's physicians, to Mr. T. M. Sullivan, the secretary of the association. It was as follows:

Buffalo, Sept. 26, 1901.—T. M. Sullivan, Esq.: My Dear Sir.—As President McKinley was dying, I stood behind a screen in his room and heard him say his last words. His wife came into his room, and he said to her, "Good-bye, all, good-bye. It is God's way. His will be done, not ours." There was some further conversation with his wife in the way of leave-taking, but this should not be repeated. About an hour later, he said to his wife, "Nearer, my God, to Thee. E'en tho' it be a cross, it has had by constant prayer." He tried to say some thing more, but I could not catch it. I gave out at the time the first sentence as being the most appropriate to be remembered as his last words. I wrote them down at the time so that there can be no question about it. Yours truly,

M. D. MANN.

A letter from President Roosevelt, regretting his inability to attend, was read.

Chinese Court Will Leave Sian Fu About October 6.

Several Eunuchs Beheaded For Practicing Extortion Among the People—Dowager Empress Afraid of Foreign Troops.

Peking, Oct. 3.—Dispatches from Sian Fu announce that the Chinese court is preparing to start about October 6. The temporary palace there is being dismantled and all the furnishings will be carried for use en route. The officials and servants will constitute a caravan numbering 3,000 to 5,000 persons, with 1,200 carts and several thousand horses and mules that have been collected in the Sian Fu district.

The native papers report that several eunuchs have been beheaded for practicing extortion among the people. An imperial edict commends Li Hung Chang, as governor of the province of Chi Li, to borrow 700,000 taels from the other provinces to defray the expenses of the court's journey. Special local taxes are being levied which the people, already impoverished by bandits, foreign punitive expeditions and missionary indemnities, are ill able to afford.

Li Hung Chang said Wednesday: "The court will certainly arrive in Peking within two months."

Despite such official statements, many foreign officials here believe the empress dowager fears the foreign troops are kept to entrap and punish her, and the theory is that the will pass the winter in Kai-Yuen-Fu, sending the emperor to Peking.

The continual broadside of reform edicts is the topic of much varied comment. Those best able to judge of their sincerity or effectiveness withhold judgment. Prince Ching, conversing with foreign officials, asserted that the empress and the empress dowager were agreed as to the necessity of changing the Chinese methods of government, and that steps for the enforcement of edicts would be taken as soon as court returned to Peking.

Unquestionably the reform movement is stronger among the upper classes than ever before.

ROPE AROUND HIS NECK.

A Russian Pole, Avowed Anarchist, Narrowly Escaped Lynching By Fellow Workmen.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 3.—Workmen in the forge shops of the Rhode Island locomotive works in this city, incensed by the utterances of a Russian Pole, laboring among them, who avowed himself an anarchist, and said he would some time do what Czolgosz had done, proceeded to string him up in the shop Wednesday. They fastened a rope around his neck, carried it over the jib of a crane and hauled it on until he was about to be lifted from the floor. Then the head hammer man interfered. The men declared they did not intend to kill him, but they were determined to make him feel the force of their power to do so, and make him understand that only a lawful spirit saved him from death. The assistant superintendent on learning of the affair discharged the man.

AERONAUT LOST.

No Trace Can Be Found of Lillian Le Fay, Who Made An Ascension at LaSalle, Ill.

LaSalle, Ill, Oct. 4.—Mrs. L. A. Seeley, an aeronaut known as Lillian LeFay, made a balloon ascension in this city Wednesday night about dusk, and up to a late hour Thursday night no trace of her has been found. Her husband, who followed the balloon, claims to have seen his wife make the parachute leap successfully at a point south of the Illinois river. The parachute and his wife, he said, descended slowly behind a grove of trees. This vicinity was thoroughly searched in vain. Late Thursday afternoon the balloon was found one mile south of here.

Another witness says the woman and the parachute landed in the river. The river was dragged a distance of several miles Thursday, with no results.

The situation is the result of a meeting Tuesday night, at which the men joined the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes. Wednesday morning as the men reported for work they were asked if they had joined the union and those who answered in the affirmative were discharged.

SOUTH AMERICAN WAR.

Willemstadt, Curacao, Oct. 5.—The following message was received from a correspondent on the field.

On the road between Sinamaica, Venezuela, and La Hacha, Colombia, Guajira Peninsula, Sept. 29, by messenger to Maracaibo, then by steamer to Curacao.—With Gen. Davilas' column of 1,500 men, with five field guns, advancing toward La Hacha. This road is still fairly filled with fugitives and wounded Venezuelans from the fighting of September 14 and 15, returning to Maracaibo as best they can. Davilas' column left Sinamaica yesterday morning.

Venezuela seems determined, if possible, to retrieve her fallen fortunes at Guajira. If she fails, it is believed even among army officers that the Colombian forces, allied Guajira Indians and Venezuelan revolutionists opposed to President Castro will unite and march upon Maracaibo, with good chances of capturing the place. Such action would probably mean the capture of San Carlos fort, and the liberation of the Venezuelan political prisoners there, including Gen. Hernandez or "El Mocho."

The most serious feature of the Guajira campaign to-day is the attitude of the Guajira Indians. When the Venezuelans first entered the peninsula they robbed the Indians of their cattle and generally maltreated them. The Indians are now retaliating, cruelly mutilating and murdering the many numerous fugitives, who have been straggling since the defeat over the waterless, burning, flat peninsula in an effort to reach their lines or their coast.

THE FIGHT AT CUROGA.

Gen. Davilas Was Absolutely Routed and Gen. Echeverria Was Killed in Battle.

Gen. Davilas' first fight at Curoga was an absolute rout. Five Venezuelan battalions of 400 men each were engaged, and the Colombians are estimated at the same number. It is now known that Gen. Echeverria was killed on the battlefield, and not shot by the Colombians. The battalion called the "Sacred battalion," composed of gentlemen volunteers, mounted, was the first to break and retire before the Colombians. After Gen. Echeverria was killed, Gen. Davilas, Clodomire Castillo and Ermilio Castro, a brother of President Castro, fled the field. Another battalion then broke. The three remaining battalions kept on fighting after the flight of the higher officers until routed. About 6,000 were killed on the Venezuelan side, including 30 minor officers. All the flags of the Venezuelans were lost, as well as Gen. Davilas' cannon, variously reported at from five to 15. Such as were not captured by the Colombians were thrown into the river by the retreating Venezuelans.

GEN. URIBE URIBE.

He Is Generally Credited With Being the Leader of the Venezuelan Forces at Tachira.

Vague, unverifiable, but persistent, reports are current here, and have been current for four days, to the effect that President Castro's Venezuelan forces at Tachira and in the vicinity of San Cristobal suffered defeat at the hands of Gen. Rangel Garbiras and his Colombian conservative supporters September 25 and 26.

According to another report Gen. Uribe Uribe, the Colombian liberal revolutionist, with his Colombian followers, has lately been at Tachira. He is generally credited with being the leader of the Venezuelan government forces there. But it is now said he is fleeing from Tachira as a result of the recent defeat, and is headed for Maracaibo.

According to yet other reports, Gen. Uribe Uribe was killed. At present it is impossible to obtain satisfactory confirmation of refutation of these rumors.

FEAR A MASSACRE.

Minnesota Pioneer Trader Appeals to the Governor For Protection Against Indians.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 5.—Lars Ericksen, a pioneer trader of Mille Lacs, Indian county, called on Gov. Van Sant for aid. The settlers on the south shore of Mille Lacs lake are in great dread of the Indians, who are on homestead land, where they have no rights, but are very ugly over the proposed removal to White Earth and over the smallpox quarantine. Ericksen said the settlers were seven hours from a telegraph, and might all be massacred before help could come in case of an actual outbreak. The government is holding moneys due the Indians because they will not move, and this increases the tension.

AMERICA'S CUP STAYS.

The English Yacht Beaten in Three Straight Races.

The Challenger Is Admitted to Be the Ablest Foreign Boat That Ever Crossed the Western Ocean.

New York, Oct. 4.—In a glorious breeze which heeled the big cup contestants down until their lee rails were awash, Herreshoff's white wonder, Columbia, Thursday beat Watson's British creation, Shamrock II., over a triangular course of 30 miles by two minutes and 52 seconds actual time. With the 43 seconds, which the Irish sloop must allow the American boat on account of her larger sail plan, the Columbia won the second race of the series by three minutes and 35 seconds.

Thursday as the Columbia swept across the finish the din was defening. Whistles split the ear and steam sirens wailed, drowning the crash of the bands and the cheers of the people. The concert of sound was terrific. Until after the gallant Shamrock, beaten, but not disgraced, crossed a minute and 18 seconds later, whistles and sirens were kept going. When they died away the bands could be heard playing "Columbia, Gem of the Ocean," "Yankee Doodle," and other patriotic airs.

New York, Oct. 5.—With victory flags flowing from her towering mastheads and the ends of her spreaders in honor of her concluding triumph in the cup races of 1901, the gallant sloop, Columbia, returned to her anchorage under the escort of the entire excursion fleet. She completed her defense of the honored trophy in another stirring race with the Shamrock II. over a leeward and windward race of 30 miles, crossing the finish line two seconds behind her antagonist, but winning on the time allowance conceded by Lipton's boat by 41 seconds.

The series of races just closed will always be memorable as the closest ever sailed for the cup, and Sir Thomas, although defeated, will go home with the satisfaction of knowing that his golden yacht is the ablest foreign boat that ever crossed the western ocean.

Friday's race, on paper, was the closest of the series, but because of the flukiness of the wind on the beat home, as a contest of the relative merits of the yachts, it is not to be compared with the magnificent, truly run and royally-fought battles of Saturday and Thursday.

It was a pretty sight, and one seldom witnessed, when the vessels crossed the home line, rail to rail, the white yacht's bowsprit lapping the golden boat's mast. The usual pandemonium that attends the final Yankee victory in a cup contest followed. Whistles, sirens, bells, bands and cheers united in a grand chorus of jubilation.

After the Columbia had hauled down her sails and set her victory flag, the excursion boats crowded alongside to cheer the Yankee sailors and the winning skipper. Nor did they forget either Lipton or his gallant craft. In turn the crowded steamers ran alongside the Shamrock and Erin, and the vanquished received almost as much honor as the victor. And thus, with felicitations all around, the twelfth series of races for the old cup which the schooner America brought over 50 years ago ended with the best of feeling.

KING EDWARD'S HEALTH.

It Is Understood That His Complaint Is Lumbago, But the Attack Is Not Serious.

London, Oct. 3.—The reports from Scotland that Sir James Reid, the royal physician, has been summoned to the king's bedside, have increased the apprehension regarding the king's illness. There is a growing fear that his malady is of a more serious character than has been stated.

It was ascertained Friday evening that King Edward's complaint is lumbago, but the attack is not at all serious. He drove out Friday evening.

Sir James Reid, the well known physician, who was summoned to Balmoral from Aberdeen, returned to London Friday night.

MISS HELEN LONG.

The Second Daughter of Secretary John D. Long Died of Pulmonary Trouble.

Hingham, Mass., Oct. 5.—Miss Helen Long, second daughter of Secretary John D. Long, died Friday night. The end came almost sooner than expected, although when the secretary was summoned home from Washington early in the week it was known that his daughter's condition was very critical.

Miss Long died of pulmonary trouble, which had its inception after close attention to the social duties during Secretary Long's term in the cabinet Mrs. Long's health had failed and it was necessary for Miss Helen to take her place.

THE SHAMROCK'S FAILURE.

There Is a Feeling of Disappointment in London Over the Outcome of the Yacht Races.

London, Oct. 5.—There is a feeling of supreme disappointment in London over the failure of the Shamrock II. to win even a single race. Those who denounced Sir Thomas Lipton's ambition, asserting that he was using his yacht to advance his business in this, now realize that his sportsmanlike efforts deserved a better result.

When it was announced that the Shamrock II. was leading near home the news was received in silence by the crowds on the embankment. There never was much betting on the outcome in this country, but the disappointment among the masses is sincere and great.

The question is raised here whether the defeat of the challenger was due to the superiority of American seamanship or the better constructive ability of the Americans. With a view of settling the question, the Daily Express has cabled Commodore Morgan and Sir Thomas Lipton, suggesting that they should arrange a race with the Columbia's crew on board the Shamrock II. and the crew of the challenger on board the defender.

U. S.—Well, now, my dear, so long we've been together—
In sunshine bright as well as stormy weather—
How glad your Uncle is, and you are, too,
He's still to keep and fondly cherish you!

TWO TRAINS COLLIDED

Four Men Killed and Another Injured Near Onward, Ind.

One Engine Reared in the Air, Turned Clear Around and Came Down on Her Side in the Ditch.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 7.—Four Pan-Handle trainmen met an awful death near Onward, 14 miles southeast of here Sunday morning, in a rear-end collision of freight trains, the bodies of three being taken out badly mutilated and the fourth being almost entirely consumed before the wreck crew could subdue the flames sufficiently to permit work in that portion of the debris.

The dead: Albert Greeley, conductor; Thomas H. Brosius, flagman; S. A. Galbreath, brakeman; John Hutchison, fireman. The injured: Frank Patterson, engineer.

During the night Conductor Weaver, in charge of the second section of Train No. 79, an engine and two cabooses, left Hartford City for Logansport. In the rear caboose were Galbreath, Brosius and Greeley, who had been working on the gravel train at Hartford City, and who were en route to this city to spend Sunday with their families.

They were all asleep when the train stopped near Onward to make up steam. The flagman was sent out to watch for the third section from the east, and no danger was thought of until the train loomed up too close for any to escape except Weaver, who jumped and got off uninjured.

The third section, with Engineer Frank Patterson at the throttle, had attained high speed, and when it struck the rear caboose the engine reared in the air, turned clear around and came down on her side in the ditch, mashing a number of cars into kindling wood and burying in the debris the sleeping trainmen and Hutchinson, the fireman for Patterson.

The wreckage promptly caught fire, and the flame kept at bay the uninjured trainmen and the men who gathered from nearby farm houses. A special train conveyed a part of the Logansport fire department to the scene. The fire was extinguished and the work of removing the bodies began. The remains of Galbreath, Hutchinson and Greeley were found, but the body of Brosius was almost entire consumed, only pieces of burned flesh and bones being recovered.

Six cars were burned from the third section, which, with the two cabooses and the ruined engine, make the loss large.

STUDENT "DISCIPLINED."

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 7.—George F. Stockwell, a student in the preparatory department of Beloit college, was enticed from his room at the house of President Eaton at an early hour Sunday morning by members of the middle preparatory class. He was overpowered, divested of every article of clothing, and compelled to walk ahead of a score of howling students, aided by the application of switches in the hands of his tormentors. His clothing was fastened to the top of of a flagpole, and after he had been sufficiently "disciplined," he was allowed to go home to plan revenge.

The outrage is the climax of a number of class fights this year, in which the worst punishment heretofore inflicted was compelling students to walk into town after having been driven far into the country.

ELEVATED TRACKS.

The Pennsylvania & Fort Wayne Railways Joined Over the New Structure at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—The Pennsylvania & Fort Wayne tracks were joined Sunday over the new elevated structure on the Liberty street side of the new Union Station. At 11 o'clock traffic was suspended, over 1,000 men were put to work, and 7:30 Train No. 15, the Chicago express, passed over the new elevated tracks. Several trains in the meantime were sent through the Pan-Handle tunnel and back to the Fort Wayne by the Ohio connecting bridge.

The work Sunday is considered one of the most expeditious and stupendous feats of its kind performed in recent years.

Took Morphine.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 7.—John Wyatt Turner, of Rock Hill, Ala., assistant instructor in the carding and spinning branches of the textile department of the Georgia School of Technology, committed suicide Sunday night by taking morphine. ANARCHISTS' MEETING.

The Police Prevented Speech Making in a Hall in Fourth Street, New York City.

New York, Oct. 7.—One thousand alleged anarchists assembled in a hall in Fourth street, this city, Sunday night, ostensibly to hold a ball in honor of the organization of the Freiarbeiter Stemmo, said to be a society composed of anarchists, but the nature of the assemblage was suspected by the manager of the hall, and in a short time 40 policemen were on the scene, under command of Acting Capt. Place. The manager learned that the meeting was really planned to hear Johann Most make a speech, but Most, while on his way to the hall, was warned away by members of the society who were sent out to head him off when the police arrived on the scene.

The presence of the officers prevented any speech making.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 7.—An official call was issued from the national headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America Sunday for a convention of representatives of organized and unorganized miners of Virginia and West Virginia, to be held at Huntington, W. Va., October 31, for the purpose of devising "some plan by which the miners and operators of the two states may be brought into closer relation with each other, and the interests of the miners cared for along business lines that may secure for them higher wages and better conditions of employment." The call is the outcome of the meeting at Parkersburg, W. Va., a week ago.

SIX MEN INJURED.

Fire Damages the Pittsburg Clay Pot Works in Allegheny to the Amount of $280,000.

Pittsburg, Oct. 7.—Fire Sunday in the Pittsburg clay pot works in Allegheny damaged the plant to the extent of $230,000, injured six men, and enforced an idleness of several months upon a force of 165 workmen.

The injured men were firemen who were on the roof of the boiler house when the wall fell and they were carried with it. None of them will die. The fire originated in the boiler room from an unknown cause, and quickly burned its way through into the upper floors, used as a drying room, and kept at a high temperature. From there they communicated to Block No. 3, and it was soon reduced to ruins.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

PADUCAH has one of the sprightliest daily papers in the State—the Democrat.

THE fight for the Williamstown postoffice grows more interesting day by day.

IT is not positively certain that President Roosevelt was carrying out a McKinley policy when he dined Booker Washington at the White House.

THE Maryland Republicans seem to be restricted in their candidates for election to the Senate to Wellington and Mudd. They'll both be mud when the fight is over.

IT does not take long to enforce the law against carrying concealed weapons in Ohio, and it would be better for Kentucky were she to get equally as swift a move on in that direction.

ACCORDING to the voting lists of some years ago, Tammany is badly beaten this year. As it happens, however, Tammany will insist on deciding the election by the votes of this year.

WE suspect that the British are not worrying so much over how to whip the Boers as they are over their inability to let go the tail of the bull that they grasped so lightheartedly two years ago.

STAMPS to the amount of $76,068 were stolen from the Chicago postoffice by thieves who crawled under the flooring and bored their way into the vault. The robbers carried away their booty in a wagon. No clew to their identity has been discovered.

THERE is a paper in Covington that cannot find a political party fit for it to covy with, which thinks there has been some kind of a deal made by the Democrats and Republicans in Kenton county, by which some of the candidates on each ticket are to be elected.

Now it seems that that alleged canal treaty presented to the country by several able Washington correspondents, was based on the story of a man to whom Mr. Roosevelt had remarked casually that he thought the country would like the treaty—when it was made.

SOUTHERN CONGRESSMAN in Washington believe President Roosevelt has done great harm to his new Southern departure by entertaining Prof. Washington at his dinner table. President Roosevelt is said to be undisturbed by the comments made upon his violation of the unwritten law, and the statement is made that he will again entertain Washington.

THE Populists are sending to the candidates for the Legislature in counties where they have no candidates, a pledge which they desire signed and returned to their headquarters. Hon. J. W. Kennedy, Democratic nominee in this county, has received two of these pledges, but it is useless to say that neither of them will receive his signature. Such a move on the part of the leaders of any political party is nothing short of an insult to the person addressed.

FOREIGN hunters are annoying the farmers in this county, as usual this fall. They come in crowds and shoot without regard to persons, stock or dwellings. Along the railroad Sunday appears to be their favorite day of the seven for pursuing what little game there is to be found, and in many instances persons who desire to attend church fear to leave their premises, not knowing what depredations might be committed in their absence. Boone county is not a game reserve to be visited by any and all persons, and a few cases of the enforcement of the law against trespassing might have a salutary effect. A farmer can arrest and prosecute before a justice of the peace any person found trespassing upon his land. To constitute a trespass it is only necessary to enter upon the land of another. This law gives the farmer the advantage, and the imposition of a few $5 fines with trimmings attached, will afford the relief sought.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

Mary Greenwell vs. Horace Greenwell, decree granted.

Only six indictments were found by the Grand Jury which was in session six days. This is the smallest number of indictments found by any Grand Jury within our knowledge.

The past week has been a prolific one in the matrimonial field in Grant county, and the County Clerk has been kept busy a good deal of his time issuing licenses to parties matrimonially inclined.

Monday was a lively day in the horse market of Williamstown. More than a hundred horses and mules were bought by the various buyers at prices ranging from $50 to $150. Cattle and hogs also brought surprisingly good prices.

Grant county has for many years had the reputation of having a stong local bar, lawyers of great ability, legal acumen, and profound erudition. During the past week there has been a daily battle in the Circuit Court room of legal athletes, that it has been a pleasure to see and hear. The reputation of the bar has been sustained and new glory added to its laurels. Dickerson, Gray, DeJarnette and Carnes have won new honors and have added to the already great reputation held by the local bar.

The report of the Grand Jury indicates that all of the public buildings are in excellent condition. That some slight improvements ought to be made at the County Infirmary, but that keeper Hall has everything in first-class condition. The Grand Jury did not return a single indictment for selling whiskey, something that has not occurred in Grant county for many years. Only seven indictments in all were returned, certainly a great compliment to the morals and good behavior of the citizens of Grant county.

Lieutenant Savage, who opened recruiting station here last week, did a land office business last Monday. More than thirty young men presented themselves as applicants for enlistment in Uncle Sam's army and nearly all of them passed the physical and intellectual examination. When it came to the final test, however, only nine could be found who really wanted to go, or were able to obtain consent of their parental guardian. The following are the nine who enlisted: Albert Printy, Robert J. Dyas, R. D. Wade, S. P. York, Parker Osborne, J. C. Webb, A. F. Barnett, Willie McHatton and John Bailey. The boys were all sent to Columbus, Ohio, Tuesday, where they will be fitted out with uniforms and become a part of the standing army.

Flickertown.

Sorghum is on the bill of fare.

John Deck was elected school trustee.

Born, to Jim Burns and wife, on the 7th inst., a girl.

The Town hunters have commenced annoying the farmers.

A small acreage of wheat was sown this fall, on account of the drouth.

A fine rain fell here on Saturday week, the first of any consequence for several weeks.

Jim Aylor has rented Miss Julia Smith's farm on Ashby Fork, and will move there in the spring.

The Valley ball team intended to come up and take the scalps of our boys, but did not appear on account of the rain.

We have one confessed anarchist in this neighborhood in the person of Mrs. Martha Delph. She says she is an anarchist from head to foot, and is proud of it. She says she would like to help some one get rid of a few more such things as old McKinley.

In a recent communication the Plattsburg correspondent said the Woolper Sunday school had changed to base ball. We beg to differ from him on that point, as we happen to know that his so called base ball, which was not base ball at all, but only an innocent pastime among a few of the boys, did not interfere with the Sunday school nor disturb anyone in the least.

Visiting turfmen from Cleveland whose names could not be learned, broke a faro bank at Lexington Saturday night, winning between $5,000 and $6,000. Since the rain stopped the racing Saturday there was big gambling at Lexington, all the houses working overtime. The game in question was run by Louisville men, who arrived the first of last week with a roll amounting to about 4,000. They had increased this to nearly $6,000 when they were cleaned out Saturday night.—Paris Kentuckian.

What is believed to be a wild woman is terrorizing the Taggart Creek community in Bell county. The creature it is reported has long black hair, and resembles a woman in many respects. One of the stories is that the thing was first seen nearly two weeks ago by John Lane, a farmer, of Taggart Creek. He was watering his horse when the woman, if such it proves to be, sprang from a tree on the horse he was riding. She screamed fearfully and tried to scratch him. After great difficulty he beat her off and fled. Since then the creature has been seen by some of the best and most reliable people of that community. The creature proved to be a woman by the way she went after that man.

While at work recently on the farm of Noble Stairs, at Wellsburg, parties hauling rock for a turnpike unearthed an ancient burying ground where no such thing was expected. On a small flat at the foot of a hill near the public road some loose rocks appeared on the surface and the workingmen were permitted to use them, expecting to get one or two wagons load of rock. The little knoll finally developed into a pile of loose rock, and over forty wagon loads were taken out, when the workmen came upon eight well preserved human skeletons. The bones were in a good state of preservation until exposed to the air, when most of them crumbled into dust. There yet remains many of the bones intact, including jawbones containing well preserved teeth. A very peculiar feature of the find was the position of the skeletons, which may lead to the identification of the race of people buried there. The eight distinct skeletons were found with their heads to the center of a circle, with their bodies extending out from the circle line in all directions like the spokes of a wheel. Let some one versed in archaeology investigate.—Augusta Chronicle.

How to Carry a Gun.

There are only two directions which the muzzle of a gun can safely be pointed; these are up or down. A shot fired in air can scarcely injure any one or anything and one discharged into the ground is equally harmless. Therefore, in all the different positions which the gun assumes, see that it is pointed either up or down.

Sometimes a man will be seen who carries his gun reversed, holding it by the muzzle while the fore end rests on the shoulder and the stock projects behind. Happily, this practice is not common, for it is extremely dangerous, and many men have been killed by carrying their guns in this way. If a man stumbles or steps in a hole or catches his foot on a root and falls, his gun will very likely be thrown forward with the muzzle directly toward his body and may easily enough be discharged.

Sometimes one may see a boy or even a man who will carry the gun across the back of the neck, with one arm over the stock and the other over the barrels, sometimes with the hand resting on the muzzle. This is certain to give a very uncomfortable feeling to any one who happens to be walking by the side of the person carrying his gun in this fashion and opposite the muzzle end. While the danger of a discharge is perhaps not great, it is unpleasant to be walking along with a gun pointed at your neck or head.—Forest and Stream.

If the wool and mutton are the first class you need not fear the market.

Crop and Stock.

Charles Caldwell, of Boyle county, sold to Simon Weil, of Lexington, 75 head of 1,400 pound cattle at $5.25 per cwt.

Thos. Brock, of Clark county, bought in Madison county, fifty good feeding cattle of 1,000 pounds weight, at 4 cents.

William Bonta, of Mercer county, bought in Boyle and Garrard counties a lot of the finest mule colts in Ky., at from $60 to $80 per head.

In many of the counties of the State the tobacco crop is said to be the largest in the last twenty years. In Russell county it is said the crop will average 300 pounds heavier to the acre than it did last season.

Many a farmer has to buy new tools because of not taking care of the ones he has. Do not let the cultivator and mower remain in the field all fall and winter. Get them up to-day, paint them and put them under the shelter.

A wild horse hunt took place in Utah recently, when as many desert horses were exterminated as could be rounded up. Two years ago there was a similar hunt and nearly 500 horses were killed. This year they have again become so numerous that they are a nuisance.

At Richmond court-day the largest crowd which has been seen on the streets in many a day. The stock market was fairly good. About 400 mules colts were offered, the best finding ready sales. Prices ranged from $32 to 80. Quite a number of aged mules were on the market and brought good prices.

If corn fodder is harvested at the right time, properly handled and cared for, it makes our best feed for farm stock, and especially if a little corn has been left on it, says a correspondent of Prairie Farmer. I would recommend that fodder be cut rather high, so as to leave the hardest part of the stalk in the field. I have handled and fed cattle for the last fifty years, and corn fodder, corn and all makes one of the best balanced rations for fattening cattle I have ever tried.

We never tried the plan of selecting seed potatoes when we were digging by taking only those from the most prolific hills, yet it might be a profitable method. If like produces like it should result in a better yield. When we were farming we had not thought as much about such things as we have since, and we were thought a little cranky because we selected our ears of corn for seed from those that matured the earliest, allowed a strip of the best peas to go to seed instead of picking them for market, and allowed the earliest beans on the hill to ripen. We thought it paid us well to do so, and those who laughed at us for bothering so were not unwilling to come to us for seed. If it was profitable to select other seed from the most prolific plants, why not try it with the potato tubers?—American Cultivator.

The turkey crop this year is considerably above the average in quantity and quality and there will be plenty to supply every table in the land. Dealers are preparing for the slaughter and the stock will soon begin to move. Prices for the birds on foot are not likely to exceed the 6½ cent mark, owing to the increase production this year, and the large surplus of cold storage stock left over from last year. Shipments to the eastern markets last year exceeded by nearly 100,000 packages the shipments of the year before, and it is estimated that there are now in cold storage in Boston alone 35,000 to 40,000 packages which the holders are trying to dispose of at actural cost. This condition will have a tendency to decrease the demand for fresh stock, and when, in addition, the increase in the production this year, which is estimated at 60 to 70 per cent., is considered, it will be seen that there is little encouragement to expect high prices for turkeys this fall.—Winchester Democrat.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for Coughs, Colds, Throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner Florence; H. L. Eskew of Walton; O. N. LOCAL NEWS.

M. S. RICE, DEAD.

Just as we were going to press we hear that ex-county surveyor M. S. Rice died this morning. He was found dead in the privy. He was in his 84th year, and had been in his usual health all summer.

In meat put up by the farmers, this winter, there will be two or three streaks of lean to one of fat.

The ice last Friday was not the first of the season. Some claim they saw ice one morning during a recent cool snap.

Turkies are dying off, and the usual amount of Thanksgiving dinners will not be in the country when the times comes to enjoy them.

W. C. Brown has purchased of V. W. Gaines his butcher business. Mr. Gaines has worked up quite a good trade in Burlington and surrounding country.

Advertising "do pay." Last week a two liner found Eddins' kraut cutter before it was printed, which is about as quick as that class of work can be done.

E. E. Fry, of Verona, was in town a day or two last week, with a full supply of new jokes. He is at the head of the class when it comes to selling machinery or telling jokes.

Bert Rouse arrived home from Marysville, Ohio, last Wednesday, where he had sojourned for four weeks. He is well pleased with the treatment he received while tarrying in the Buckeye State.

Marce Riddell entered upon a new profession, last week, that of a deborner. His first subject was their milch cow, and the operation was a success. He throws the animal down, and amputates the horn with a wood saw.

The excitement incident to traveling and change of food and water often brings on diarrhoea, and for this reason no one should leave home without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by all Druggists.

Last week mention was made of the peculiar action of W. J. Rice's dog, which resulted in its being killed. A few days since a hog belonging to John Bachelor, and known to have been bitten by the dog, developed a case of hydrophobia, while two of Mr. Rice's have gone mad, one of them dying and the other having to be killed. It is feared that considerable other stock was bitten by the dog.

John W. Gaines, living near Plattsburg, came very near losing his barn by spontaneous combustion, a few days ago. A stranger who came to his house went into the barn to see Mr. Gaines' jack, and discovered a pile of dry manure in the stable just about ready to begin blazing. The fire was extinguished by a bucket of water. In a few minutes more a $1,000 barn, filled with provender and farming implements would have been too far gone to save.

For some time it has been a question as to which of the following peasons, Edwin Gaines, Hal Blanton, Berto Watson, Lou Clarkson, Lane Riggs, H. T. Gaines or Dr. Hays, has the fastest roadster, and to settle the question so that it will not disturb future generations, they have been accorded the privilege of Oakley, Ohio, track, for the purpose of pulling of a race between their roadsters next Saturday. It will be an exciting event, and some of the boys are busy conditioning their animals. Edwin Gaines put a ton of hay in his loft Monday, and has invested extensively in red flannel and sponges, and it is said that several of the other boys are making equally as elaborate preparations. In the language of Harper, the famous race horse man, "it will be a race from eend to eend." They are to go three best in five.

A negro man, two white boys and a white man, came out from Newport, Monday, and took boarding at Harrison Minor's, colored, intending to spend a few days hunting. They secured the services of Henry Osborn, colored, as their guide over the country. Monday and Tuesday were spent in the fields in the vicinity of town, and the roar of their fire arms was almost ceaseless. Tuesday evening when they returned to town they were arrested by deputy sheriff Eddins, into whose hands had been placed a warrant charging them with trespass. The entire party was taken before County Judge Roberts, when they plead guilty, and each of the town men, except the smallest boy, was fined five dollars and costs amounting in the aggregate to $35. The trial of Henry Osborn was continued until to-morrow. The strangers pledged their guns for the payment of the fines and the costs, and they were told to go and to come hither to hunt no more. They lost no time in getting out of the town, and the account they will give their friends of their adventure in this county will deter them from coming this way with their dogs and guns. The county judge and county attorney are ready to give attention to that manner of infraction of law as well as to others.

The habit of speaking of the general purpose cow sometimes leads people into classing with this animal the no-purpose cow, says E. P. Smith in "Progressive Farmer." This latter animal is in evidence on a great many farms, and it has done more toward injuring the dairying and the cattle business than anything else.

The no-purpose cow is much like the mongrel dog or the barn yard fowl. Neither has any particular breed, possibilities or capabilities. They exist because they are the products of a lazy, careless system. They do not help their owner much, but tend to discourage him with his life.

The no-purpose cow is the product of indifferent systems of farming, and it is an animal which is neither good for milk nor beef. She is usually a good feeder, an excellent feeder, in fact, but not much of a producer. It is astonishing sometimes to know where the food goes which she eats, for it is converted neither into fat, flesh or milk. It must make bone, muscle or sinew, for the flesh of the animal is generally tough enough when eaten

Now, the general-purpose cow is a cross or type intermediate between the beef and dairy type. This animal, strictly speaking, is the product of careful and good breeding, and is not the outcome of chance or accident. She has been bred for a dual purpose, and if she comes up to anticipations, she is a good milker and a good beef producer. While not as good as the best beef animals or the finest dairy cows in producing flesh or milk, she nevertheless possesses the ability to partake of each to a considerable degree.

She is eminently adapted to the general farmer who wishes milk, and later a fat cow for the shambles, with calves which will produce good veal in a short time from birth. It may not be generally known, but it is more difficult to raise such an animal than a typical beef or dairy cow. The danger, however, comes in with the no-purpose cow. In trying to secure a good general purpose animal we may stumble upon the former. This should be avoided in every possible way, for the investment would prove as unsatisfactory as any possibly could on the farm.

Whereas, vacancies have occurred in the following Circuit Court Judicial Districts for the reasons hereinafter stated:

3. In the Eighteenth Judicial District, by reason of the death of Hon. W. W. Kimbrough.

4. In the Twenty-seventh Judicial District, by reason of the resignation of Hon. J. H. Tinsley.

ADM. SCHLEY WAS COOL

Leading Spanish Ship Led Steadily on Brooklyn's Port Bow for Some Time and Then Turned.

The Navy Department Has Placed Adm. Schley on "Active Duty" While the Court of Inquiry Is in Progress.

Washington, Oct. 15.—Monday in the Schley court of inquiry Judge Advocate Lemly concluded presentation of testimony for the government and the first of Adm. Schley's witnesses was introduced. Capt. Francis A. Cook, who commanded Adm. (then Commodore) Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, during the Santiago campaign, and who acted, though unofficially, in the capacity of chief of staff for the commodore, was on the witness stand the greater part of the day. He was followed by Lieut. Commander William F. Fullam, who was senior watch officer on the New Orleans during the Spanish war, and former Lieut. Joseph Beall, who as officer on the Harvard translated the cipher dispatches between Commodore Schley and the navy department carried by that vessel. Among these dispatches was that sent by Commodore Schley May 28, expressing his regret at not having been able to obey the orders of the department, and explain the reason why he could not do so. There are some verbal discrepancies between the original draft of this dispatch and the official print of it, and these Mr. Beall explained.

Lieut. Beall was the last of the government witnesses, although Capt. Lemly said he would reserve the right to call others if occasion should demand that he do so. He had no sooner retired than the first witness for Adm. Schley was called.

This proved to be the Cuban pilot, Edwardo Nunez, who told Schley on May 26, 1898, that he did not believe the Spanish fleet under Cervera was in the harbor at Santiago.

Capt. Cook's testimony was a review of the entire campaign after Cervera's fleet, beginning with the departure of the flying squadron from Key West on May 19 and concluding with the battle off Santiago July 3. He said that at first it had been believed by both Sampson and Schley that the Spanish fleet was in the harbor at Cienfuegos, and that no information to the contrary had been conveyed to Commodore Schley until the arrival of Capt. McCalla on May 24; that it was Commodore Schley's expectation to meet the Spaniards in there, and his care was to have coal enough for such emergency. He gave particulars concerning the retrograde movement, and explained the Brooklyn's loop, in connection with a graphic account of the engagement of July 3. Asked for an opinion as to Adm. Schley's bearing as a commanding officer, he said:

"I always regarded him as an enthusiastically brave and patriotic officer."

Capt. Cook, in his testimony, said he ordered the loop and stoutly maintained that it was good judgment. After making the turn the Brooklyn alone was receiving the fire of the Viscaya, Colon and Oquendo.

When Hanna asked a theoretical question as to what would have happened if the Brooklyn had been handled differently, he said, with some feeling: "I know that what we did do was entirely successful. If we had done something else I do not know whether it would have been successful."

Washington, Oct. 16.—Only one new witness was heard in detail by the Schley court of inquiry Tuesday. This was Lieut.-Com. James H. Sears, who was Adm. Schley's flag lieutenant during the Spanish war. He gave a detailed account of the entire Cuban campaign, including the brief siege of Cienfuegos, the retrograde movement of the flying squadron in search of coal, the blockade of Santiago, the reconnoissance of the Santiago shore batteries and the bombardment of the Cristobol Colon May 31 and the battle off Santiago, July 3, when Cervera's fleet was destroyed. He placed distance out of Cienfuegos at one to four miles and at Santiago from three to six miles. He expressed the opinion that in battle of July 3 it had been the Viscaya's intention to ram the Brooklyn.

While Commander Sears was on the stand, Capt. Lemly asked his age, but the court, after quite a prolonged consultation in retirement, decided that the question was not admissible. It held, however, the time of service could be inquired into.

Mr. Raines sought to secure the introduction of a brief of the battle of July 3, which Commodore Schley prepared from transmission to the secretary of the navy. It was stated that Commander Sears had taken this dispatch ashore to be cabled to the secretary, but that it never had reached that official. The dispatch was ruled out on the ground as it was not received it was not an official communication. It was not read in the court room, but the following is a copy of it:

"Secretary of the Navy, Washington:

"Spanish squadron came out of Santiago harbor this morning, July 3, at 9:30, and were all captured or destroyed in a running fight to the westward of about three and one-half hours. Very few casualties in our fleet; Ellis, chief yeoman, killed, and one man [illegible] the Brooklyn. Supposed [illegible] ships not yet in. [illegible] now superintending transfer of prisoners from the Cristobal Colon, which surrendered to the Brooklyn and Oregon at 1:15 p. m. About 1,000 prisoners in all, including Spanish admiral. Victory complete; details later.

(Signed) "SCHLEY."

Capt. Cook was recalled during the day and in response to a question by Capt. Lemly made an additional statement concerning the retrograde movement of the flying squadron May 26 to May 28. He also said in answer to a question by the court, that Commodore Schley during the battle of July 3 was "cool, brave and enthusiastic. I can not imagine any conduct in battle more admirable."

Washington, Oct. 17.—The officers of Adm. Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, occupied the attention of the court of inquiry for the entire day Wednesday. The proceedings began with the recall of Capt. Cook and Lieut. Commander Sears, both of whom made material additions to their former testimony, and they were followed in succession by Commander N. E. Mason, who was the executive officer of the Brooklyn; Lieut. E. McCauley, who was signal officer and Lieut. Charles Webster, who had charge of the forward gun deck battery of the Brooklyn during the battle off Santiago, and was a watch officer on board that ship.

Capt. Cook's new testimony related to the uncoupling of the Brooklyn's engine and to the voyage of the flying squadron from Cienfuegos to Santiago, explaining in some detail the cause of the slow passage made on that occasion.

Mr. Hanna directed attention to Cook's statement that the Brooklyn's engines were uncoupled July 3 by order of Sampson.

"Do you mean to say that Sampson ordered the engines uncoupled?"

"That was my statement."

"Was it a written order?"

"I think the order was contained in the bulletin. It fixed the amount of steam to be carried, and the rate of speed. I have only a general impression that it set forth that the forward engines should be uncoupled. We could not move the four engines with the amount of steam we were directed to carry. It may have been from that I got the impression that the forward engines should be uncoupled. The engines were uncoupled on all the ships."

Commander Sears spoke again of the conversation reported as having taken place between himself and officers of the Massachusetts in the wardroom of that vessel on May 31, in which he was alleged to have said that it had been difficult to get Commodore Schley up to the point of undertaking the bombardment of the Colon, and he again denied that he had said anything reflecting upon his superior officer.

Commander Mason and Lieuts. McCauley and Webster all gave accounts of the engagement of July 3. Mr. McCauley recited in detail the signals made in connection with that historical event at the instance of Commodore Schley. When asked if Commodore Schley had said anything during the battle for the encouragement of the men, this witness replied that he several times had said, "Give 'em hell, bullies." All these witnesses testified that the conduct of the commodore when under fire was cool and courageous.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The presentation of Adm. Schley's side of the controversy was continued before the Schley court of inquiry Thursday, eight witnesses being examined. Of these five were ensigns and the eight had served on board the Brooklyn with Adm. (then Commodore) Schley.

The first of the day's witnesses was Lieut. Charles Webster, who had begun his testimony Wednesday. He was followed by Lieut. Commander T. D. Griffin, who had charge of the powder division on the Brooklyn during the fight off Santiago.

Referring to the battle of July 3, Griffin said that he had been in charge of the powder division, and that it was his duty to look after the lower decks. Consequently, he had not seen a great deal of the fight. He said that he had seen the Viscaya going ashore, and that, looking aft of the Brooklyn's beam along the coast he had seen two other Spanish ships on fire, with the Colon some distance ahead on the starboard side and firing occasionally. Then he went into the forecastle where Commodore Schley, Capt. Cook and Commander Mason were standing, remaining there until the Colon surrendered. The Oregon was, he said, then following very close to the Brooklyn. Commander Griffin said that when the Colon gave up the conflict the Oregon was close on the Brooklyn's starboard quarter, and that the Texas and Viscaya were within sight astern.

"Can you speak of the conduct, bearing and manner of Commodore Schley during the engagement in which you saw him?"

"He impressed me as being remarkably cool, considering what had just occurred. He was perfectly natural in manner and bearing."

The witness, in describing the battle of July 3, said he had charge of the port battery on main deck forward, and when the Spanish vessels first came out of the harbor he could not train his guns on them because of the distance. Later he opened fire and he observed that the leading Spanish ship led steady on the Brooklyn's port bow for some time and then turned to the westward. His range then was 1,400 yards, and the lowest range at which he fired during the day was 1,100 yards.

There has been some inquiry as to Adm. Schley's standing in the navy since he was placed on the retired list because of age, but it appears that all questions on this point has been settled by the department having assigned the admiral to "active duty" at the court of inquiry while it is in progress. This action was taken to prevent any question as to the effect the admiral's retirement would have on the action of the court.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Just before the Schley court of inquiry adjourned Friday Attorney Rayner, counsel for Adm. Schley, informed the court that he hoped to be able to conclude the presentation of testimony for the applicant by the close of next week. He added that he thus far had not had an opportunity to consult with witnesses who are still to be heard. He, therefore, asked that an adjournment be taken from Friday until Monday. Speaking for the court, Adm. Dewey said he was most happy to grant the request. Accordingly, the court adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday.

The list of witnesses examined included eight names, but the interrogation of the last of the witnesses called had not been concluded when the day came to a close. This last witness was Lieut. B. W. Wells, jr., who served during the war with Spain as Adm. Schley's flag lieutenant, or private secretary. The other seven persons heard during the day were in the order in which they were called. Lieut. Commander Reginald F. Nicholson, who was navigator of the Oregon; Medical Director Charles M. De Valin, a surgeon; Capt. J. L. Hannium, retired; engineer; Lieut. Thomas F. Carter, Ensign W. P. Cronan, Carpenter J. H. Warford, all of whom served on the Brooklyn, and J. L. Hanley, who was chief machinist on board the Texas.

Lieut. Commander Nicholson told the story of the battle of July 3 as he saw it from the deck of the Oregon. He said the movements of the Oregon had not been controlled by signals from the Brooklyn, and he expressed the opinion that the Oregon was nearer the Colon than the Brooklyn was. Mr. Hanley said that the port engines of the Texas had not been stopped during the battle of July 3.

From the line of the examination relating to the fight of July 3 already pursued it is evident that it is the intention of Mr. Rayner to have Lieut. Wells give a complete history of Adm. Schley's actions during the Spanish war. When the court adjourned he had reached the period of the batle of July 3, having gone quite minutely into other incidents of the campaign up to that time, including the receipts of dispatches from Adm. Sampson.

Dual Life Revealed By a Suicide in a Chicago Hotel—One Dead the Other Lives.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—While grieving over the dual life she was leading with Dr. Orville Burnette, a prominent Chicago dentist, Mrs. Charlotte Nichol, wife of W. L. Nichol, jr., commercial agent of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, committed suicide Sunday in the Marlborough hotel. Burnette also tried to end his life at the same time, but was unsuccessful.

The two were found in their rooms, both stretched across the bed, the woman dead and Burnette with his neck pierced with a hatpin, a bottle of morphine clutched in his hand, and the gas turned on from every one of the six jets in their suite. Dr. Burnette is still alive and has been arrested. In one of the rooms was found a note written by the woman, which told of her reason for the act. She said:

"To Whom It May Concern: I did it because I loved him better than anything on earth, and he loved me and we could not be separated. Good-bye.—Charlotte."

A policeman, who was sent to the Nichol home at 6318 Minerva avenue Sunday night to notify Mr. Nichol of the tragedy, found no one there but the two little children of the dead woman, one a boy of 8 and the other a little girl of 4 years. They told the policeman that their father was out looking for their mother, who had been missing all Saturday night and Sunday.

HAY LANDS BURNING.

Dangerous Flames in the Vicinity of La Crosse, Wis.—Much Damage Was Wrought.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 21.—Fire was discovered Sunday in the hay lands which surrounded the city. The flames are now burning everything before them, and the firemen are powerless, owing to the fire being outside the city limits and beyond water service.

It is believed the fire was started by tramps. Upon these lands are stacked thousands of tons of hay, all directly in the path of the flames. Although the loss can not be estimated at present, it is thought it will be enormous.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—All the churches representing the St. Louis Evangelical alliance, Archbishop Kain, of this Catholic diocese, and practically all of the religious societies and interests of the city have presented a petition to the World's fair management asking for the erection in the World's fair grounds of a suitable building for the holding of religious meetings, conventions, etc., and for the display of such exhibits as the various bodies may desire to make.

FILIPINOS ARE ACTIVE.

Another Slaughter of American Soldiers By Insurgents Has Been Averted—Several Persons Connected With Plot Arrested.

Manila, Oct. 21.—Owing to the vigilance of Lieut. Thomas M. Baines, jr., of the 9th United States infantry, another slaughter of American troops by insurgents has been averted. It seems that Lieut. Baines discovered a prisoner re-entering a cell at Carbiga, Island of Samar, where several were confined, through a hole that had been let in the wall. An investigation showed a plan to fill the jail with bolomen and to call the guard, which would be necessary to get the door open, and then to attack the garrison. It also developed that the instigators were a priest and the presidente, both of whom have been arrested, together with several other prominent persons.

Other attempts have been discovered, but fortunately frustrated, at Pambujan and other points in Samar. Several persons have been arrested in connection with these.

Reinforcements are being rushed to Samar, and 30 marines, under Lieut. Col. Manuel C. Goodrell, have gone on board the United States cruiser New York, and two battalions of the 12th infantry will start immediately for the same destination.

United States officers from the provinces that were supposed to be pacified have recently arrived in Manila, and they say that the news of American disasters spread like wildfire among the natives, who scarcely attempt to conceal their delight.

The Manila constabulary discovered a large quantity of steel wagon springs, which were being shipped to various districts. Investigation showed that these were to be used in manufacturing bolos.

The troops in Samar anticipate hard fighting. Brig. Gen. Jacob H. Smith, who is in command, has visited most of the ports and instructed the commandera that the insurrection must be hammered out and Gen. Lukban, the insurgent leader, captured. Already the movement of troops has begun.

Gen. Lacuna, who surrendered last May, has complained to Gen. Chaffee that the terms upon which he and his force surrendered have not been respected by the Americans. He exhibits a document signed by himself and Gen. Frederick Funston, in which he and his force are granted immunity in respect of all acts committed contrary to the laws of war.

Since this document was executed several of Lacuna's officers and men have been tried, condemned and sentenced to death for killing American prisoners. Gen. Funston says that when it was signed he gave Lacuna orally to understand that the killing of American prisoners was excepted. Lacuna admits that something was said on the subject, but says no thorough understanding was reached, and he considers the written agreement binding.

IN THE NATIONAL CEMETARY.

Mrs. C. K. Davis Had Body of Late Senator Disinterred Preparatory to Taking It to Washington.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 21.—Mrs. C. K. Davis left Sunday night for Washington, where she will hereafter make her home. Previous to her departure she had the body of her late husband disinterred and will take it to Washington for burial in the National cemetery. The fact that the distinguished senator's body was to be removed from the state which had honored him in life was not known until Sunday, and has caused considerable comment. It had been proposed to erect a mausoleum in one of the city parks, where the body might be entombed, and a measure looking to this end was considered by the last state legislature. However no action was taken, and it is said that Mrs. Davis, becoming displeased with the delay in the matter, determined to remove the remains to Washington for final interment.

STARTLING FACTS ABOUT SUGAR.

The Slugger.

At considerable length the superintendent of the Sunday school had set forth the culpability of the sluggard, who, he said, needed only the spur of a worthy motive to become a useful member of society. "Now, then, boys," he asked, in a more animated manner, "what is the matter with the sluggard?" "He's all right," yelled the boys, in chorus.—Montreal Star.

"No, sir," exclaimed the loud voiced drummer in the smoker, "I'm proud to say that no house in the country has more men pushing its line of goods than ours." "What do you sell?" asked a curious one. "Baby carriages."—Syracuse Herald.

GOLDEN'S TESTIMONY.

Admitted That He Entered Into an Agreement to Kill Goebel.

Owing to the Ill Health of Caleb Powers the Defense Asked That the Night Sessions Be Discontinued.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 15.—Seventy-five men from Bourbon county arrived Monday morning to be examined for jury duty in the trial of Caleb Powers for alleged complicity in the assassination of Gov. Goebel.

The following is the jury as completed: H. F. Gayle, farmer; B. S. Calvert, merchant; George Mulberry, farmer; Joseph Gardner, farmer; Eugene Marshall, farmer; J. D. Vallandingham, farmer. (All the above live in Scott county.) N. F. Clark, merchant policeman; Robert Link, grocery clerk; Henry Isgrig, merchant; J. F. Hopkins, farmer; C. L. Mussinum, wholesale tobacco dealer; S. W. Bricrly, farmer; the latter six are from Bourbon county. All are democrats.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 16.—Every man who entered the court room Tuesday to attend the trial of Caleb Powers for complicity in the assassination of Goebel was searched for deadly weapons. The order was made by Judge Cantrill, and every man who entered, including the judge and attorneys, had to submit to the search.

Col. Bennett H. Young, who was Goebel's counsel, took the stand. Col. Young's statement that except on the day of the killing, when there was no crowd, that there had always been a jostling, menacing crowd around Goebel, was objected to by the state, but overruled. Col. Young then told of seeing the window open in the office of the secretary of state.

Col. Young declared that the crowds at Frankfort were boisterous, rude and insulting. The defense objected, and the word insulting was ruled out. Col. Young told of seeing guns in the capitol building. He was cross-examined by Judge Sims, who tried to discover why Col. Young did not testify in the previous trials of these cases. The witness said he only knew que material fact, that the window in the secretary of state's office was open on the day Goebel was shot, and he did not think his testimony necessary.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 17.—Wednesday morning the first witness was Frank Heendy, who described the scene a moment after the shooting of Goebel as he described it before.

Miss Ella Smith, of Barboursville, who was John L. Powers' sweetheart, again told her story of John Powers telling her after the Colson tragedy that there would be more bloodshed if Goebel took his seat, and said he would be willing to kill Goebel himself.

Ike Hopkins, of Bell county, was called. He was a new witness, and was one of a company of men who went to Frankfort. He said there were 50 to 75 men in his company. He said he met Powers, who told him on the morning of the assassination that Goebel would be killed before night.

He also said Youtsey told him in the presence of Tallow Creek Combs that Goebel would be killed within two days, and Combs would do it.

"I am going to give Combs $100, and 25 other men will do the same," Youtsey is alleged to have said.

On cross-examination Hopkins said he was in Covington as a witness in the United States court, and met Arthur Goebel there, and told him his testimony as above. Owens asked if he had been arrested. He answered: "For stealing a watermelon."

"Anything else?" asked Owens.

"Once for murder, once for malicious shooting and once for swindling the government," answered the witness.

Hopkins admitted that he has 11 times faced a jury on murder charges, three victims being laid to his credit. He also bears the scars of knife and bullet in many other little troubles, as he called them, when talking to Tom Campbell.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 18.—Mrs. W. B. Anderson, telegraph operator at Barboursville, was on the stand in the Powers case when court adjourned Wednesday night, and she resumed her testimony Thursday morning. Mrs. Anderson identified telegrams sent and received by Calch and John Powers when they were organizing the mountain militia.

Wednesday night Lewis Clark, a Negro, who was in jail at Frankfort at the same time as Powers and Youtsey, told of a quarrel between the two. He claimed Youtsey said Powers gave him a key to the secretary of state's private office. Powers is alleged to have said: "You'd better not say it," and Youtsey's reply was given as: "Don't you fool with me or I'll tell enough to break your neck, if it breaks mine, too."

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 19.—The defense in the Powers case made a motion for the discontinuance of the night sessions of the court. An affidavit of Powers was offered, in which he declares that his ill health makes it practically impossible to continue the arduous trial of the case, and night sessions also make it impossible to confer with his attorneys, as all the time is taken up.

Wharton Golden was then called to the stand to continue the cross-examination. Nothing material was learned other than what he has told at former trials.

One question he was asked was: "Did you enter an agreement to kill Senator Goebel?"

"Yes, I suppose I did," was the answer.

Golden left the stand and Miss Sadie Sniffer was called and told about conversations with Powers at Barboursville before the mountain men left for Frankfort.

Miss Sniffer was asked about some letters she had received from Powers and which disappeared. She says Perry Llewellyn, brother-in-law of Powers, knew of letters and asked her to show them. She refused, but told him where they were. Later they were gone, and she said he was the only one who knew where they were. They had disappeared since the last trial of Powers.

On cross-examination Judge Sims asked questions regarding Golden's testimony at former trials to show discrepancies in his stories. He denied that he told Rev. John Stamper, his brother-in-law, and also that he had contracted with Attorney Campbell to receive $2,500 for each conviction.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 21.—The commonwealth closed its testimony in the Powers case early Saturday morning with the testimony of John W. Ray, law clerk to Judge White, of the court of appeals, at Frankfort. He said about an hour before Goebel was shot Leander Guffy told him that Goebel would never be governor.

"Why?" asked Ray.

"Because he will be killed before the joint assembly meets," said Guffy.

At 11 o'clock Powers took the stand in his own behalf and pursued the same method as on the last trial, admitting all meetings and conversations with Golden, Colton and others, except such parts of the conversations as tended to implicate him in the conspiracy. In one breath he stated that he had Golden and others bring men to Frankfort to fight the democrats off in case they attempted to take the office by force, and in the next breath said that the night Sheriff Burton talked about using cartridges to settle the contest that he (Powers) told them he would resign and go home if any fights were to be indulged in or talked about. He denied the important part of Banker John Black's testimony as to Powers designating the mountain army as a "mob," intended to intimidate the legislature, but admitted every other detail of his talk with Black.

Powers denied that he and his brother, John L. Powers, had ever given Henry Youtsey a key to the secretary of state's office. Youtsey asked him for a key, but he told him he did not want him in the office, and that he would not give him a key. When he found Youtsey in his office, pointing a gun out the front window, he told him he must get out, and that there must be no shooting from that office. He later told Mackenzie Todd, Taylor's private secretary, that Youtsey acted like a crazy man, and asked Todd to talk with Youtsey and get him to stay out of his (Powers') office.

When he was arrested in extradition, he said, he was cursed, struck and otherwise mistreated. He said he advised Wharton Golden to surrender when it was said a warrant was out for his arrest. Powers told him if he was innocent he should give up. Golden at that time told him he knew nothing about the killing, but had been told by representatives of the commonwealth that "they wanted the big fishes, and could get them through the little ones."

MIXED AMERICAN CLAIMS.

The Sum of $8,000 Became Due to the United States From Venezuela This Month.

Willemstadt, Island of Curacao, Oct. 21, via Haytien Cable.—The sum of $8,000 became due this month to the United States from Venezuela on account of mixed American claims, and it has not been paid. The claims arose out of damages sustained during the revolution of 1892. They were adjudicated between Venezuela and the United States, and the former agreed to pay $32,000 per year in quarterly payments with annual interest on the sinking fund, the payments to be divided pro rata among the American claimants.

This is the first instance where Venezuela has defaulted on a quarterly payment.

BLOODY ENGAGEMENT

A Fight With Filipinos in Which Over One Hundred Were Killed.

War Department Makes Public a Report By Gen. Hughes as to the Conditions on the Island of Samar.

Manila, Oct. 19.—The 9th infantry has avenged the massacre of nearly half a hundred of their comrades at Balangiga. A detachment of 46 men of the 9th was surrounded by 500 bolomen near Gandara, on the Banguhon river, Island of Samar. For a time it looked as if the slaughter of Balangiga was to be repeated. Ten men had fallen dead and six others were wounded, when a strong detachment of the 9th came on the scene. After a fierce fight the Filipinos were routed, leaving over 100 dead on the field.

The scene of the fight is about 20 miles north of Calbalogan, the capital of the island, where Gen. Smith, who commands the American troops in Samar, has his headquarters. Gen. Smith left for the scene as soon as the news of the fight was received. He took with him two gunboats and a strong force of troops.

Washington, Oct. 19.—As of interest in connection with the report from Samar Adjt. Gen. Corbin Friday made public a report by Gen. Hughes to Gen. Chaffee, dated August 20, on the situation in that island. Gen. Hughes says:

"The progress in Samar is satisfactory in some ways and not in others. The subduing of the fighting propensities of the war faction is reduced to a nullity. The growth of the strength in the estimation of our people is also quite satisfactory.

"In nearly all our posts, where the commander has exerted good judgment, colonies of natives have come in and settled and concluded they would set up their Lares and Penates under our wing. These colonies differ in strength, but in this vicinity, or between the Hibitan and the Gandbra rivers, about 16,000 have come in. In the interior, Blanca Aurora, Tavaran, Matugunan, Oquendo, etc., have their colonies. The correspondence the troops have captured shows that the armed forces are deserting and breaking away from military control of the Vicol leaders.

"The unsatisfactory features are, the slowness of the process of conversion, the difficulty to get the rifles and the slowness and the difficulty in making roads and trails.

"The commands are small, but I hope I have not made a mistake in underestimating the fighting ability of the forces now in the field against us. I would feel quite easy if all officers of the organization were present, but it is fully appreciated that some of the detachments are commanded by officers who have really never been shot over.

"Just at this date, the bulk of the rifles seem to be in the region just west of Catubig river. There are now five detachments in there making it uncomfortable for the people.

"The people of Bohem are gradually coming to the opinion that they made a mistake and are showing symptoms of change of front.

"Our cause is growing stronger with the people of Cebu, and while the outlaws there will have to be roughly dealt with, there is no doubt that we will find much assistance from the natives themselves in doing so.

"In Leyte the latest surrender was that of the Chief Pacheco. The Capilli brothers are still out, and will probably have to be killed, but to do so, it will be necessary to find them, which is difficult. They have not made any aggressive move for months.

"Negros and Panay continue in entire tranquility. It is my intention to leave one battalion of the 6th infantry and the native battalion in Negros; in Panay six companies of the 6th infantry, four troops, 10th cavalry, and two battallons of natives. Two companies of the 6th infantry I expected to bring temporarily, at least, to the west coast of Cebu."

THE BICENTENNIAL.

The Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of Yale University Commenced.

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 21.—Yale university began Sunday the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of Yale college. The bicentennial of the great institution of learning was ushered in with ceremonies essentially religious.

The services were performed in accordance with the devout and reverent traditions of the good old New England days, when the little handful of clergymen gathered together, and with prayful supplications, asked Divine blessing upon the institution which they had conceived and brought forth. The old hymns were sung and powerful sermons were uttered.

The city, proud in its function as a seat of learning, had bedecked itself in Yale's colors and presented a splendid spectacle. Blue draperies were entertwined with new cut evergreen, and this general scheme of color was broken only by the graceful folds of the stars and stripes.

The principal streets had become archways of blue, adorned at intervals with pictures of President Roosevelt, who on Wednesday is to be Yale's guest, and who on that day will become a son of Yale when the university's honorary degree is conferred upon him.

From the simple school of 1701 Yale to-day found herself a great university, developed through the years from a one-building institution down through the "brick row" to a campus, thence to a second campus, and now to a third, and stretching out in her departmental buildings to territory as great again.

With Battle chapel, where the bicentennial was inaugurated, the services were participated in by an assemblage as imposing as the exercises were simple.

The services began at 10:30 a. m. A chant by the choir was followed by the Lord's Prayer. President Hadley read a lesson from the Scriptures, and after the te deum, the vast congregation sang Psalm lxv. Rev. Joseph Hopkins Twichell, of Hartford, the senior fellow of the corporation, preached the sermon.

The closing hymn was, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," written by Rev. Timothy Dwight, D. D., LL. D., president of Yale college from 1795 to 1817. Then was sung the Doxology, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Timothy Dwight, president of the university from 1886 to 1899.

The public cistern 12x10 near the old "Whippe Tobacco House" is ready for the masons and it will be built without delay. Others will follow and a chronic dread of helplessness in case of fire will be dispelled.

The excitement about having sidewalks has subsided to a great extent, and almost everyone is pleased with the neat appearance of the town; and there is a feeling that the council's action was, on the whole, meritorious tho it bungled woefully in the manner it went about doing them.

Miss Edna May, the accomplished daughter of Gen. There is to be an election for council men and city officers in Novembes, and the citizens are taking much interest in it, as they are anxious to elect a town board that will let them know exactly what is dode with the corporation funds. The councils, heretofore elected, having absolutely refused to disclose what disposition had been made of the money that has been collected for many years.

There are no objections made to spending money for city improvements if the people can see that the money has been laid out in accordance with the charter provisions prescribed for all incorporated towns and villages. There is no doubt that many of the charter provisions have been deliberately and with malice aforethought, violated and that hereafter, councilmen will be called to an account for any and all misfeasance or malfeasance in office.

James T. Ford, of Georgetown, on his way home from Warsaw, had several hours of leisure to make some acquaintances in the town. Mr. Ford is an enthusiastic supporter of Judge Cantrill for the U. S. Senate. He found that the Judge had many ardent supporters in this part of the State, altho he has never been among us. His fearless manner in conducting the trial of Powers and the other miscreants charged with the murder of Gov. Gobel is winning him hosts of friends. Threats have no terror for men of his character who will always discharge their duties tho the heavens fall.

On Wednesday the 16th, Thos. Watson, 17, was married by Rev. L. Johnson, to Miss Nettie Hoard, 25, daughter of Geo Hoard, of Beaver. In the Graded School here he stood very high in his class 8th grade, but was rather erratic. His father, Jas. Watson, begged and plead with the boy to wait until he was better prepared for wedded life; offered him horses and ground to do something before taking such an important step. This was about two weeks ago—told him he was too young only wait a little while. All the answer he got was that he would wait until last Wednesday, which he did, and then carried out his intentions. Miss Lermond, his last teacher had a very high opinion of his abilities. Said he was so good at solving difficult problems. It is thought he may have heard of the "Is marriage a failure" and undertook to solve the query.

A Typical South African Store.

O. R. Larsou, of Bay Villa, Sundays River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these, within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by all druggists.

Two of Burlington's prominent colored citizens, Sam Kirtley and Ward Coleman, were, unexpectedly, given positions by the city of Cincinnati, last Saturday. Friday night Kirtley had trouble with his wife, and in the scrap she got a finger broken in attempting to ward off a blow. Kirtley concluded he would better make himself scarce about Burlington for a few days, and went to the livery stable and hired a horse and buggy, with which Coleman was to take him to the river at Constance. Before leaving each put an ugly gun in his pocket. When crossing the river at Constance their mouths got to going, and Kirtley told how he had beaten his wife and probably killed her. When they boarded an electric car for the city, a policeman, to whom they had been pointed out as two bad men from Kentucky, arrested them, and when they were searched the two big guns were discovered. In the police court, Saturday morning they were each fined $100, for carrying a pistol, and not having that much money with them they were sent to the work house for six months.

There is to be an election for council-men and city officers in Novembes, and the citizens are taking much interest in it, as they are anxious to elect a town board that will let them know exactly what is dode with the corporation funds. The councils, heretofore elected, having absolutely refused to disclose what disposition had been made of the money that has been collected for many years.

There are no objections made to spending money for city improvements if the people can see that the money has been laid out in accordance with the charter provisions prescribed for all incorporated towns and villages. Watson, begged and plead with the boy to wait until he was better prepared for wedded life; offered him horses and ground to do something before taking such an important step. This was about two weeks ago—told him he was too young only wait a little while. All the answer he got was that he would wait until last Wednesday, which he did, and then carried out his intentions. Miss Lermond, his last teacher had a very high opinion of his abilities. Said he was so good at solving difficult problems. Saturday was an ideal day for an out doors gathering and about 350 persons attended Henry Terrill's sale, a number coming from over the river. Farming implements sold cheap as did the household goods; corn sold for 60c in the crib; suckling mules, $50 per head; horses, one brought $106, one $70; cattle, averaged $35 per head; hogs about 6½c per pound. The crowd was fed on the best of fresh pork and beef with plenty of hot coffee to wash it down—no one went away hungry.

A Typical South African Store.

O. R. Larson, of Bay Villa, Sundays River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of my store the population is perhaps sixty. Of these, within the past twelve months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by all druggists.

L. H. VOSHELL, Co. Supt.

Two of Burlington's prominent colored citizens, Sam Kirtley and Ward Coleman, were unexpectedly given positions by the city of Cincinnati, last Saturday. Friday night Kirtley had trouble with his wife, and in the scrap she got a finger broken in attempting to ward off a blow. Kirtley concluded he would better make himself scarce about Burlington for a few days, and went to the livery stable and hired a horse and buggy, with which Coleman was to take him to the river at Constance. Before leaving each put an ugly gun in his pocket. When crossing the river at Constance their mouths got to going, and Kirtley told how he had beaten his wife and probably killed her. When they boarded an electric car for the city, a policeman, to whom they had been pointed out as two bad men from Kentucky, arrested them, and when they were searched the two big guns were discovered. In the police court, Saturday morning they were each fined $100, for carrying a pistol, and not having that much money with them they were sent to the work house for six months.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. N. Grant's, Bellevue.

A WORD OF MIGHT.

Great Meaning Contained in Text of Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

Is Composed of But Four Letters But Is the Queen of Words—Solace of Christian Faith—Two Things to Believe.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls all people to gladness and opens all the doors of expectancy; texts, Genesis vi., 18, "Come;" Revelations xxii., 17, "Come."

Imperial, tender and all persuasive is the word "Come." Six hundred and seventy-eight times it is found in the Scriptures. It stands at the front gate of the Bible as in my first text, inviting antediluvians into Noah's ark, and it stands at the other gate of the Bible as in my second text, inviting the postdiluvians of all later ages into the ark of a Saviour's mercy. "Come" is only a word of four letters, but it is the queen of words, and nearly the entire nation of English vocabulary bows to its scepter. It is an ocean into which empties 10,000 rivers of meaning. Other words drive, but this beckons. All moods of feeling hath that word "Come." Sometimes it weeps and sometimes it laughs. Sometimes it prays, sometimes it tempts, and sometimes it destroys. It sounds from the door of the church and from the sensglios of sin, from the gates of Heaven and the gates of hell. It is confluent and accrescent of all power. It is the heiress of most of the past and the almoner of most of the future. "Come!" You may pronounce it so that all the heavens will be heard in its endeneos or pronounce it so that all the woes of time and eternity shall reverberate in its one syllable. It is on the lip of saint and profligate. It is the mightiest of all soliciltants either for good or bad.

To-day I weigh anchor and haul in the planks and set sail on that great word, although I am sure I will not be able to reach the farther shore. I will let down the fathoming line into this sea and try to measure its depths, and, though I tie together all the cables and cordage I have on board, I will not be able to touch bottom. All the power of the Christian religion is in that word, "Come." The dietatorial and commendatory in religion are of no avail. The imperative mood is not the appropriate mood when we would have people savingly impressed. They may be coaxed, but they cannot be driven. Our hearts are like our homes; at a friendly knock the door will be opened, but an attempt to force open our doors would land the assailant in prison. Our theological seminaries, which keep young men three years in their curriculum before launching them into the ministry, will do well if in so short a time they can teach the candidates for the holy office how to say with right emphasis and intonation and power that one word, "Come!" That man who has such efficiency in Christian work and that woman who has such power to persuade people to quit the wrong and begin the right went through a series of losses, bereavements, persecutions and the trials of 20 or 30 years before they could make it a triumph of grace every time they uttered the word "Come."

You must remember that in many cases our "Come" has a mightier "Come" to conquer before it has any effect at all. Just give me the accurate census, the statistics of how many are down in fraud, in drunkenness, in gambling, in impurity or in vice of any sort, and I will give you the accurate census or statistics of how many have been slain by the word "Come." "Come and click wine glasses with me at this ivory bar." "Come and see what we can win at this gaming table." "Come enter with me this doubtful speculation!" "Come with me and read those infidel tracts on Christianity." "Come with me to a place of bad amusement." "Come with me in a gay bout through the underground life of the city." If in this city there are 20,000 who are down in moral character, then 20,000 fell under the power of the word "Come." I was reading of a wife whose husband had been overthrown by strong drink, and she went to the saloon where he was ruined, and she said: "Give me back my husband." And the bartender, pointing to a maudlin and battered man drowsing in the corner of the room, said: "There he is. Jim, wake up; here's your wife come for you." And the woman said: "Do you call that my husband? What have you been doing with him? Is that the manly brow, is that the clear eye, is that the noble heart, that I married? What vile drug have you given him that has turned him into a fiend? Take your tiger claws off of him. Uncoil those serpent folds of evil habit that are crushing him. Give me back my husband, the one with whom I stood at the altar ten years ago. Give him back to me." Victim was he, as many millions of others have been, of the word "Come!"

Now we want all the world over to harness this word for good as others have harnessed it for evil, and it will draw the five continents and the seas between them—yea, it will draw the whole earth back to God from whom it has wandered. It is that woolng and persuasive word that will lead men to give up their sins. Was skepticism ever brought into love of the truth by an ebullition of hot words against infidelity? Was ever the blasphemer stopped in his oaths by denunciation of blasphemy? Was ever the drunkard weaned from his cups by the temperance lecturer's mimicry of staggering step and hiccough? No. It was: "Come with me to church to-day and hear our singing;" "Come and let me introduce you to a Christian man whom you will be sure to admire;" "Come with me into associations that are cheerful and good and inspiring;" "Come with me into joy such as you never before experienced."

With that word which has done so much for others I approach you today. Are you right with God? "No," you say, "I think not; I am sometimes alarmed when I think of Him; I fear I will not be ready to meet Him in the last day; my heart is not right with God." Come, then, and have it made right. Through the Christ who died to save you, come! What is the use in waiting? The longer you wait the farther off you are and the deeper you are down. Strike out for Heaven! You remember that a few years ago a steamer called the Princess Alice, with a crowd of excursionists aboard, sank in the Thames, and there was a awful sacrifice of life. A boatman from the shore put out for the rescue, and he had a big boat, and he got it so full it would not hold another person, and as he laid hold of the oars to pull for the shore, leaving hundreds helpless and drowning, he cried out: "Oh, that I had a bigger boat!" Thank God that I am not thus limited and that I can promise room for all in this Gospel boat. Get in; get in! And yet there is room. Room in the heart of a pardoning God. Room in Heaven.

I also apply the word of my text to those who would like practical comfort. If any ever escape the struggle of life, I have not found them. They are not certainly among the prosperous classes. In most cases it was a struggle all the way up till they reached the prosperity, and since they have reached these heights there have been perplexities, anxieties and crises which were almost enough to shatter the nerves and turn the brain. It would be hard to tell which hnve the biggest fight in this world, the prosperities or the adversities, the conspicuities or the obscurities. Just as soon as you have enough success to attract the attention of others the envies and jealousies are let loose from their kennel. The greatest crime that you can commit in the estimation of others is to get on better than they do. They think your addition is their subtraction. Five hundred persons start for a goal of success; one reaches it, and the other four hundred and ninety-nine are mad. It would take volumes to hold the story of their wrongs, outrages and defamations that have come upon you as a result of your success. The warm sun of prosperity brings into life a swamp full of annoying insects. On the other hand, the unfortunate classes have their struggles for maintenance. To achieve a livelihood by one who had nothing to start with, and after awhile for a family as well, and carry this on until children are reared and educated and fairly started in the world, and to do this amid all the rivalries of business and the uncertainty of crops and the fickleness of tariff legislation, with an ocensional labor strike and here and there a panic thrown in, is a mighty thing to do, and there are hundreds and thousands of such heroes and heroines who live unsung and die unhonored.

What we all need, whether up or down in life or half way between, is the infinite solace of the Christian religion. And so we employ the word "Come!" It will take all eternity to find out the number of business men who have been strengthened by the promises of God, and the people who have been fed by the ravens when other resources gave out, and the men and women who, going into this battle armed only with the needle or saw or ax or yardstick or pen or type or shovel or shoe last, have gained a victory that made the heavens resound. With all the resources of God promised for every exigency, no one need be left in the lurch.

But the word "Come" applied to those who need solace will amount to nothing unless it be uttered by some one who has experienced that solace. That spreads the responsibility of giving this Gospel call among a great many. Those who have lost property and have been consoled by religion in that trial are the ones to invite those who have failed in business. Those who have lost their health and been consoled by religion are the ones to invite those who are in poor health. Those who have had bereavements and been consoled in those bereavements are the ones to sympathize with those who have lost father or mother or companlon or child or friend. What multitudes of us are alive to-day and in good health and buoyant in this journey of life who would have been broken down or dead long ago but for the sustaining and cheering help of our holy religion! So we say, "Come!" The well is not dry. The buckets are not empty. The supply is not exhausted. There is just as much mercy and condolence and soothing power in God as before the first grave was dug, or the first tear started, or the first heart broken, or the first accident happened, or the first fortune vanished. To use of us who have felt the consolatory power of religion have a right to speak out of our own experiences and say: "Come!"

What dismal work of condolence the world makes when it attempts to condole! The plaster they spread does not stick. The broken bones under their bandage do not knit. A farmer was lost in a snowstorm on a prairie of the far west. Night was coming on, and after he was almost frantic from not knowing which way to go his sleigh struck the rut of another sleigh, and he said: "I will follow this rut, and it will take me out to safety." He hastened on until he heard the bells of the preceding horses; but, coming up, he found that that man was also lost, and, as is the tendency of those who are confused in the forest or on the moors, they were both moving in a circle, and the runner of the one lost sleigh was following the runner of the other lost sleigh round and round. At last it occurred to them to look at the north star, which was peering through the night, and by the direction of that star they got home again. Those who follow the advice of this world in time of perplexity are in a fearful round, for it is one bewildered soul following another bewildered soul, and only those who have in such time got their eye on the morning star of our Christian faith can find their way out or be strong enough to lead others with an all-persuasive invitation.

"But," says some one, "you Christian people keep telling us to 'come,' yet you do not tell us how to come." That charge shall not be true on this occasion. Come believing! Come repenting! Come praying! After all that God has been doing for six thousand years, sometimes through patriarchs and sometimes through prophets and at last through the culmination of all the tragedies on Golgotha, can anyone think that God will not welcome your coming? Will a father at vast outlay construct a mansion for his son and lay out parks white with statues and green with foliage and all a-sparkle with fountains and then not allow his son to live in the house or walk in the parks? Has God built this house of Gospel mercy and will He then refuse entrance to His children? Will a government at great expense build life saving stations all along the coast and boats that can hover unhurt like a petrel over the wildest surge and then, when the lifeboat has reached the wreck of a ship in the offing, not allow the drowning to seize the life line or take the boat for the shore in safety? Shall God provide at the cost of His only Son's assassination escape for a sinking world and then turn a deaf ear to the cry that comes up from the breakers?

"But," you say, "there are so many things I have to believe and so many things in the shape of a creed that I have to adopt that I am kept back." No, no! You need believe but two things—namely, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners and that you are one of them. "But," you say, "I do believe both of those things." Do you really believe them with all your heart? "Yes." Why, then, you have passed from death into life. Why, then, you are a son or a daughter of the Lord Almighty. Why, then, you are an heir or an heiress of an inheritance that will declare dividends from now until long after the stars are dead. Hallelujah! Prince of God, why do you not come and take your coronet? Princess of the Lord Almighty, why do you not mount your throne? Pass up into the light. Your boat is anchored, why do you not get ashore? Just plant your feet down here, and you will feel under them the Rock of Ages. I challenge the universe for one instance in which a man in the right spirit appealed for the salvation of the Gospel and did not get it. Man alive, are you going to let all the years of your life go away with you without your having this great peace, this glorious hope, this bright expectancy? Are you going to let the pearl of great price lie in the dust at your feet because you are too indolent or too proud to stoop down and pick it up? Will you wear the chain of evil habit when near by you is the hammer that could with one stroke snap the shackle? Will you stay in the prison of sin when here is a Gospel key that could unlock your incarceration? No, no!

As the one word "Come" has sometimes brought many souls to Christ, I will try the experiment of piling up into a mountain and then send down in an avalanche of power many of these Gospel "Comes." "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." "Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Come, for all things are now ready." "Come with us, and we will do you good." "Come and see." "The Spirit and the bride say 'Come,' and let him that heareth say 'Come,' and let him that is athirst come." The stroke of one bell in a tower may be sweet, but a score of bells well tuned and rightly lifted and skillfully swung in one great chime fill the heavens with music almost celestial. And no one who has heard the mighty chimes in the towers of Amsterdam or Ghent or Copenhagen can forget them. Now, it seems to me that in this Sabbath hour all Heaven is chiming, and the voices of departed friends and kindred ring down the sky, saying: "Come!" The angels who never fell, bending from sapphire thrones, are chanting: "Come!" Yea, all the towers of Heaven, tower of martyrs, tower of prophets, tower of apostles, tower of evangelists, tower of the temple of the Lord God and the Lamb, are chiming: "Come! Come!" Pardon for all and peace for all and Heaven for all who will come.

When Russia was in one of her great wars the suffering of the soldiers had been long and bitter, and they were waiting for the end of the strife. One day a messenger in great excitement ran among the tents of the army, shouting: "Peace! Peace!" The sentinel on guard asked: "Who says peace?" And the sick man turned on his hospital mattress and asked: "Who says peace?" and all up and down the encampment of the Russians went the question: "Who says peace?" Then the messenger responded: "The czar says peace." That was enough. That meant going home. That meant the war was over. No more wounds and no more long marches. So to-day, as one of the Lord's messengers, I move through these great encampments of souls and cry: "Peace between earth and Heaven! Peace between God and man! Peace between your repenting soul and a pardoning Lord!" If you ask me: "Who says peace?" I answer: "Christ our King declares it." "My peace I give unto you!" "Peace of God that passeth all understanding!" "Everlasting peace!"

GIVEN TITLE BY SULTAN.

Alexander R. Webb, of New York, Made an Honorary Consul General of Ottoman Empire.

A copy of the official paper of Constantinople, which has just been received at New York, announces that the sultan of Turkey has appointed Alexander R. Webb honorary consul general of the Ottoman empire at New York. It is a permanent appointment. The sultan also has honored Mr. Webb with a decoration. Besides the Medjidie decoration, as it is called, he has given him what is known as the medal of merit. In Turkey this is considered a great honor.

These decorations carry with them the title of bey, and hereafter, instead of being Webb Effendi, he will be known as Webb Bey.

Mr. Webb has been a resident of New York city and of Rutherford, N. J., for the last ten years or more. He is now traveling in Europe, but will return to New York the latter part of October. He was consul for the United States at Manila during the first Cleveland administration, and while in the Philippines embraced the religion of Mohammed.

Mr. Webb was born in Hudson, N. Y., and is about 53 years old. He was for many years a reporter on a St. Louis newspaper.

BROUGHT IN A LIVE BEAR.

Wyoming Man Lassoed the Great Shaggy Beast and Then Led It to the Ranch.

John W. Chapman, who recently sold his ranch on Pat O'Hara creek, one of the finest properties in the Big Horn basin, to John P. Allison, a wealthy banker of Des Moines, is known as one of the most expert bear hunters in the section about Cody, Wyo. During a recent visit of Allison to the Chapman ranch the banker asked Chapman to bring in a bear. Thinking the Iowan meant a live bear, Chapman set out to do or die. One evening he caught sight of a large black bear on a ledge of rocks. Stealing around behind bruin, Chapmnn cast his lariat and succeeded in roping the bear securely around the neck. Mounting his horse, Chapman set out for the ranch at break-neck speed, the bear ambling along behind, too badly frightened to resist or put up a fight. When the ranch was reached the bear was too exhausted to fight, and a pack of stag hounds quickly dispatched him.

knew one day how I would feel the next. I was nervous and had no appetite, neither could I sleep soundly nights. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, used in conjunction with your Sanative Wash, did more for me than all the medicines and the skill of the doctors. For eight months I have enjoyed perfect health. I verily believe that most of the doctors are guessing and experimenting when they try to cure a woman with an assortment of complications, such as mine; but you do not guess. How I wish all suffering women could only know of your remedy; there would be less suffering I know."—LAURA HOWARD, 113 Newberry Ave., Chicago, Ill.

TIME TO REVISE THE TARIFF.

The Present Tariff Is Entirely Failing to Protect American Labor.

It has been the constant claim of the protectionists that under the prohibition tariff in the United States the manufacturers were enabled to pay nearly double the wages that are paid in free trade England. Before the McKinley and Dingley tariff had fostered the organization of trusts this was in a measure true, but gradually the wages in both countries have been approaching equality, and now it appears that in the tube industry, which is controlled in this country by the steel trust, the manufacturers of England are paying higher wages than the trust here does.

The National Labor Tribune, which is the organ of the Amalgamated association, says: Since it became known that many of the oldest workers at the National tube works would not be taken back because of the part they played in the strike, representatives of foreign iron mills have come to McKeesport and are enlisting men to go to English mills. An agent for the Loyd & Loyd iron and steel works of London, England, arrived at McKeesport Tuesday, and has arranged with a number of tube workers to cross the ocean. A McKeesport agent for the Russell iron works in England is also securing men to go to England to work. Harry Hodge, John Christy and William Peterson, welders at the tube works for many years, have signed contracts for five years with the Loyd company at higher wages than they received in this country, with free transportation for themselves and families. It is said about 15 McKeesport tube workers have similar contracts.

If this exodus of our most skilled workmen is to take place under the domination of the trusts, it will be seen that the present tariff is entirely failing in protection to American labor when they are willing to expatriate themselves to obtain employment.

The two reasons for which the American people have been willing to be bled under the protective tariff are now removed. The infant industries have now become giants and amply able to take care of themselves. The pauper labor of Europe is no longer a competitor against our workmen and in at least one industry the pauper is transfered to this side of the ocean, so the time has evidently arrived for revising the tariff on the anti-trust basis, which was demanded by the democratic platform of 1900.

A FALSE REPORT NAILED.

Willingness of Republican Journals to Misrepresent Democratic Statements.

Senator Vest has always been noted as a level-headed democrat, and when the daily newspapers reported that he had repudiated the Kansas City platform those who knew him at once thought there was some mistake. The report was soon found to be an entire perversion of his real sentiments. What Senator Vest really said after declaring for a graduated income tax and against trusts and a colonial policy was: "As to free coinage of silver I have always been an earnest bimetallist and have not changed my opinions in the slightest. I do not believe there is enough gold or silver in the world for the just and fair transaction of business, and I look upon the single standard of either gold or silver as doubling the power of oppression by the rich at the expense of the middle or poorer classes. I do not think the question of free coinage of silver is dead, but the abnormal and unexpected production of gold, and especially improvements in the processes of extracting gold from the earth, have given us more money in this country than anyone could have anticipated. We have a larger per capita circulation than any other country in the world except France, and there is no immediate prospect of any decrease."

That is a sensible and statesmanlike view of the subject, and the attempt to make him say otherwise is an outrage, but the republican newspapers seem willing to say and do anything to create discord in the democratic ranks.

NO PLACE FOR A RULER.

The Imperialistic Idea of a President Will Not Obtain in America.

In speaking of the president of the United States many newspapers and nearly all the preachers call him the ruler of the country. This is a great mistake. Under our democratic-republican form of government there can be no rulers, the officers elected are the servants of the people and not their ruler, or are we advanced so far towards imperialism that our officials have in a measure usurped power that the constitution does not give and assume to rule? Under our new colonial government in the Philippines the army is the ruler, though the farce is being enacted of a civil government and the governor general is a ruler with despotic power, which the military execute, the power being derived from the president. That is imperialism. Ruling other people in that way may accustom the people of the United States to a despotic form of government that in the end they may submit themselves to be ruled, but as long as grass grows and water runs there will be a democracy to resist such usurpation. We want no ruler in this country, we must have honest servants of the people to carry out the work, for the time for which they have been elected.

BRYAN TO ROOSEVELT.

Says the President Has Reached the Parting of the Ways and Must Choose His Road.

It will be remembered that Mr. Bryan expressly stated that if he was elected president he would not, under any circumstances be a candidate for a second term. He gave strong reasons for this and wishes to impress them on President Roosevelt. In the last issue of the Commoner he warns the president of the danger of striving for a second term. He begins by saying Mr. Roosevelt has reached the turning point in his political career, and his cherished ambition is reached. "That ever since his inauguration as vice president he has looked forward to 1904. All at once, as the result of an assassin's shot, he is ushered into the presidency. With what spirit will he enter upon the discharge of his duties? The answer to this question is of tremendous importance to him and to his country."

Mr. Bryan says there is a sentiment against second terms. He accuses Grover Cleveland of indorsing that sentiment, but later ignoring his pledge, and continues: "Mr. Roosevelt will find that there are many things that can be best accomplished by an executive officer who is under no temptation to use the patronage of his office to promote his own re-election. If he will announce his determination not to be a candidate for renomination he will be relieved of a great deal of embarrassment and anxiety, and he will find sufficient strenuous life in an effort to make his administration conspicuous for its honesty and efficiency. If he intends to appear before the next republican convention as a candidate he must prepare to fight the bosses of his party or surrender to them. He is aware of the fact that the republican organization did not look with favor upon his candidacy. President Roosevelt has reached the parting of the ways; which road will he take?"

IMPERIALISM'S PROFITS.

The Balance Is on the Wrong Side in the Investment in the Philippines.

As a commercial investment the Philippines are not proving a great success, the official figures showing that, of the total importations into the Philippines of goods valued at $18,000,000 during seven months ended January 31 last, Europe furnished $9,000,000, or one-half. Asia more than $7,000,000 and the United States less than $1,500,000.

Republican statesmen have continually assured the people of the United States that they were to get back from the Philippines through an immense and profitable trade a large dividend on the money they have cost and that the islands would be the best investment the country ever made. This has proven to be an erroneous calculation, as the official figures prove, for the profit on the $1,500,000 for the seven months cannot be more than 20 per cent., or $300,000 a year, and the interest at three per cent. on the $20,000,000 paid for the islands is more than that amount. So all the profit of those who export goods to the Philippines will pay nothing on the investment. When we come to figure on the annual outlay of the United States to pay for the increased army and navy that it is necessary to keep there, and with the prospect that this outlay will have to continue for an indefinite time, the outlook to the taxpayers of the United States is not encouraging to say the least.

As the republican party bases its claim for support on entirely commercial grounds on nearly every policy it advocates, from the tariff to imperialism, and as both the policies mentioned are financial failures, is it not about time that new men and new policies were inaugurated for the benefit of the taxpayers who are the whole people of the United States?

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

—That poor little drooling infant, the steamship trust, with its $150,000,000 capital, is still expecting its pap in the form of the ship subsidy bill, and Hanna and the other republican leaders are arranging to feed it with all that congress can be prevailed upon to donate.

—The news comes from London that a new treaty with Great Britain is ready for presentation which is the same as the old treaty, with the matter omitted objected to by the senate. It is to be hoped that truckling to England will not be the policy of the administration, but with John Hay still in the cabinet it is doubtful.

—The evidence in the Manila hemp army scandal case develops the loose way that business is done under the present management. Private cables were charged to the government, and the evident intention of high officials to use their position to the advantage of themselves or friends at the expense of the government does not put the imperial way of doing things in a favorable light.

—Hanna denies that he ever said he would never again talk for publication, and proves the falsity of the rumor by doing more or less talking. Among other things, he says that if Roosevelt continues McKinley's policy prosperity will last. Inasmuch as Mr. Hanna is generally supposed to have been one of Mr. McKinley's advisers in shaping the policy there is something like a compliment for himself hidden in his words somewhere.—Boston Herald.

The Poultry Yard

Millet is most valuable to feed youngchickens.

Usually pullets yarded with old hens are only half fed.

Oats form a good diet for hens that are too fat to lay.

If the hens are inclined to pull feathers feed a little salt pork.

Feed chickens well, a little at a time and do not let them stop growing.

Ground oyster shells are not as serviceable as pounded or broken shells.

There is really no excuse for keeping poor fowls when a good flock can be secured at so small an outlay.

Fifty mature fowls in a flock is sufficient and will yield more profit than a larger number kept together.

It will pay you to investigate the prices at ESKEW'S, Pharmacy, Walton, Ky.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1901. NO. 2.

VOTE next Tuesday.

The Chinese court will not return to Pekin for two years.

CZOLGOSZ took the electric route for that undiscovered country, yesterday.

The report that King Edward has cancer has finally been admitted by a London newspaper.

THE Ohio campaign is warming up a little, both parties having a considerable force of speakers in the field.

THE Copper Trust has shut down several of its big mines and plants in order to prevent overproduction and a fall in prices.

THE publishers of the Trimble County Democrat are threatening to enlarge their publication, and add another story to the price thereof.

NEXT Tuesday will be elected Representatives and Senators, who will have the choosing of United States Senator Deboe's successor.

It is a singular fact that not one of the long list of Presidents has been given a last resting place at the country's Capitol, though five of them died in office.

TAMMANY is in a very peculiar position—if its candidate for Mayor of New York City wins, it is claimed that it will be a defeat for those who nominated him. How?

NEXT Tuesday's election will decide who will be Senator Deboe's successor. He will be left out, no matter which party has a majority of the next General Assembly.

CAN it be that that Chicago stamp burglary was carried through by Pat Crowe in order to be sure to have postage enough to keep up his correspondence with the Omaha police?

Now it is said at the War Department that reinforcements must be sent to the Philippines. Will nobody tell the Tagalogs that the war is over? They must be as hard-headed as the Boers.

THE Boers have penetrated from their own states to the sea coast, fifty miles from Capetown and much over a thousand away from their homes. Yet the war there, like that in the Philippines "is over."

CALEB POWERS drew another life sentence at Georgetown, last week, for the part he is charged with having taken in the assassination of William Goebel. The case will go to the Court of Appeals again.

THE Tennessee Conference of the Methodist Church will probably recommend to the General Conference that the war-claim money secured by the Methodist Publishing House be returned to the Government of the U. S.

IF Mr. Powers could get rid of the testimony of his heretofore Republican friends and associates, who testify against him, he would have no trouble in securing an acquittal; but jurors seem disposed to think they are as truthful as he or those who testify for him.

So Buller has been practically dismissed. Two years ago, he was announcing that he would have his Christmas dinner in Pretoria and would show no mercy to the Boers, whom he would treat as rebels against their lawful sovereign. Moreover he demanded and received—as far as Britain could give it—a free hand in dealing with the situation. Truly, South Africa is the graveyard of military reputation.

Thirty persons are said to have been killed as the result of a race war at Balltown, in Madison parish, La., near the Mississippi line. Militia from both States has been put under orders, and the troops from Mississippi are already on the scene. The trouble began at a camp-meeting Sunday as the outgrowth of the lynching of a negro for criminal assault. Fourteen persons were killed Sunday and one was perhaps fatally wounded. Five hundred men at once armed and began a hunt for the negroes, many of whom fled across the Mississippi line.

NEXT Tuesday is the regular election, at which time the voters of this county will vote for a Circuit Judge, a County Representative in the next General Assembly, and a full ticket of county officers except Circuit Clerk. So far no effort has been made to create any interest in the election, the interest in politics having subsided completely after the result of the primary was announced. Not a candidate is, seemingly, making any effort, whatever, to induce the voters to turn out next Tuesday. This is, of course, due to the fact that a nomination by the Democratic party in this county is equivalent to an election. With both parties voting, the prevailing belief is there will be but few if any more votes polled next Tuesday than were cast at the primary election last spring. Even if the party nominees have not endeavored to create any enthusiasm on the part of the votes, each elector in the county should manifest enough interest in public affairs to go to the polls next Tuesday and place his X where he thinks it will do most good. The Democrats present a ticket that is entitled to the vote of every member of the party, and every Democrat should consider it a gross neglect of duty if he does not go to the polls next Tuesday and place an X in the circle under the rooster. Give the nominees a hearty endorsement.

Crop and Stock.

Do not feed fattening foods for egg production.

Fresh skim milk and a little bran is the best way to begin pig feeding.

A cross-bred mule cannot be relied upon to produce uniform offspring.

In a mixed lot of sheep the best suffer by being sold with the inferior.

The onion crop is not a full one, and conditions seem to favor comparatively high prices.

The best way to increase the appetite of a horse, if such a thing is necessary, is to change his diet frequently.

Don't raise colts from a cross grained, ill-tempered mare. She must be bright and intelligent, with a fine, bloodlike head.

Good crops of tobacco are reported from the cigar leaf districts of Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

There is probably no forage that comes into use earlier in the spring than winter rye and none that is better for hogs, sheep or calves.

The business of buying and matching carriage horses and fitting them for the wholesale market is a new and important branch of the horse business.

The best age to begin feeding poultry to fatten in good shape is as soon as they have reached maturity. Before this they will not fatten so well, or so rapidly.

Missouri entomologists strongly assert that moth catchers or lantern traps do more harm than good in orchards, as they catch more friends than enemies of the fruit grower.

Liming the soil intended for beets, preferably in the fall, the application of acid phosphate and Thomas slag with the seed and the treatment of the beet seed itself with fungicidal substances are suggested by the station for root blight and heart rot.

There is less objection to feeding an all corn ration to poultry if it is first ground into meal and then either scalded or baked with water or milk. If scalded it should be squeezed dry enough to crumble and if baked it should be crumbled before feeding. But better results can be obtained by using in connection with other materials, supplying a variety.

Tot Causes Night Alarm.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with Croup," writes Mrs. J. C. Snider, of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr. King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from Croup and Whooping Cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for Coughs, Colds, Throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim's Burlington; Union Drug Store Union; J. G. Oelsner Florence; H. L. Eskew of Walton; O. N. Grant Bellevue.

Atty. J. G. Tomlin, of Walton, is in receipt of word from Bellcville, Texas, that the Boone county claimants of the estate of W. P. Wilson have won in the first court. Proof has been taken at Portsmouth, Ohio; Union, and Walton, Ky., and Texarkana, Texas, by Mr. Tomlin. M. P. Wilson taught school at Union, this county in 1845 and 1846. In the latter year he married Miss Frances M. Stansifer, daughter of Abram Stansifer, and moved with his wife to Michigan, where they lived until in 1849, when they separated. In 1848 a girl, Hattie E. Wilson, was born to them, who married C. W. Herndon, of Kenton county. She died in 1892, and left surviving her five children, to-wit: Anna E. Tomlin, Carrie F. Adams, Sallie Herndon, Robert Herndon and Mollie Herndon, all of whom reside at Walton.

After the separation, M. P. Wilson was Superintendent of the Portsmouth, Ohio, public school in 1849 and 1850. He went from there to Chappel Hill, Texas, and became the head of a college, where he remained for 15 years. In all the places where he taught he made a good record as a teacher and a scholar. After he quit teaching in 1872, he lived on his 250 acre farm in the Brazo bottoms, where he died in 1887. He had not been heard of for 50 years by anyone in Kentucky.

There has been great difficulty in establishing the identity of the M. P. Wilson in Kentucky as the M. P. Wilson in Texas. This has been done mainly by comparison of handwriting, and by comparison of his size, complexion, traits and habits by testimony of persons who knew him in Kentucky in 1846, and old citizens who knew him at an early day in Texas. Among those who gave depositions in this county are J. W. Duncan, Circuit Clerk, Dr. H. C. Lassing and L. W. Lassing, all of whom have been complimented by the court in Texas, particularly L. W. Lassing, whose deposition, considering the great lapse of time, was remarkably clear and correct.

The Texan claimanant, who is a sister in-law by his Texas marriage, has been unable to show a single inaccuracy in L. W. Lassin'gs deposition. The value of the estate is $5,000.

Another Old Citizen Gone.

In the death of Moses S. Rice, which occurred on the morning of the 23rd inst., this county loses one of her oldest and best citizens, a man who through his long life, enjoyed, and was entitled to, the fullest confidence of everybody with whom he was acquainted. Mr. Rice was born in this county on March 17, 1817 and was, therefore in his 85th year at the time of his death. He was a son of William and Margaret Rice, and one of a family of four sons and four daughters, all of whom are now dead.

The funeral sermon was preached Friday at 2 p. m., by Rev. J. A. Kirtley at the Baptist church, in the presence of quite a number of friends who assembled to pay respects to the deceased. In his discourse Mr. Kirtley spoke most feelingly of the deceased, with whom he had been associated from early manhood, and with whose character and christian faith he had had ample opportunity to become acquainted, although they were members of different churches, Mr. Rice being a member of the Christian church.

The pall bearers were W. T. Smith, Dr. J. F. Smith, F. Riddell, J. W. Duncan, A. O. Hall, G. G. Hughes.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

One of the hardest contested cases tried at the present term was the case of Noah Lightner and his wife against the C. N. O. & T. P. Railroad Company. The suit asked for $2,500 damages on account of Mrs. Lightner being thrown from a buggy at the crossing south of Crittenden on last Christmas evening. The horse the Lightners were driving scared at the gasoline motor car that was being driven along at a low rate of speed by a party of railroad officials. The Jury found a verdict for the railroad Company, something that is not often done by country juries.

If one has a good strain of corn it certainly pays to save seed from the last crop. It goes without saying that the ears selected should be the best of the type, not always as to size of ear, but regularity of rows, size of kernals and general form. These selected ears should be stored somewhere so that the rats and mice will get as little of it as possible. If one has considerable barn room and not many bushel of seed corn to save it is a good plan to erect a swing shelf from the rafters, making the shelf of wire netting or slats, with the sides only high enough to keep the corn from falling out. This will allow a free circulation of air through the heap, and vermin are not likely to reach it. During the latter part of winter a kernel or two should be taken from each of fifty or more ears and tested in a pan of soil set in the kitchen. Such tests should show from 85 to 90 per cent of well-germinated seeds. If seed corn can be selected and stored in some such manner it pays to do it; otherwise it will be more profitable to buy new seed in the spring for some reliable source.

Fall Tree Planting.

At the meeting of the Iowa Horticultural Society last year the question of fall-planting of orchards was discussed pretty thoroughly, and it was stated by one of the speakers that it is entirely an error to recommend fall-planting as many do, and especially in the more northern sections of Iowa, which conditions would also apply to other sections of the same latitude. The speaker claimed that the climate of northern Iowa was so dry and solid that is it only in an occasional year that fall planting will succeed satisfactory. If the practice of fall planting is adopted it will result only in failure in the large majority of cases, but, the speaker said, if you must and will plant in autumn, lean your trees in setting well to the south by southwest. After setting bank up around the tree a wide mound 18 to 20 inches high, then cover with a heavy coat of stable manure. This prevents freezing until late, and when it does freeze will keep frozen until spring opens, when everything should be removed from around the tree to the bottom level. The criticism will be that this means hard labor and plenty of it, but it is preferable to dead trees. The speaker's advice was not to get trees in the fall, but should you do so, do not plant them then, but rather dig in a high place, a trench three feet deep and three or four feet wide, and as long as may be needed, depending upon the number of trees to be buried. One end of the trench should be a slope of about 45 degrees, upon which commence laying your trees, with roots down on bottom of the trench, and the tops will reach but little above the original level. Make the layer thin enough that you may pack plenty of earth between the roots. Commence with another layer, treating in the same manner until all are in; then mound up the earth over the whole, leaving ditches, not too near, around the outside for draining off the surface water. The speaker found that this method was the best one for "fall planting. —Prairie Farmer.

STRANGE INFLUENCES

We Are Often Affected by Forces We Seldom Recognize.

In this discourse Dr. Talmage demonstrates that we are affected by forces that we seldom recognize and enlarges upon human accountability; the text is Job 38:31: "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?"

What is the meaning of that question that God put to Job? Have we all our lives been reading it and are most of us ignorant of its beauty and power and practical suggestiveness? A meaningless passage of Scripture many thought it to be. But the telescopes were busy age after age and astronomical observations kept on questioning the skies until the meaning of my text comes out lustrously. The Pleiades is a constellation of seven stars appearing to the naked eye, but scientific instruments reveal more than 400 properly belonging to the group. Alcyone is the name of the brightest star of that group called the Pleiades. A Russian astronomer observed that Alcyone is the center of gravitation of our solar system. Hugh Macmillan says that the sun and its planets wheel around that center at the rate of 422,000 miles a day in an orbit which it will take 19,000,000 years to complete. The Pleiades appear in the springtime and are associated with flowers and genial warmth and good weather. The nativity of the Mediterranean was from May to November—the rising and the setting of the Pleiades. The priests of Belus noticed that rising and setting 2,000 years before Christ.

Now, the glorious meaning of my text is plain as well as radiant. To give Job the beautiful grace of humility God asked him: "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of the Pleiades?" Have you any power over the laws of gravitation? Can you modify or change an influence wielded by a star more than 400,000 miles away? Can you control the winds of the springtime? Can you call out the flowers? How little you know compared with omniscience! How little you can do compared with Omnipotence!

The probability is that Job had been tempted to arrogance by his vast attainments. He was a metallurgist, a zoologist, a poet, and shows by his writings he had knowledge of hunting, of music, of husbandry, of medicine, of mining, of astronomy, and perhaps was so far ahead of the scholars and scientists of his time that he may have been somewhat puffed up; hence this interrogation of my text. And there is nothing that so soon takes down human pride as an interrogation point rightly thrust. Christ used it mightily. Paul mounted the parapet of his great arguments with such a battery. Men of the world understand it. Demosthenes began his speech on the crown and Cicero his oration against Catiline and Lord Chatham his most famous orations with a question. The empire of ignorance is so much vaster than the empire of knowledge that after the most learned and elaborate disquisition upon any subject of sociology or theology the plainest man may ask a question that will make the wisest speechless. After the profoundest assault upon Christianity the humblest disciple may make an inquiry that would silence a Voltaire.

Called upon, as we all are at times, to defend our holy religion, instead of argument that can always be answered by argument let us try the power of interrogation. We ought to be loaded with at least half a dozen questions and always ready, and when Christianity is assailed and we are told there is nothing in it, and there is no God, and there never was a miracle, and that the Scriptures are unreasonable and cruel, and that there never will be a judgment day, take out of your portable armory of interrogation something like this: What makes the condition of women in Christian lands better than in heathen lands? Do you think it would be kind in God to turn the human race into a world without any written revelation to explain and encourage and elevate and save? And if a revelation was made, which do you prefer, the Zenda-Vesta of the Persian or the Confucian writings of the Chinese or the Koran of Mohammed or our Bible? If Christ is not a Divine being, what did He mean when He said: "Before Abram was I am?" If the Bible is a bad book, where are the evil results of reading it? Did you see any degrading influence of the book in your father or mother or sister, who used to read it? Do you not think that a judgment day is necessary in order to explain and fix up things that were never explained or fixed up? If our religion is illogical and an imposition upon human credulity, why were Herschel and Washington and Gladstone and William McKinley its advocates? How did it happen that our religion furnished the theme for the greatest poem ever written, "Paradise Lost," and to the painters their greatest themes in the "Adoration of the Magi," "The Transfiguration," "The Last Supper," "The Crucifixion, "The Entombment," "The Last Judgment," and that all the schools of painting put forth their utmost genius in presenting "The Madonna?"

Why was it that William Shakespeare, after amazing the world as he will amaze all centuries with the splendor and power of "The Merchant of Venice," and "Coriolanus," and "Richard III.," and "King Lear," and "Othello," and "Macbeth," and "Hamlet," wrote with his own hand his last will and testament, beginning it with the words: "In the name of God, amen, I, William Shakespeare, of Stratford-on-Avon, in the county of Warwick, in perfect health and memory, God be praised, do make and ordain this my last will and testament through the only merits of Jesus Christ, my Saviour, to be made partaker of life everlasting and my body to the earth whereof it is made?" Had Shakespeare lost his reason when he wrote his faith in Christ and the great atonement? Put your antagonist a few questions like that, and you will find him excusing himself for an engagement he must meet immediately or he will start on a retreat like that which our northern troops made for yonder Long bridge after the battle of Manassas. A discourse on God's omnipotence and man's limitations would not have had such an effect upon Job as the interrogation of the text: "Canst thou bind the sweet influence of the Pleiades?"

These words also recognize far-reaching influences. Job probably had no adequate idea of the distance of the worlds mentioned from our world, but he knew them to be far off, and we, who have the advantage of modern sidereal investigation, ought to be still more impressed than was Job with the question of the text, as it puts before us the fact that worlds hundreds of thousands of miles distant have a grip on our world. There are sweet influences which hold us from afar. There may have been in our ancestral line perhaps 200 years ago some consecrated man or woman who has held over all the generations since an influence for good which we have no power to realize, and we in turn, by our virtue or vice, may influence those who shall live 200 years from now. Moral gravitation is as powerful as material gravitation, and if, as my text teaches and science confirms, the Pleiades, which are millions of miles from our earth, influence the earth we ought to be impressed with how we may be influenced by others far away back and how we may influence others far down the future. That roll away up among the Alleghanies, so thin you think it will hardly find its way down the rocks, becomes the mighty Ohio rolling into the Mississippi and rolling into the sea. That word you utter, that deed you do, may augment itself as the years go by until rivers cease to roll and the ocean itself shall be dried up in the burning of the world. Paul, who was all the time saying important things, said nothing more startlingly suggestive than when he declared: "None of us liveth or dieth to himself." Words, thoughts, actions, have an eternity of flight. As Job could not bind the sweet influences of the Seven Stars, as they were called, so we cannot arrest or turn aside the good projected long ago. Those influences were started centuries before our cradle was rocked and will reign centuries after our graves are dug. Oh, it is a tremendous thing to live! God help us to live aright.

Astronomers can easily locate the Pleiades. They will take you into their observatories on a clear night and aim their revealing instrument toward the part in the heavens where those seven stars have their habitude, and they will point to the constellation Taurus, and you can see for yourself. But it is impossible to point to influences far back that have affected our character and will affect our destiny. We know the influences near by—paternal, maternal, conjugal—but by the time we have gone back two generations or at most three our investigations falter and fail. Through the modern interesting habit of searching back to find the ancestral tree we may find a long list of names, but they are only names. The consecration or abandonment of some one 200 years ago was not recorded. It would not be so important if you and I by our good or bad behavior blessed or blasted only those immediately around us, but our goodness or our badness will reach as far as the strongest rays of Alcyone — yea, across the eternities. Under this consideration what do you think of those who give themselves up to frivolity or idleness and throw away 50 years of their existence as though they were shells or pebbles or pods instead of embryo eternities?

Notice also in my text the influence of other worlds upon this world. We all regard the effect which our continent has upon other continents or one hemisphere upon the other hemisphere. Great harvest or drought affects the other side of our world. A panic in Wall street, New York, has its echo in Lombard street and the bourse. The nations of the earth cablegrammed together all feel the same thrill of delight or shock of woe. But we do not appreciate the influence of other worlds upon our world. The author of my text rouses us to the consideration. It takes all the worlds of known and unknown astronomy to keep our world in its orbit, every world dependent on other worlds. The stellar existence is felt all through the heavens. Every constellation is a sisterhood. Our planet feels the benediction of Alcyone and all the other stars of the Pleiades. Yea, there are two other worlds that decide the fate of our world, its redemption or its demolition. Those two worlds are the headquarters of angelology and demonology. From the one world came Christ, come ministering spirits, come all gracious influences. From the other world rise all satanic and diabolic influences. From that world of moral right rose the power that wrecked our poor world 6,000 years ago, and all the good work done since then has not been able to get our world out of the breakers. But the signals of distress have been hoisted and the life lines are out, and our world's release is certain. The good influences of the consecrated people in our world will be centupled by the help from the heavenly world, and the Divine power will overcome the demoniac. O man, O woman, expand your idea and know the magnitude of a contest in which three worlds are specially interested. From all the seven worlds which my text calls the Pleiades there come no such powerful influences as from the two worlds that I am now mentioning. My only hope for this world is in the reenforcement that is to come from another world. But that is promised, and so I feel as sure of the ratification of all evil as though looking out of my window to-day I saw the parks and the gardens flowering into another paradise and the apocalyptic angel flying through the midst of Heaven with the news that the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord.

My text called Job and calls us to consider "the sweet influences." We put too much emphasis upon the acidities of life, upon the irritations of life, upon the disappointments of life. Ammianus Marcellinus said that Chaldea was in olden times overrun with lions, but many of them lost their power because the great swamps produced many gnats that would get into the eyes of the lions, and the lions to free themselves of the gnats would claw their own eyes out and then starve. And in our time many a lion has been overcome by a gnat. The little stinging annoyances of life keep us from appreciating the sweet influences. And how many of these last there are! Sweet influences of home, however plain it may be! That is the harbor into which we sail. That is the goal for which we run. That is the place where we rest. There abide all confidence and affections. There we lay our plans. There we extend our sympathies. There we talk over our successes. There we unload our griefs. Its four walls shut out a prying and inquisitive world. Thank God for the home in which we were born, the home in which we now live, the home in which we expect to die!

Not sufficiently do we recognize the sweet influences of the wife. We men are of a rougher mold, and our voice is loud, and our manners need to be tamed, and gentleness is not as much of a characteristic as it ought to be, and we often say things we ought to take back. It is to change this that the good wife comes in. The interests of the twain are identical. That which from outsiders would be considered criticism and to be resented becomes kindly suggestion, sweet influences that make us better men than we otherwise would have been or could have been.

The sweet influences of the heavenly world, which many wise men thought for a long while was Alcyone, the center of the constellation of the Pleiades, world of our future residence, as we hope; world of chorus and illumination, world of reunion, world where we shall be everlastingly complete, world where our old faculties will be intensified and quickened and new faculties implanted, world of high association with Christ, through whose grace we got there at all, and apostles and poets—Habakkuk and St. John, of Patmos, and Edward Young, his "Night Thoughts" turned into eternal day; and Horatius Bonar, of modern hymnology; and Hannah More, and Mrs. Hemans and Mrs. Sigourney, who struck their harps till nations listened; and David, the victor over Goliath with what seemed insufficient weapons; and Joshua, of the prolonged day in Gibeon; and Havelock, the evangelist hero, and those thousands of men of the sword who fought on the right side. What company to move in. What guests to entertain! What personages to visit! What choirs to chant! What banquets with lifted chalices filled with "the new wine of the kingdom!" What victories to celebrate!

The stories of that world and its holy hilarities come in upon our soul sometimes in song, sometimes in sermon, sometimes in hours of solitary reflection, and they are, to use the words of my text, sweet influences. But there is one star that affects us more with its sweet influence than the center star, the Alcyone of the Pleiades, and that is what one Bible author calls the Star of Bethlehem and another Bible author calls the Morning Star.

Sweet influences of the Holy Ghost, with all His transforming and comfortingand emancipating power! When that power is fully felt, there will be no more sins to pardon and no more wrongs to correct and no more sorrows to comfort and no more bondage to break. But as the old-time ship captains watched the rising of the Pleiades for safe navigation and set sail in Mediterranean waters, but were sure to get back into port before the constellation Orion came into sight, the season of cyclone and hurricane, so there is a time to sail for Heaven, and that is while the sweet influences are upon us and before the storms overtake the delay. Open all your soul to the light and warmth and comfort and inspiration of that Gospel which has already peopled Heaven with millions of the ransomed and is helping millions to that glorious destination. Do not postpone the things of God and eternity till the storms of life swoop and the agitations of a great future are upon us. Do not dare wait until Orion takes the place of the Pleiades. Weigh anchor now and with chart unrolled and pilot on board head for the reunions and raptures that await all the souls forgiven. "And they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

LUCKY AND UNLUCKY FALLS.

The Distance Is Often of Less Importance Than the Way of Alighting.

"There is something rather curious to me about the distances that men may fall without getting hurt," observed a New Orleans contractor, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but it is not always the case that a drunken man can fall further than other men without getting bruised up or killed. In my own experience in construction work I have observed a few instances where perfectly sober men have fallen great distances without getting hurt. Of course, as a general thing a man whose muscles are thoroughly relaxed on account of the influence of liquor is less liable to injury than the sober man, who will make all kinds of efforts to catch himself, and who will in this way endanger his limbs by making them rigid and stiff.

"But I recall the case of a man who was working on a building with me several years ago, and at the time he was engaged on the fifth story. He was working in one of the windows in the side of the building. In some way he lost his balance and went head over heels down the side of the building toward the sidewalk. The sight made me sick and I was actually afraid to look on the sidewalk below, because I felt certain that my friend had been mashed into a pulp by the long fall. We got down to the ground as soon as possible. I was surprised when I failed to see my friend. He had not stopped on the sidewalk, but went crashing into the cellar. I rushed into the cellar, and you can imagine the surprise I felt when I met my friend with a smile on his face and making his way to the short dumpy steps that led up out of the cellar. I asked him if he was not hurt, and he replied that the fall jolted him a little and that his blood chilled somewhat while he was going through the air but he was not hurt. He had struck an iron grate that worked rather easily on its hinges, and this apparatus allowed him to slide with ease into the basement, and it was this simple device that saved his life. He was perfectly sober at the time, too.

"But now mark what happened to another friend of mine while he was under the influence of whisky. He was not drunk, but he was in that condition called comfortably full. He was walking along a sidewalk that was as smooth and even as any I ever saw. For some unaccountable reason he fell. His head hit first, and it struck in a way that threw him over on his back. The turn was sudden, spasmodic and seemed to have been caused by a muscular relaxation. He never regained consciousness. His skull was fractured badly, and he died in a few hours. These things go to show that it is not so much a question of how far a man falls. How a fellow hits seems to be far more important than the matter of distance."

The fishing schooner Squantum, Capt. William Parslow, just in from the Grand Banks of Newfoundland with cod, brings a strange story, says a Lemoine (Me.) correspondent of the Boston Journal.

Capt. David Parslow, of this port, an ex-whaler, brother of the skipper of the Squantum and principal owner, was inspecting the craft after her arrival and in the forecastle detected the odor of that precious product of the sea, ambergris. He traced the odor to a pair of sea boots belonging to one of the crew, and upon diligent inquiry evolved the fact that without doubt at one time on the Squantum's last trip a mass of ambergris worth at least $5,000 was alongside the little old schooner and was allowed to go adrift because the crew were ignorant of its value, and, furthermore, that a "sample" that had been saved, and that was worth at least $100, had been used as a lubricant for the boots of one of the crew.

James Perkins, first hand and head splitter of the Squantum, tells the following story:

"One night on the Virgin rocks Bill Jason, who was up in the bow, sung out that there was something drifting down on us. We thought first it was a dead body or something, but when it came alongside we see that it was a junk of something as big as a bait cask or bigger—looked like tallow, only it was a dark grayish color, mottled with white in streaks. It had a powerful smell—sickish, sweetlike.

"We had a line round it and set out to call the skipper, but he was snoozin' and we thought it wasn't best to get him riled up about nothing, and so, after Oliver Eaton had cut out a junk, we let the stuff go adrift again.

"Oliver made an awful smell with the stuff a-greasin' his boots in the fo'castle and we made him move them out. Oliver said it wasn't very good grease anyway—wouldn't give a pint of neat's foot oil for a ton of the stuff."

Curiosity Satisfied.

An old colored woman was "taking on" yesterday afternoon over the death of her baby as she was going from church to the hack. A white woman who knew her happened to be passing and said, sympathetically: "Which one of your children is dead, Aunt Eliza?"

"The one in the hearse," moaned the negress.—Atchison Globe.

MADE A MISTAKE.

Section Hand Held Up a Labor Agitator Who Thought He Was a Non-Union Miner.

Earlington, Ky., Oct. 25.—A section hand named Gossett was held up at the Nortonville station by a known labor agitator of the United Mine Workers and four other union men, who supposed Gossett was going to a Hopkins county mine to work. Onlookers thought Gossett would be robbed, as the union men tried to make him go into the woods with them. The men went through Gossett's pockets and took a pistol from him. Some one happened along who vouched for Gossett, and he was released.

Thursday morning two guards from Oak Hill had been to Nortonville and were walking back along the railroad when two young men armed with Winchesters stepped from the bushes and ordered the guards to surrender their guns. Although covered with the Winchesters, one of the guards took a handkerchief from his coat pocket, saying that was all the gun he had and that if the fellows wanted anything else they would have to come on and get it. The highwaymen seemed to be novices, and after demanding three times that the guards give up their pocket guns and getting no further satisfaction, they ordered them to go home and not to come that way again. They then disappeared in the bushes and the guards proceeded to Oak Hill. The union men are still camping around Nortonville in considerable numbers.

A Big Draft Cashed By the Exchange Bank of Kentucky—"Joe Jones" Is Missing.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Oct. 24.—The Exchange bank of Kentucky Saturday last received a draft through the mail on a New York bank from a person at Olympia, Ky., representing himself to be Joe Jones, requesting the bank to express the money to Olympia. The draft called for $1,750. The bank, knowing Joe Jones to be a responsible lumberman, working for the firm of McCormick, Lyons & Co., this place, at once sent the money by express.

"Joe Jones" took the postmaster to the express office to identify him as the man mailing the draft the day before, squared himself with the express agent, and received the money. Sunday "Joaes" was not seen. Monday the bank received notice from New York that the draft was a forgery. "Jones" has not been found.

Scott claims Monroe got the mail, but admits doing the writing and being a partner. The inspector thinks Monroe a myth. An extensive correspondence was carried on and considerable money secured. The scheme has been in operation for months.

DECISION RENDERED.

Railway Companies Can Not Be Indicted—Commission Must Investigate Violations.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 26.—A decision of much importance to railroad interests in Kentucky was rendered at Friday's session of the court of appeals. It is that a grand jury can not indict a railroad company for violation of the long and short haul clause of the constitution and statutes unless the state railroad commission has first investigated the complaint and refused to grant the railroad company the right to so charge.

It was handed down in the case of the Illinois Central Railroad Co. against the commonwealth, appealed from the Hardin county circuit court. Chief Justice Paynter and Justices White and Guffy, three of the seven members of the court, dissented from the opinion.

OVER NIAGARA FALLS.

A Woman Accomplished a Feat Never Before Attempted.

Mrs. Taylor's Trip Covered a Mile Ride Through the Canadian Rapids Before She Reached the Brink of the Precipice.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Mrs. Annie Edson Taylor, 50 years old, went over Niagara falls on the Canadian side Thursday afternoon and survived, a feat never before accomplished, and never attempted, except in the deliberate commission of suicide. She made the trip in a barrel. Not only did she survive, but escaped without a broken bone, her only apparent injury being a scalp wound one and one-half inches long, a slight concussion of the brain, some shock to her nervous system and bruises about the body. She was conscious when taken out of the barrel. The doctors in attendance upon her Thursday night said that though she was somewhat hysterical, her condition is not at all serious, and that she probably will be out of bed within a few days.

Mrs. Taylor's trip covered a mile ride through the Canadian rapids before she reached the brink of the precipice. Her barrel, staunch as a barrel could be made, was twirled and buffetted through those delirious waters, but escaped serious contact with rocks. As it passed through the smoother, swifter waters that rushed over the abyss, it rode in an almost perpendicular position, with its upper half out of the water.

As it passed over the brink it rode at an angle of about 45 degrees on the outer surface of the deluge and descended gracefully to the white foaming waters, 158 feet below the brink.

Due to her calculations, the anvil fastened to the bottom of the barrel kept it foot downward, and so it landed. Had it turned over and landed on its head, Mrs. Taylor's head must have been crushed in and her neck broken.

The barrel in which Mrs. Taylor made the journey is 4½ feet high and about 3 feet in diameter. A leather harness and cushions inside protected her body. Air was secured through a rubber tube connected with a small opening near the top of the barrel.

Mrs. Taylor is a school teacher and recently came here from Bay City, Mich.

As a result 400 tons of Kruppized armor will be accepted by the government.

He made the new record in the very first trial. The time by quarters: 32¾, 1:04½, 1:36½, 2:09¼.

MEANING OF IMPERIALISM.

Ruthless Rule by Military Power Worse Than Weylerism or Kitchenerism.

Imperialism is still to be kept to the front as an issue and the unhappy Filipinos are to feel the full burden of it. Imperialism means the ruthless rule of the military, without the rules of civilized warfare, and yet the Filipinos are not savages; they have murdered no prisoners, they have slain no women or children. They have inflicted no tortures, nor have they outraged wives and daughters, and yet the edict has gone forth that they are to be ruthlessly killed.

Worse than Weylerism, worse than Kitchenerism, is to be the new policy in the Philippines as a result of the recent disaster to the invading troops in Samar, says the Johnson Democrat. "These things must stop," said the strenuous president, with a snap of his militant jaws. And forthwith he ordered Gen. Chaffee at Manila to "use all adequate measures to suppress the insurgents in Samar and all other provinces where they become active."

What these "adequate measures" are to be is hinted at strongly in Washington dispatches. They mean death to the Filipinos—a war of literal extermination. From one press dispatch we learn what the programme is likely to be.

Gen. Corbin, in discussing the Balangiga affair, said the Filipinos were much like the American Indians and that their complete subjection would be delayed for an indefinite period of time. Those who are given to reading between the lines of official utterances see in this statement evidences that the natives are to be treated by the American forces just as were the redskins here.

It will be recalled that Indian uprisings were followed by swift and terrible punishment and one of Custer's exploits wherein every soul of the tribe, down to the very papooses, was put to the sword, remains to this day an unwritten page of American history. Something akin to this terrible visitation is believed to await the revolting inhabitants of Samar.

"Every male native within miles of the scene of the attack should be killed ruthlessly," explained an officer just returning from the Philippines, "and their homes destroyed."

"Although the American public is not aware of it," he added, "somewhat similar methods have been employed in several of the new much-heralded pacified districts."

This is a pleasant programme. It accords well with our benevolent professions. And it ought to appeal powerfully to those lynching ministers and mob-inspiring pulpit patriots, who have lately been so much in evidence. Certainly their spirits should rise in response to so fine a prospect as that suggested by the "officer just returned from the Philippines."

Yet what have these Filipinos done? In the first place, they fell upon a company of soldiers, killed them in a desperate fight in which they lost 140 against the American loss of 40 to 50. It was a surprise, but not a greater one than many another of which the Filipinos were themselves the victims. It was all in the way of war. The Americans were out hunting for little brown men whom they intended to kill if they could. It happened the little brown men saw them first. But their slaughter of the invading force is now accounted a savage crime and it is to be punished in a savage way by savagery as bad as the red Indian ever conceived.

"Adequate measures" are ordered from the white house. And those around the capital and in touch with army purposes understand that this phrase means, what it meant when it was applied to the Indians—where "every soul in the tribe, down to the very papooses, was put to the sword."

And yet the dead president almost with his latest breath gave utterance to this lofty sentiment: "Let us ever remember that our interest is in concord, not conflict, and that our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war."

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——From the present outlook in the Philippines we may expect a call for more troops and more money. Imperialism comes high if we must have it.

——England and Germany are getting away with us in our trade with Cuba, exports of textile goods having declined 15 per cent. Is it tariff or animosity that is beating us on what we have been considering as our own ground?

——Purchasing bonds when a surplus has been unexpectedly piled up in the treasury is justifiable, but to pursue a policy of high taxation on purpose to thus favor the bondholders and the Wall street gamblers is highway robbery of the taxpayers.

——Never at any time has the business man been willing to subordinate his judgment to partisanship. He is as fully convinced as are many of his fellows in his party that protection, as it is made lawful by the Dingley bill, is no longer necessary. He is convinced further that in respect to many articles now on the tariff list it is positively detrimental to the country and to its commercial prospects.—Minneapolis Times.

——The Wall street gamblers are afraid of the future, according to the press reports, and the boom in stocks is over. The next thing to look for will be a reaction from high prices in necessities and the reduction of wages, or the trusts will have no money to pay dividends on their watered stocks. Morgan & Co. must be carrying a pretty heavy load by this time if the reports are true of the amount of trust stocks that has been unloaded on the syndicate.

PRICES AND TARIFF REFORM.

How a Readjustment Should Be Made in the Interest of Home Consumers.

We have the authority of Mr. Hanna that the protective tariff is too scientifically adjusted to be meddled with. Mr. Hanna not being considered an authority on the tariff, this information would not be valuable had he not been boss of the republican party. So far all that Mr. Hanna has said about congressional legislation has been attempted if not accomplished, so that we are forced to believe that it is not intended to attempt any tariff reform, however much needed.

There is no doubt that Mr. Hanna is technically right in his estimate of the way the tariff has been adjusted, and yet the way the present tariff was built was very simple. Each manufacturing or producing interest, except the ordinary farmers and planters, was invited to come before the republican members of the ways and means committee with a schedule that would protect its particular industry, and the whole were then arranged under the same schedule as the McKinley tariff had been. Of course there were some who wanted more protection than was given them, the rate being adjusted to suit the general scheme. The wool growers wanted a prohibitive tariff, but their interests clashed with the carpet and woolen manufacturers who wanted free raw material, and here was where the scientific adjustment came into play. It was so with some other interests.

The proposed reform of placing on the free list those trust productions that the trusts are selling abroad at a lower price than they are selling them at home, would probably not affect the revenues, for but few, if any, importations are made under the present tariff rate, and if the foreigners attempt to import when the duty is removed, there will be no revenue produced, for there is hardly much likelihood of the trusts allowing any importations, as they will bring down their price to the level where it would be unprofitable for the foreigner to attempt to compete. The result, therefore, would be that the price of trust articles would be reduced to consumers just low enough to prevent foreign competition and this would be the present price less the tariff rate, about 45 per cent. All these trust-made articles would be reduced in price, which would about equal the foreign price with the freight and profit added.

This should not much interfere with business, except the trust monopolies, and the time for the change from the high tariff to free trade in these trusts articles could be set far enough ahead to allow the jobbers and retailers to get rid of their stocks in anticipation of the lower prices that would prevail. There is nothing scientific or mysterious about this proposed tariff reform and there is no reason why it should not be adopted except that the trusts would kick vigorously and threaten to reduce wages and otherwise make all the trouble possible. But give them a little time and they would adjust their business to the lower level.

This is not ideal tariff reform, for there are many other inequalities that require adjusting almost as much as the trust monopolies, but it would do for a beginning and a tariff for revenue only with high rates on luxuries and low rates on necessities, which is the democratic doctrine, will follow when the people demand it.

FACTION CONTRGL.

President Roosevelt Has Got His Work Cut Out for Him to Keep Peace.

After a national election the committee of either party as far as the active operation of politics are dead except to meet and call the next national convention. The chairman of the successful party has generally had considerable to say about the disposition of the patronage, and for this reason Mr. Hanna has been especially distinguished. By the death of President McKinley Mr. Hanna as a dispensor of patronage will cease to exist. It is quite possible that if he cannot agree with his brother senator from Ohio he may not be able to even dictate the Ohio appointments. His open opposition to President Roosevelt when three-fourths of his party were calling for his nomination as vice president cannot but have left a feeling of noncompatibility between them. So Hanna will be looked upon as a dead duck instead of a dictator.

There are other senators who will be somewhat in the same fix, such as Platt, of New York; then there are others who have been nursing presidential booms, such as Fairbanks and Spooner, which will have to be postponed to a more convenient season or perhaps like other ambitions laid away for ever. That President Roosevelt will demand another term, as an indorsement of whatever policy he may eventually decide upon, is certain, and unless a powerful senatorial cabal is brought about to nominate a more subservient candidate, he will be nominated without opposition. From present appearances President Roosevelt intends to placate all the factions in his party, but he lacks the patience and diplomacy of his predecessor, without which entire unanimity is rarely accomplished. He will also have to throw overboard many cherished notions, such as civil service reform, control of the trusts and reform of the tariff, all of which the great majority of the leaders of his party are absolutely opposed to.

So there may be peace amongst the factions of the republican party, but there are many events that will happen before the spring of 1904 that may develop the most intense rivalry and excitement.

OLDEST DOLL IN AMERICA.

"Georgia," Owned by Mrs. Lincoln, of Chelsea, Massachusetts, Has Existed in Three Centuries.

The oldest doll, as far as known, in any part of this country is "Georgia," the property of Mrs. Alice L. Lincoln, of Chelsea, Mass.

"Georgia," being over a hundred years old, can well boast of having "lived" in three centuries. Four generations of children have petted and beaten her by turns, and, although her smiling countenance bears many a mark of "the whips and scorns of time," and her shapely brown head, with an occasional ugly dent, would seem to indicate that the skull might easily stand a little trepanning, nevertheless this children's idol of bygone days is in a remarkable state of preservation.

"Georgia" was originally a "southern lassie" and was raised in Milledgeville, Ga., "befo' de wah." She was given to Mrs. Lincoln's mother, in exchange for a ring, by Miss Weekes, an old schoolmate.

The latter's mother had previously paraded the doll in the doll carriage of her times, and perhaps if Georgia could only use the artificial tongue with which she is provided her previous family history might prove her rightful eligibility to the Society of Colonial Dames.

A Hoard of Shinplasters.

A rather unusual and unique deposit was made at the Lynnville bank recently. Aunt Betsy White, an old negro woman, brought a large roll of "shinplasters," amounting to $9.85 in 50, 25 and 10-cent pieces. The paper bills show they have been handled with care, despite the fact that the old woman claims to have had them in her possession since 1863.

Big Money in Potatoes.

It is estimated that one county on the eastern shore of Virginia, containing a population of about 13,000, sold this year 550,000 barrels of Irish potatoes at a profit of $1,000,000, which means that every man, woman and child in the county would be entitled to receive, if the money were distributed pro rata, something more than $70 from one crop alone.
